What You Will Find Inside the Crusader Codex

In a campaign set against the backdrop of a massive demonic incursion into the mortal world, heroes of the crusade must rise up to stem the tide of chaos and evil, even as mortals and immortals alike in serve to the Abyss ally with the demon hordes to bring doom and ruin. The howling hosts of demonkind are a merciless foe, veering haphazardly between heedless destruction and insidious infiltration, and standing against them is a perilous pursuit, as their servants and sympathizers may lurk in the shadows of places once thought safe. At the same time, demons can be incautious and less than thorough in exterminating their enemies, and their wanton predations garner enemies even amongst other elder evils, allowing careful heroes to find allies and assistance even in the heart of territory the demonic armies might consider theirs.

The Crusader Codex brings you over 20 fantastic stat blocks for friends and foes alike, ranging from CR 1 to CR 20, incorporating mortals and immortals in service to law and chaos, good and evil. You will find holy priests and tainted tieflings alongside stealthy demon-slayers and blighted druids of the wounded lands, from twisted alchemists and spirit-channelers to skalds singing the malevolent music of war without end. In addition to humanoid heroes, the Crusader Codex contains a variety of monsters with class levels, from bloodthirsty redcaps and trolls to demon oracles, night hag mesmers, and more, as well as updated versions of the monstrous mandragora! Each stat block contains roleplaying notes and detailed tactical notes before, during, and after combat. Whether as unique individuals or stock characters, leaders or minions, the characters in the Crusader Codex stand ready to bring the pain wherever the GM needs them.

Incorporating rules from Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Occult Adventures, Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Pathfinder Unchained, Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Mythic Adventures, and the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Advanced Class Guide as well as the core rules, the Crusader Codex is an indispensable addition to any campaign featuring the servants of the Abyss, whether they are invading your heroes’ homeland or the heroes are taking the fight to the lower planes! This volume is an excellent companion volume to Unrighteous Villains, and it brings you the same rich and inventive design, luscious layout, beautiful aesthetics, and excellence in craftsmanship that is the hallmark of Legendary Games. We hope you enjoy using it as much as we enjoyed making it. Game on!

Hey, What’s With the Adventure Path Plug-In?

You will see us use phrases such as “Righteous Crusade Adventure Path” instead of the title of the 13th adventure path published by Paizo Publishing, LLC, covering issues #73 to 78. Or, you may see us use names such as the “Demon Lands,” the “Crusader Stronghold,” the “Goddess of Valor,” or the “God of Nature” instead of the proper names of specific characters or places from those adventures or gods from the world setting. While we can create compatible products under the Open Game License, we still have to be respectful of certain content Paizo owns. Because we want to be very respectful of their content and work in partnership with them, we use these “replacement phrases.” Plus, this helps the product have a more general appeal to those who may be running a home campaign that fits the same themes. In any event, we are 100% confident you know what we are talking about and will have no problem making the required connection. So, enjoy these pregenerated characters for use in your “Righteous Crusade Adventure Path,” helping to tame the “Demon Lands.” See, that wasn’t so hard, was it?

Special Electronic Features

We’ve hyperlinked this product internally from the Table of Contents and externally with links to the official Pathfinder Reference Document as well as d20PFSRD. If it is in the core rulebook, we generally didn’t link to it unless the rule is an obscure one. The point is not to supersede the game books, but rather to help support you, the player, in accessing the rules, especially those from newer books or that you may not have memorized.

Introduction

Much like the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game NPC Codex, the Crusader Codex contains 21 stat blocks, from CR 1 to 20, with one of the NPCs being the cohort of another. Most of the characters presented herein are single-classed, though some have a small number of levels in other classes if it suits their theme and role. Some of the NPCs are intended as allies to accompany the player characters on their adventures if the players wish it, and some of those are higher level versions of NPCs presented in the Righteous Crusade campaign books; these NPCs give instructions as to which adventures they might accompany the PCs. Even if the GM is not running the Righteous Crusade campaign, he or she can be sure to find an NPC that can be used in any campaign.

