The Grey Citadel is an adventure designed for a party of four or more characters of at least 5th level. It combines wilderness adventuring, urban detective work, and underground exploration.

The Grey Citadel of Dun Eamon is a vibrant and busy city, full of adventure and opportunity, but its prosperity is threatened by the actions of a series of factions working together and separately to destabilize the community. Demons roam the streets, criminals rule the night, and an important local power figure is missing... with no apparent connection. The heroes become involved in a chain of events that leads them through every social element of the city, into the hearts of its inhabitants, and far below its streets in search of answers.

Adventure Background

Before the first patriarch of the Angus clan founded his trading post on the River Eamon, the greatest threat to his descendants was already brewing in distant lands. An ambitious conjurer named Mamuthek conspired to build a device that he could use to dominate the kingdom in which he dwelled. His completed project — which created an aperture in the planar barrier through which outsiders could be called — was powerful, but not without flaws. The most dangerous of these flaws was that it lacked the ability to grant control over the creature to the summoner. Mamuthek found this out when the creature he had called ended his coup and his life. Mamuthek’s Aperture has since drifted across the known world, bringing death everywhere it is used, and none have managed to unlock its secrets. Very recently, one wizard came close, but she did not learn enough to prevent the carnage that goes hand-in-hand with Mamuthek’s Aperture.

Elinda Bannon is an artificer (a wizard who specializes in artifacts and magical devices) who dwells in the Grey Citadel. She was the most recent owner of Mamuthek’s creation. She had great success in her research, with one exception: she believed the device was used for communication across the planes, not for summoning. She acquired the artifact and activated it. The unforeseen result of her experimentation was that the device recognized and retrieved the previous being called, a powerful succubus demon named Lilith. Imprisoned in the Abyss for transgressions against a demon prince, Lilith did not hesitate when the shimmering portal opened in her cell. Two hundred years had passed since Mamuthek’s Aperture last offered her passage into mortal realms, and she was glad to return. She defeated the wizard, took the device, and fled into the water-carved caverns beneath the city.

When she arrived, she found that a gang of thieves was already ensconced in her chosen lair. Their master, a wily rogue named Devlin, had led them there after their guild was expelled from a neighboring city. Lilith quickly seduced Devlin, giving her effective control of a skilled group of evil agents with a competent understanding of the city. They immediately began securing the components she needed to activate the artifact and reinforce her position with an army of outsiders. She also allied herself with Gethrax, a displaced blackguard who found in her a new patron. Many elements of the city, both above ground and below, that had once lived in relative harmony are now being drawn together in a deceptive and violent plot that will impact each and every life in the Dun Eamon. The heroes’ arrival coincides with the disappearance of Elinda Bannon and the emergence on and below the streets of the minions (both summoned and seduced) of the new owner of Mamuthek’s Aperture.

How To Use This Module

This adventure involves a city-based investigation and a difficult dungeon that are intricately intertwined, with actions above ground being reflected in the events below. That is not to say that simply kicking in doors and spilling a great deal of blood won’t complete the adventure; there is plenty of mayhem for those who crave it (and maybe more than some would choose!). Hopefully, though, the players will realize that clever, attentive role-playing in the city will give them several advantages when they descend into the underground, allowing them to reap great rewards without undue risk.

You may either bring the PCs directly to the Grey Citadel and begin the adventure proper, or, if you wish, you may begin by having the PCs travel to the city itself. If you chose the latter, feel free to either use encounters appropriate to your campaign world or include one or more of the encounters or areas detailed in the Wilderness Encounters Appendix found at the back of this book.

Read-Aloud Text

Text blocks are provided for some locations and encounters, but not all. Usually, these text blocks involve important role-playing encounters with NPCs or dungeon locations that might be difficult to visualize. Other times, they are included to reinforce the character and feeling of the adventure. Use as much or as little as you wish. When read-aloud text is absent, the description has been written with paraphrasing in mind.

Encounter Types: Keyed, Timed, and Random

Encounters are handled in three different in this adventure:

Random Encounters can be selected or randomized from the City Random Encounters Table (see Chapter One) whenever you think it appropriate.

Timed Encounters happen at specific times in the storyline, although they can be modified, rescheduled, or cancelled without disrupting the plot.

Keyed Encounters take place at a specific location (such as a room in a dungeon) whenever the characters choose to go there (locations important to the plot are... fully developed; others are structured, but left for the DM to detail in the future).