Automatic Bonus Progression

The stat blocks in this book make use of the Automatic Bonus Progression rules, as detailed in Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Pathfinder Unchained. This grants NPCs a bit of a statistical boost in terms of their raw numbers, but without an accompanying increase in their wealth and loot left behind when the PCs defeat them. Where possible, NPC statistics are also designed to correspond to Table 1-1: Monster Statistics by CR from Appendix 1 of Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Bestiary. The NPCs all have favored class bonuses included. Where an NPC has particular buffing potions or special abilities, Power Attack, and so on, such items and abilities are meant to be used to ensure that the NPCs match the statistics provided by that table for the particular CRs.

Mythic Rules

One thing different about the Righteous Crusade campaign is that it is designed to be used with the mythic rules as presented in Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Mythic Adventures. As a result, the player characters within that campaign become substantially more powerful than in regular campaigns. For example, an 12th level PC with 4 or 5 mythic tiers is roughly equivalent to a 14th or 15th level PC, while an 18th level PC with 8 mythic tiers is roughly equivalent to a 22nd level PC. For the first five character levels, the PCs do not have mythic tiers, so average party level is the same, but when they start to acquire mythic tiers, average (effective) party level begins rising. To help GMs plan encounters, the following table indicates the average (effective) party level compared to character level plus mythic tiers, and the book of the campaign that the PCs reach those levels:

Combat with Codex Characters

When planning combat encounters, ensure that the individuals you find here are encountered with other creatures or characters. They may be masterminds, but any combat encounter involving a team of heroes against a single bad guy encounters is usually a bad idea, because action economy issues generally ensure a quick victory for player characters. Some of the NPCs have suggestions for allies that they might have. In addition, the characters you find here are not necessarily locked and loaded for combat alone; they are intended as “living characters,” not as individuals who stand in a room waiting to be slaughtered by rampaging player characters. Each NPC is named and has a quick personality sketch to help build out that character as a unique individual, but those names can also be ignored if the goal is simply to provide a set of similar stock characters in an encounter. While it makes sense to encounter one “John Doe,” encountering 4 “John Does” just sounds silly; however, encountering 4 “psychic initiates” or “trainee soldiers” makes sense.

Tactics

Each NPC has a tactics section, with some having suggestions provided for morale. It is up to the GM to determine if an NPC fights to the death or otherwise. No tactics section can cover every eventuality or situation, but these serve as guides to the typical strategy each character will take, at least at the beginning of most encounters. Beyond that, their responses will develop organically and intelligently, using their spells, abilities, and items to their best effect. Regarding potential allies for player characters, the notes are short, because it is impossible to know what the PCs will be facing; it’s important to note that NPC allies should never try to steal the PCs’ limelight. Before running a combat encounter, GMs should ensure that they thoroughly understand what an NPC can do. In addition, for the stat blocks and tactics you see in this book, the following general guidelines apply:

- Where the tactics say “The individual casts [x],” this refers to long-duration spells like detect scrying, greater false life, and so on. The effects of those spells are included in the “before pre-buffing” section of the individual’s tactics.

- For the spells that are cast when combat is imminent, spells of 10 minutes per level duration are likely cast as soon as the individual is aware of intruders in their lair, while spells that last 1 round per level are likely cast when intruders are in the next room if they are fighting something, for example.

- Where a spellcaster’s tactics suggest casting black tentacles, repulsion, or similar ongoing nasty area of effect spells, his or her allies should have some means to attack or affect their enemies without being affected by that effect!

- For ease of reference, the save DCs listed in each stat block are marked with an F, R, or W, indicating whether the saving throw in question is a Fortitude, Reflex, or Will save.

- As always, GMs can and should change any details of a character and its stat block as needed to suit their games. This is especially helpful when a GM wants to reuse a particular stat block. For example, changing a stat block’s alignment, race, a few spells, and/or maybe some magic items creates a whole new NPC.

On round one, he casts burning hands, moving when necessary to affect as many targets as possible, but not in such a way that he provokes attacks of opportunity. He uses shocking grasp against adjacent foes in rounds 2 and 3, thereafter switching to using his spear. If reduced to 6 or fewer hp, Torin withdraws to seek out a place of safety.

When demonic forces invade a city at the start of the campaign, all sorts of troops are involved, from the high to the low. Heartened by the promise of loot and the opportunity to spread mayhem, he leapt at the chance. This witch represents one of the weaker forces that invade the city.

Torin’s Allies: This stat block works better as an encounter with multiple witches, either as two or more by themselves, or as a group supporting a bad guy who is not described in book 1 as being without allies; this should make such battles more fun. In such cases, those witches closest to their enemies use the tactics described above, while those behind first cast darkness, then throw alchemist’s fire, or attempt to use evil eye against their enemies. They may also cast burning hands after using evil eye, if they can affect more enemies than their allies, hoping that their allies’ fire resistance will keep them safe.

The influence of the Abyss on the lands where the campaign takes place can take strange turns. Amongst the local trolls, some are occasionally born with fiendish qualities. Such trolls are identified and given training as inquisitors, to keep other trolls and other non-demonic creatures in line with the overall demonic will. Anderegg is an example of such a troll corrupted to deepest evil.

TACTICS
Before Combat If in the wilderness, Vokolek drinks an elixir of hiding to stalk and surprise attack his enemies.

During Combat Vokolek activates rage as soon as he can, and depending on the positioning of his foes, makes normal full attacks or uses Cleave and Power Attack (with Furious Focus) to attack. If taking the latter approach and he has a move action available, he uses the intimidating glare rage power as well. Against any obviously holy enemy, he uses smite good against that target, making full attacks.

During Combat Tanelodian’s tactics vary with the situation and her allies. She does her best according to the situation, and if benefiting from bull’s strength and divine power, uses Power Attack with her attacks, as well as smite evil against powerful evil foes.

Necanor is a dangerous killer and agent provocateur for the forces of the Abyss. Depending on the situation, he has possessed many different targets to impede or damage the fiends’ enemies, ranging from low-ranking nobodies to... so, Svore drinks an extract of greater invisibility on the first round of combat and moves position. She assesses the situation, either using her wand repeatedly while catching as many enemies as possible in the primary area of effect, or attacks with her natural weapons. When using the wand, she always uses cold energy, because she is immune to that element, and her golems are immune to magic. TACTICS

Before Combat Lambrecht usually creates two or more alarms wherever he is, the closest one of which is the silent type. If expecting trouble or preparing to engage in melee within a 12 minute period, Lambrecht casts invisibility on himself and then casts good hope. If he believes combat is imminent, he also casts haste and anticipate peril on himself and as many allies as possible. Depending on the situation, he might also cast darkness.

During Combat When combat begins, Lambrecht begins drumming to activate raging song (as a move action), and casts haste if he has not already done so. He stays in a position such that he is far enough from combat that he can assess the situation, but close enough so that his allies can hear his drumming. He does not get involved in combat. If required, Lambrecht keeps performing raging song but does not accept the benefits for a round so that he can cast a spell that round to help his allies, such as darkness or even cure moderate wounds, but is only likely to cast the latter once an ally has been knocked unconscious. Remember that when an ally is killed or knocked unconscious, the attacker must make saves against each death curse effect. His intent is that his allies do a lot of damage to his targets and inflict a lot of curses on them. If seriously threatened, his invisibility is dispelled, or one troll is left, he flees using magic to escape and try again at a time of his choosing.

Statistics Without Raging Song While still buffed, but refusing raging song benefits for a round, Lambrecht's statistics are AC 27, touch 16, flat-footed 23 (+8 armor, +2 deflection, +2 Dex, +1 dodge, +1 haste, +1 natural, +2 shield); hp 117 (12d8+60); loses benefits of superstition and raging song bonus on Will saves; Melee +2 scimitar +13/+13/+8 (1d6+1/18-20); Special Attacks loses rage powers; Str 8, Con 16; CMB +8; CMD 21

Lambrecht Roskelly is a senior member, but not the leader, of a mercenary group that specialises in assassinating selected targets. He favors using multiple groups of minions against his targets, using his raging song along with troll allies on a first strike. If this is not enough, it's quite likely that the targets are subject to multiple curses, and he follows with other encounters to finish the job.