Notation

All of the descriptions in this adventure are titled with a letter and number combination that indicates where or when the encounter is to be used. Keyed Encounters include a letter referring to the map key and a number referring to the area or room within that location (for example, D–1 is location D, the Market Tavern, and Area 1, The Coat Hall). Dungeon levels are similarly titled with the number of the dungeon level and the number of the area (for example, Area 2–9 is the 9th room on the 2nd level). Timed Encounters are titled with a number for the day, a number for the encounter, and a short phrase (for example, Timed Encounter 1.2 is the 2nd event on the 1st day).

DM’s Background

The real facts behind the mystery are best understood by reading the entire adventure carefully and possibly by re-reading the Mystery Elements section (see Chapter Two). Here are a few facts to keep in mind as you do so:

- The succubus Lilith is building an army of outsiders and plotting to take control of the Dun Eamon.
- The wizard Elinda Bannon took it upon herself to undo the damage she did with her experiments and pursued the fleeing demon. She was defeated and is now held captive in Lilith’s lair.
- Devlin and the Ebon Union thieves’ guild are hard at work providing materials for the artifact’s operation, but they may take time out to make an attempt on the party.
- A blackguard named Gethrax has loosely allied himself with Lilith and the Ebon Union.
- An NPC adventuring party called the Band of the Crimson Mantle is competing with the heroes, leading to some potentially interesting side effects.
- Good detective work in the city will be rewarded with information about the dungeon, including the identities of its occupants, their weaknesses, and the weapons to use against them.

The Rule of Three

The adventure elements are arranged in groups of three to make tracking the heroes’ progress easier. The mystery is comprised of three elements: wizard, thieves, and demons. Each element offers three ways that the heroes can approach the mystery: they can collect three clues left by the wizard; they can analyze three major burglaries of the thieves; and they can investigate three citizens seduced by the succubus. Each of these approaches will reveal secrets that will serve the heroes well when they venture underground. Not all (or even any) of the leads must be pursued, but each one will increase the heroes’ chances of success. These clues are described fully in the Mystery Elements section (see Chapter Two) and referenced in the appropriate Keyed Encounter.

Elinda’s Clues: These are located in the Tower Library (Area L-8) and lead to The Secret Workshop (Area L–9), The Temple Courtyard (Area I–9), and Stump’s Hovel (Area S). These clues reveal a potent weapon against the demon and the artifact’s functions.

Lilith’s Thralls: The men who have been charmed by Lilith include Ulf Ironfist, the master smith (Area Q–4); Herrick Mendon, a merchant (Area H–4); and Danver, the miller (Area R). Each of these men guards an entrance to the caverns.

The Crime Scenes: Burglaries have been committed at several locations: The Root-Cutter’s Shop (Area T), The Seer’s Parlor (Area N), and The Finesmith’s Shop (Area H–9). The stolen items suggest the nature and origins of the dungeon creatures.

Also in groups of three are the Timed Encounters. These are events scheduled to take place during the first three days the heroes are in the city, with three events to occur on each day. Some of them involve combat, others focus on role-playing, and some could go either way. They do not represent a rigid timeline, nor do the heroes need to participate in all of the encounters; feel free to change, reschedule, or cancel them to suit your style of play. Letting the plot lead the players through them in order without “railroading” them, however, should be possible.

Day One: 1.1 — An NPC adventuring party celebrates a victory over the demons; 1.2 — Arb Angus enlists the heroes’ help; 1.3 — The party encounters demons in the streets (night).

Day Two: 2.1 — A local shares his suspicions (morning); 2.2 — The NPC adventurers challenge the party; 2.3 — Demons actively hunt the heroes (night).

Day Three: 3.1 — Thieves storm the inn and attack the party (early morning); 3.2 — The rival adventurers enter the sewers; 3.3 — The heroes interrupt a burglary (evening).

Timeline

In the course of the investigation, the players will likely ask many “when” questions. Nothing in the adventure hinges directly on timing, but a brief timeline of past and future events is provided below for the sake of consistency. Day 1 marks the party’s arrival in the city; negative numbers indicate the amount of time prior to the party’s arrival (for instance, “–2 days” is two days before the heroes arrive, and so forth).

Completion of the adventure may require several trips into the underground tunnels over several days. Parties may find it difficult to complete the dungeon portion without visiting the surface at least once. The days that the party spends completing its investigation and adventuring underground have no specific events in the city; assume that

Replacement Characters

Many adventures include pre-generated characters, either for player use or to give an idea of what types of heroes best suit the adventure. This module is no exception, but the pre-generated characters have been written into the story as NPCs. They are not intended to be the starting party. They can provide additional characters for a party whose numbers are dropping or perhaps extra support for a small or underpowered party — but they are not high-powered heroes. Rasputin, Fitch, Brother Melph, Stump, and even Yelm have skills and abilities that can benefit the party over the course of the adventure. Some of them, notably Rasputin, Stump, and Yelm, also have small roles to play as NPCs, so handing them over too early might require some adjustment. Once the party has wrapped up the city investigation and is ready to proceed underground, most of these NPCs will have served their purpose and likely have a motivation to join the party as well. See the NPC Appendix for stats and descriptions.