Lambrecht’s Allies: When planning to attack a target or targets, Lambrecht is accompanied by allies. These are either four standard trolls, or six fiendish trolls as described on page x, to make a CR 12 or CR 14 encounter, respectively. With the benefits of good hope, haste, and raging song (plus bull’s strength for the standard trolls), the allies gain substantial combat bonuses. To help GMs, the buffed trolls have the following modified statistics:

Kane presents a more developed version of the potential cleric ally introduced in the second book of the Righteous Crusade Adventure Path, and as such is suitable to accompany the player characters in the fifth part of the Righteous Crusade Adventure Path. He is friendly and tries to keep morale high. Alternatively, he can represent a highly experienced cleric.

Urdman Waltham

Male dwarf druid (blight druid\^ 13/medium\^ (relic channeler) 1
Animal Form. When in buffed fiendish behemoth hippopotamus, and casts greater magic fang on his bite. If expecting trouble or preparing to engage in melee within a 2 hour period, he casts stoneskin. If expecting trouble or preparing to engage in melee within a 12 minute period, he casts strongjaw on both slams and barkskin. If expecting to imminently engage in combat with fiends, the ranger uses a wand to cast bull’s strength upon him. He might also casts thorn body when planning to fight powerful foes.

During Combat. Urdman assesses the situation, and if it helps casts one of his spells to improve his situation, but most likely engages in melee combat. If he is allied with the PCs, Urdman takes whatever actions are best to help the group. In elemental form, he attacks with his slams. If in behemoth hippopotamus form, he attacks with his bite using Vital Strike (unless hasted by a PC). Note that the miasma and plaguerbeart form features are disease effects, not poison effects, so demons are capable of being affected by them; also, they and blight blooded are class features, so carry over to wild shape forms.

Urdman was once a druid who would help manage food for his dwarven clan, but eventually he moved on. He established ownership of a slate quarry miles from the campaign area, where his followers work and are well-treated. He became concerned about the demon infestation in the region and spends much time trying to beat them. He might make a good NPC to accompany PCs in book 5 of the campaign, but the GM may wish to include some initial stage setting, by having the PCs hear about a strange dwarf druid that can turn into a massive hippopotamus, for example.

TACTICS
Before Combat Every day, Garvyn channels the champion spirit, using shared séance with any present allies. He also exposes himself to Urdman’s miasma so that he is immune to it for the rest of the day. Urdman casts longstrider on him each day. If expecting trouble or preparing to engage in melee within a 3 minute period, Garvyn uses Urdman’s wand to cast bull’s strength on himself and the druid.

During Combat Garvyn does what is best to help his master, and the group if allied with the PCs. When possible, he uses his hunter’s bond ability to provide a boost to his allies, as long as they are fighting one of his favored enemies, and reuses it as opponents fall. When attacking favored enemies, Garvyn tends to prefer using full attacks, unless using a move action to use hunter’s bond in which case he makes one attack using Improved Vital Strike and Power Attack (with Furious Focus). When fighting powerful non-favored enemies prefers to make one attack, as just described, unless he finds them easy to hit in which case he uses full attacks. If Urdman needs him though, he abandons attacks to do whatever his master needs, whether that is healing, using aid another, or some other activity.

Garvyn is the best friend of Urdman Waltham, whom he encountered years ago. He is friendlier than the druid. He helps Urdman investigate the horror-filled area that is the campaign setting, and hopes one day that the Righteous Crusade will win and that the druid will return to the more goodly outlook that he once had. Alternatively, he could represent an experienced fiend-hunting ranger.