Adapting the Adventure

The Grey Citadel is written for a party of four characters of 5th level. The mysteries in the city should present adequate role-playing and problem solving challenges for a group of any level. City encounters consist mostly of groups of creatures and so are adaptable by varying the number of creatures encountered (dretches, guild thieves, howlers, and so forth). The dungeon encounters will need more adjustment, possibly including adjustment of trap damage and DCs and replacement of powerful creatures.

Lower-level parties will need to take their time and rest frequently, but a large 3rd- or 4th-level party can gain enough experience during the city portion to survive an upper dungeon level, which earns them enough experience to survive the next level, and so on. A 5th-level party is presumed to have done a thorough investigation in the city and thus gained an advantage against the underground foes (such as taking acid to deal with the troll). More powerful parties (6th-level characters or parties numbering six or more) will find that they can survive the encounters without needing those advantages and go longer without rest. Parties of 7th level and higher will need most of the encounters upgraded (extra trolls, gricks, and so forth) to provide a significant challenge. Devlin, Gethrax, and Lilith should have around twice as many hit dice as the party average. Kubris, Thurf, the Band of the Crimson Mantle, and other minor opponents should be approximately equal to or one level lower than the party.

An alternative would be to run the module as a high-level solo adventure. The profiles for the Angus brothers fit the range for this option, providing that some henchmen are included to give spellcasting support. For example, either Bron or Cael Angus has the ability and the motivation to undertake the adventure himself, perhaps with Stump and Rasputin for arcane spells.

Setting

The setting should be easily inserted into any fantasy campaign: all you need is a city and an underground cavern complex. The city could easily be relocated to any location — desert, arctic, or anything in between. The special conditions are present for effect, but are not necessary. Similarly, the river, the trade road, the frontier location, and the economic politics are not necessary to the plot, although many of the hooks for future development relate to them.

The surrounding wilderness areas are not of great importance to the city and the adventures to be had there, allowing easy integration of the adventure into your specific campaign world. If, however, you desire more information on the surrounding wilderness and perhaps a few more adventure hooks and NPCs, that material is presented in the Wilderness Encounter Appendix detailed in the back of this module. If you desire, you may use some of those encounters as the PCs travel to the Grey Citadel before running the primary adventure.

Web Support

In addition to any support materials that are provided on the Product Support page of the Necromancer Games web site at http://www.necromancergames.com/prod_support.html, the author of this adventure maintains a web site dedicated to the Grey Citadel and the area surrounding it. Visit Dark Loch Creative Enterprises at http://www.darkloch.com. Though this material is not official product support, it should prove to be a useful resource for those using this adventure!
Chapter One: The City of Dun Eamon: An Overview

This adventure takes place in the city of Dun Eamon, the center of government for Eamonvale. Located high in the mist-shrouded mountain crags of the Stoneheart Mountains, it is a city like no other. Locally known as the Grey Citadel, Dun Eamon is an important trading city and a key crossing point on the turbulent river. Thanks to its economy, Dun Eamon is highly successful, but its remote location also ensures that it will never be terribly sophisticated.

The River Eamon has only one viable crossing in the Stoneheart Mountains — a broad ford at the base of a plunging waterfall. Just below the ford, the river tumbles several hundred feet over a second waterfall before continuing down the rocky gorge. Midway across the ford, a huge slab of bedrock divides the river into two channels. On this island, many generations ago, Eamon Angus staked a claim and founded a tiny trading post. Now, centuries later, expansion of the duchies and kingdoms on either side of the Stoneheart Mountains and the development of trade between them have caused the tiny trading center and way station to grow into a heavily fortified citadel, with the charter and lordship still in the hands of the Angus family.

Three brothers rule the city. Arb Angus is the eldest; he inherited the land and title from his father. Bron is the middle brother and the Captain of the Mist Watch. Cael is the youngest brother and Master of the Temple of Fortitude. More than 5,000 citizens dwell within the city walls and pay homage to the brothers.

The Grey Citadel is renowned as the location of the finest forges in the land. Nearly any tool, weapon, or other metal item can be crafted here, and the quality of their alloys and the strength of their castings are unsurpassed. The quality and availability of tools and the location on the trade road have resulted in Dun Eamon becoming a city of artisans and craftsmen. The attention of foreign guilds wishing to expand their influence and tap the region’s unique market has also been attracted, but the Angus family has always enforced strict regulations that limit guild activity and encourage free trade. Today’s rulers are no exception, and their policies have not made them popular among the powerful merchant houses.

In addition to its mercantile presence, the Grey Citadel is a well-known frontier fortress. In times of war, its walls are the outer line of defense for the lowland below the Stoneheart Mountains. Many hunters and trappers pass through the gates every season to sell their pelts and to re-supply for another trip into the wild mountains. It is a hiring point for caravan laborers and tap the region —

City Random Encounters Table

These encounters should be used to provide action, inspire role-playing, and develop the unique character of Dun Eamon. They can also be used to develop the plot with the delivery of an important rumor at the right moment.

1d8 Encounter

1 Mist Watch City Patrol (9 War1, 1 War2): With the developing events in the city, patrols are larger, more frequent, and increasingly reactive. They have standing orders to question anyone out after dark or who appears to be engaged in questionable behavior. Reactions depend on the party's activities, reputation, and level of cooperation. See the NPC Appendix for full stats.

2 Cutpurse ( Rog2): Equally at home working a crowded market or dark side street, these thieves of the Ebon Union always try to flee a confrontation, attempting to lose pursuers before going underground through one of the drains in the Market. They fight only as a last resort. See the NPC Appendix for full stats.

3 Detches (1d2): When encountered in numbers this small, these creatures are usually wandering erratically instead of serving their demonic mistress. They create a panic whenever they appear in public view. They are most often found scavenging scraps in an alley refuse pile. Use the stats from Timed Encounter 1.3.

4 Confrontational Drunk (male human Com1; CR 1; hp 4; AC 10; Atk +0 melee [1d4, dagger, cri 19–20]; dagger, pouch with 1d10 cp, 1 sp): An inebriated caravan guard stumbles into the party and belligerently challenges a random character. If diplomacy fails, the heroes should make an effort to end the fight without loss of life to avoid repercussions.

5 Perfumed Harlot (female human Com1; CR 1; hp 2; Bluff +4, Innueduo +4; vial of scented oils [1 sp], pouch with 2d8 sp): These women roam the city in revealing gowns and heavy makeup, attempting to attract wealthy (or at least employed) men to various dances and festivals at the inns or to rendezvous at the bathhouse. They know 1d3 items from the City Rumors Table in Chapter Two if questioned.

6 Raving Prophet (male human Adp1; CR 1; hp 4; Knowledge [religion] +4, Scry +4; ragged clothing, bizarre totem or religious relic; cure minor wounds, ghost sound, light, bless): These wild-eyed fanatics pester anyone who shows an interest in their rants, which will always pertain to a deity/faction/cult of which the party has never heard, unless it benefits an outside story connection. They know a single rumor from the City Rumors Table in Chapter Two if asked, but always twist it to favor their cause.

7 Ragged Beggar (male human Com1; CR 1; hp 2; Gather Information +3; wooden bowl with 2d6 cp): There are very few independent beggars in the citadel; 90% have been bullied into loyalty to the guild, but 30% of those report secretly to Rasputin as well. Any beggar will know 1d4 rumors from the City Rumors Table in Chapter Two (re-roll those that pertain to the thieves' guild unless the beggar is one of the truly independent 10%).

8 The Elite: One of the three Angus brothers is out on business in the city (chosen or determined randomly). Arb may be responding to a simple legal or economic matter; Bron might be investigating a crime or reviewing Watch stations; Cael will most likely be ministering to his congregation's needs. All are on business unrelated to the demon crisis and, depending on the heroes' level of involvement, may approach the characters for an update. Day or night, 2 trusted guards accompany them from the Mist Watch or the acolytes of the Temple, as appropriate. See the NPC Appendix for their profiles.

and guards for the dangerous journey over the mountains to the distant kingdoms beyond. Traveling minstrels, adventurers, and highwaymen all call the city home from time to time.

The people of Dun Eamon are hardy and self-sufficient; hardships are taken in stride, and respect is reserved for those who have earned it. Two dominant social groups exist in the city, and they are usually at odds with each other. The woodsmen who occupy the forested slopes around the citadel regard the merchant class as arrogant foreigners from pampered lowland cities; the merchants regard the woodsmen as savages whose uncouth lifestyle they tolerate only in the interests of profit. Rangers, druids, and barbarians are welcomed into the community, as are fighters and bards to a slightly lesser degree. Paladins are not unwelcome, but the citizens are intolerant of judgment by outsiders. Dun Eamon attracts plenty of rogues, mostly bandits and highwaymen rather than burglars. Wizards and monks are uncommon, mostly due to the lack of social refinement. Clerics and sorcerers are not treated any differently than anywhere else. Adventuring parties are generally regarded as a natural part of the traffic through the gates.