Long ago, a foresighted Duke of Hell predicted that a serious breach to the Abyss might occur in the region where the campaign takes place. He ordered the construction of a number of special cephalophores like Lilith in that region, which were then awakened and given orders just in case certain conditions came to pass. Their goal is to help provide aid to those who might seal the breach to the Abyss. Some of these cephalophores still exist as special agents of Hell in that region and elsewhere, maybe even in the Abyss. More than any other creature in this Codex, these constructs are meant to be wild cards that can surreptitiously provide the PCs with aid, or they could fight the PCs for a short while before fleeing. The GM can be inventive and might even creep the players out; for example, throughout the adventure path, in adventure locations occasionally there might be recently slain demon corpses (that are in addition to those encounters scripted into the adventures themselves), with a note in Common addressed to the PCs saying “We have paved the way for you.”, or they might find letters addressed to them signed by “Your Benefactor” providing information that they need. They might even help PCs in a difficult combat if they need it, or even have a conversation with them, but being what they are, are quite laconic. Divination magic, if used, would reveal the source of the aid as one of the nobility of Hell… Naturally, the GM should use as many of these constructs as needed to provide fun encounters.

Dismang may be encountered as an independent creature, simply hunting demons to eat as an amusement, or this stat block could be used to represent elite hunting beasts working for the demons invaders that will seek out and attempt to slay the PCs. An encounter with independent bebiliths need not lead to combat, and the PCs could even have a useful discussion if the outsider is treated with respect (but remember that it “speaks” using telepathy). Bebiliths encountered in groups of more than one should be working for demons, however.

TACTICS

Before Combat Normally, Xahanaxar uses its hat of disguise to appear as some Large type of demon, hoping that this appearance will prevent other demons from attacking it.

During Combat Xahanaxar selects a target, either a weak-looking PC (not a divine or martial character) or a ranged combat specialist like an archer. It does not select NPC allies, as it senses the more powerful characters and wants to deal with them first. On the first round of combat, it sends an energy drain and quickened enervation at that target. On the second round, it attempts a Flyby Attack to grab its target via a bite attack and keep flying, using quickened enervation on the target again just before the attack is made; if the target looks too heavy to fly with, the fiend instead uses Spring Attack to carry it using its land speed. On round three and subsequent rounds, it keeps moving farther away from the PCs, attempting to use devour soul on the grabbed target until it dies, whereupon the fiend teleports back to attack a divine PC. When attacking in melee, it always uses Power Attack, and Dreadful Carnage if it applies, as long as it is regularly hitting, and uses its remaining quickened enervation on the chosen target. If reduce to 50 or fewer hit points, it flees by teleporting or flying away.

STATISTICS

Gear Large mithril breastplate, hat of disguise, pouch with 2,000 gp worth of gems; the rest of its treasure is secured safely in its Abaddon lair.

Xahanaxar can be used in one of two ways. It might be present in the campaign’s area because it is observing the state of the war on behalf of its masters, or it can be encountered in the Abyss. If found in the Abyss, it could represent a diplomatic mission to a senior demon, scouting the area on behalf of its masters, or there for another reason. Either way, it attacks the PCs hoping to devour their souls. Normally, the daemon uses its hat of disguise to appear as some Large type of demon, but not that of a balor or marilith, hoping that this appearance will prevent other demons from attacking it.

Xahanaxar’s Allies: This stat block might work better as an encounter with three such daemons, to make a CR 22 encounter. As a group, the daemons focus on attacking two targets at a time, discussing the choices via telepathy. They use the tactics discussed above on those two targets, but if any targets are carried away on foot or by flight, the remaining (and later, returning) daemons concentrate on a single target PC at a time.

TACTICS

Before Combat Tiglath uses his ring to become invisible, and casts corruption resistance and mirror image, when combat is imminent.

During Combat Tiglath first focuses his attacks on a creature that looks like a good-aligned divine character, and activates smite good (as a swift action) against them, focusing on one enemy at a time. He uses Stunning Assault in attacks against the target of his smite, unless he keeps missing, and if he manages to stun his smite target in a round, might spare some attacks against nearby enemies in the following round while the target is stunned. Alternatively, if the PCs are grouped together he might cast reverse gravity at an opportune moment, hoping to remove some of them from action. Remember that Tiglath is extremely intelligent, and should adjust his strategy in reaction to changing circumstances. He could also engage in hit-and-run tactics, killing a character with smite good, teleporting away to heal himself using his wand, recasting mirror image, and then returning to the fray. He almost certainly flees if facing death, unless he is in the presence of his master.

Tiglath is designed as a powerful representative of Baphomet, and should therefore most likely appear in book 5 of the adventure path. He could be used by Baphomet to send to worshippers instead of the demon lord. Alternatively, he can be used as the minion of another more powerful demon.

Author’s Note: Tiglath’s Stat Block

As is, Tiglath’s AC and saving throw bonuses are well above the norm for a CR 20 creature. The legendary gifts have deliberately not been selected for this reason. For many player groups, this stat block should be a challenge. However, GMs who feel that the demon would be too easy to defeat by their group should assign the legendary gifts as desired.

SPECIAL ABILITIES

Create Spawn (Su) Once per week, an immense mandragora can create a mandragora spawn. It does so by a process of splitting, as thousands of small mandragoras break through its skin. This process lasts one hour, and the immense mandragora takes 4 Con damage each time it does so. Over a period of a day, the small mandragoras become full size, but even then, each one is only four inches tall. If an immense mandragora has a template, such as fiendish or mythic, created one is only four inches tall.

Fast Blood Drain (Ex) An immense mandragora drains blood, dealing 1d6 points of Constitution damage, whenever it successfully bites a victim. (This replaces the usual rules for blood drain.)

Poison (Ex) Slam—injury; save Fort DC 30; frequency 1/round for 4 rounds; effect confusion and fatigue; cure no saves but “act normally” result on the confusion behavior table ends the effect.

Shriek (Su) Once every 1d4 rounds as a standard action, an immense mandragora can give voice to an unsettling shriek. All creatures within a 30-foot spread of a shrieking immense mandragora takes 15d6 points of sonic damage (DC 30 Reflex save for half) and becomes nauseated for 1d4 rounds (DC 30 Will save negate). This is a sonic, mind-affecting ability. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Vulnerable to Supernatural Darkness (Ex) In areas of supernatural darkness (such as those created by deeper darkness, but not by darkness), an immense mandragora is slowed, as the slow spell.

Unardu is much like any other massive mandragora, except that it has been imbued with fiendish and mythic power. It was raised especially by demons to be a biological weapon that is unaffected by paladins’ smites, and is full of hate. On the material plane, Unardu is likely found guarding something of importance, but in the Abyss might simply be a wandering monster.

Unardu’s Allies: Unardu could be accompanied by an additional fiendish mythic immense mandragora, or by one or more fiendish mythic mandragora swarms, to create no higher than a CR 23 encounter. Note that such swarms could also be encountered just by themselves, either in the region where the campaign takes place, or perhaps in forested areas of the Abyss. A fiendish mythic mandragora swarm (see page xx for basic statistics) has the following modified statistics:

Lucia is a legendary investigator who provided expert aid to the lawful churches that she worked for centuries ago, but has not been heard from since. She could perhaps be... first encountered as a prisoner in book five of the Righteous Crusade Adventure Path, with her equipment stored in a box near her cell (but might be too weak/wounded to help the PCs in the rest of that adventure); the PCs might recognize her with a successful DC 30 Knowledge (history) or DC 35 Knowledge (local) check, and in any case she asks to be released, promising to help them at a later time. If not encountered as a prisoner in the Abyss, the PCs might hear rumors of Lucia becoming active again at some other part of the campaign. In any case, Lucia might offer to join the PCs for part of the final book in the campaign, and might be able to fill them in on any information gaps they have.

Lucia's Inspiration Summary

As an aid to GMs, here is a summary of Lucia's inspiration benefits. When using inspiration (a free action), she rolls 2d8 twice and uses the better result. Without spending a point of inspiration, she adds this number to any attack roll with a greatsword or composite longbow, or to any ability check or skill check, regardless of whether she is trained in them or not. She can spend 2 points of inspiration as an immediate action to use inspiration with a saving throw, or spend 1 point of inspiration to use inspiration with an attack roll if she uses any other weapon than a greatsword or composite longbow.

New Creatures

Mandragoras originally appeared in the early issues of the Pathfinder Adventure Path series (issue #17) and were slightly changed when it appeared in Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Bestiary 2. The immense mandragora and mandragora swarm appeared later in issue #36, inspired by the original version. Presented now, with some modifications, are new versions of the immense mandragora and mandragora swarm, which reflect the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Bestiary 2 changes and the desires of the author. For example, the immense mandragora was originally a massive amalgamation of thousands of small mandragoras, but in this book is simply a single massive mandragora.

This filthy creature the height of six or seven humans resembles an enormous, wide-mouthed fat child made from leaves, vines, tree bark, dirt, and pallid tubers.

Blood Drain (Ex) When a mandragora swarm damages a foe with its swarm damage, it also drains blood, dealing 1d6 points of Constitution damage. It does not need to establish a grapple.

mandragora can create a mandragora spawn. It does so by a process of splitting, as thousands of small mandragoras break through its skin. This process lasts one hour, and the immense mandragora takes 4 Con damage each time it does so. Over a period of a day, the small mandragoras become full size, but even then, each one is only four inches tall. Shriek (Su) Once every 1d4 rounds as a standard action, an immense mandragora can give voice to an unsettling shriek. All creatures within a 30-foot spread of a shrieking immense mandragora takes 15d6 points of sonic damage (DC 28 Reflex save for half) and becomes nauseated for 1d4 rounds (DC 28 Will save negates). This is a sonic, mind-affecting ability. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Vulnerable to Supernatural Darkness (Ex) In areas of supernatural darkness (such as those created by deeper darkness, but not by darkness), an immense mandragora is slowed, as the slow spell.

Whereas standard mandragoras are said to arise spontaneously, immense mandragoras are individual mandragoras that have been deliberately cultivated by greater demons or fiendish druids, fed the corpses of lesser demons so that they grow to a gigantic size. It is believed by certain scholars that such a process must occur within the Abyss, or in areas near where a breach to the Abyss has occurred. A typical immense mandragora stands around 35 feet tall and weighs many tons. When it attacks, its fingers grow nearly 30 feet long, with which it makes slam attacks.

Like standard mandragoras, an immense mandragora rarely strays far from its forest lair, and attacks any other creatures it encounters. However, an immense mandragora does not attack other greater demons, mandragoras of any type, or fiendish druids unless they attack it first. Sometimes, powerful examples of such entities can bargain with or coerce an immense mandragora to undertake duties elsewhere.

Immense mandragoras have the ability to create mandragora swarms, by extruding thousands of tiny mandragoras. Given that this process weakens the massive plant, it rarely does so unless ordered to by a superior creature or it wants additional protection.
Hive Mind (Ex) A mandragora swarm has one central mind, but retains its immunity to mind-affecting effects due to its plant traits.

Poison (Ex) Swarm—injury; save Fort DC 23; frequency 1/round for 4 rounds; effect confusion and fatigue; cure no saves but “act normally” result on the confusion behavior table ends the effect.

Shriek (Su) Once per day as a standard action, a mandragora swarm can give voice to an unsettling shriek that sounds not unlike the cry of a thousand tiny babies. All creatures within a 30-foot spread of a shrieking mandragora swarm must make a DC 23 Will save or become nauseated for 1d4 rounds. This is a sonic, mind-affecting ability. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Vulnerable to Supernatural Darkness (Ex) In areas of supernatural darkness (such as those created by deeper darkness, but not by darkness), a mandragora swarm is slowed, as the slow spell.

A mandragora swarm is a foul hive mind of thousands of four inch tall mandragoras, and are created by immense mandragoras. As a swarm of creatures, they quickly devour most things they decide to attack.

Like standard mandragoras, a mandragora swarm rarely strays far from the immense mandragora that created it, and attacks any other creatures it encounters. However, a mandragora swarm does not attack other greater demons, mandragoras of any type, or fiendish druids unless they attack it first. Mandragora swarms obey the parent that created it, but if its parent dies sometimes powerful examples of such entities can bargain with or coerce an immense mandragora to undertake duties elsewhere.

If the swarm’s parent dies, they might stay close to the area where they were created, or might decide to travel away from that location. Mandragora swarms live for a maximum of six months before dying and decaying into mulch. This mulch is sometimes used to help create immense mandragoras.