In appearance, the Grey Citadel of Dun Eamon is imposing yet dreary. Its stone buildings are quarried from the same grey basalt as the bedrock on which they sit, as are the city walls and the keep. The rest of the buildings are half-timbered two- and three-story structures, with roofs of thatch or shingle. The cobblestone streets and alleys are always shiny and damp, and everything in the city hosts at least a thin sheen of green moss; many buildings even have thick clumps of ferns growing on the roof. Amid the green-forested slopes and drifting grey rain clouds, the grey-green edifices of the city blend right in.
The trade road bisects Dun Eamon through the lower city, and a massive gatehouse guards each entrance where the road rises up from the ford. A rampart wall surrounds the entire island, with watchtowers evenly distributed along it. Where the second falls spill over the edge, the island rises steeply to a flat-topped promontory. On this slab of rock sits the upper city, consisting of the craftsman’s district, the vast market, and the largest taverns. Rising from the very tip of the island and towering over the dizzying waterfall is the Angus castle and keep, the central point of defense for the entire region.

Conditions in the City

The Grey Citadel has some special characteristics that will make role-playing within its walls both dangerous and unforgettable. Two special rules apply whenever the heroes are outdoors in the city.

Visibility: The city’s position on a ford between two waterfalls and the combination of rain and fog that drift down the slopes constantly shroud the city in thick mists and drizzle. The result of this constant precipitation is badly restricted visibility. Treat any encounter that is not inside or underground as taking place in one-quarter concealment (10% miss chance); any existing concealment factor is increased to the next category (moderate darkness becomes one-half concealment, and so forth). Note that this situation is not as extreme as the fog entry in the “Weather Hazards” section in Chapter 3 of the DMG, although that type of heavy fog does occur and can make adventuring even more difficult.

Footing: Eamonvale’s moist climate ensures heavy growth of mosses and lichens in the city, and nearly every surface has a thin green coat of slick vegetation. As a result, footing is treacherous, especially for visitors who are unused to the conditions (those who have been in the city for less than 1 month). Walking under normal circumstances does not present a problem, but once another activity (such as combat or attempting a skill) distracts a character, she faces a chance of slipping on the slimy surface. Following a result of a natural “1” on an attack roll, skill check, or ability check (critical failure), have the player roll a Reflex save (DC 15). If this save is failed, the character is flat-footed until her next turn; she has slipped and recovered but cannot effectively dodge incoming blows. If the character fails by more than 10, she falls and suffers 1d6 points of subdual damage and is considered prone until her next turn. Obviously, this condition is more realistically applied to Climb and Jump checks than to Gather Information and could result in additional damage or other penalties. Use your judgment on when and how to apply the footing conditions.

The Underground Caverns

Beneath the city, thousands of years of erosion have carved a complex network of tunnels and chambers. In addition to the natural caverns, a burial crypt and a gnome stronghold add variety to the dungeon levels.

The descriptions of the underground caverns beneath Dun Eamon are divided into 4 levels, although several passageways connect them and the party need not visit every level to be successful. The encounters in these levels are based on a party of 4 characters of 5th level as the minimum requirements for survival: such a party will find the dungeon challenging and should expect to need regular rest, well-refined tactics, and a broad range of abilities to succeed. Hirelings or NPC allies from the city are other options that can reduce the overall wear and tear on the party.

Parties entering through the drains in the market will have a good chance of exploring the levels chronologically. The first three levels are connected by side tunnels that allow them to be explored in any order. The final (and most challenging) level can only be reached after completing at least one of the upper levels.

The Band of the Crimson Mantle has likely been in the dungeon longer than the party, and the heroes have several opportunities to interact with them. Dresden has been killed and his body remains on Level 2. The bulk of the Band waits to share an encounter with the party on Level 3, and the survivors of that encounter may be involved in the final confrontation on Level 4.

Lilith’s use of Mamuthek’s Aperture with the items she stole from various citizens has resulted in several creatures summoned directly from the Abyss. Before running the dungeon portion, re-read the rules for fiendish creatures in the MM.
Chapter Two: Timed Encounters, Rumors, and Mystery Elements

This adventure is driven by three components: Timed Encounters are events that happen to the heroes, essentially bringing the story to them. Rumors are the results of their investigation and can be gained at every turn, from anyone in the city. Mystery Elements are the “hot” leads that bring the heroes closer to the answers they seek.

Timed Encounters

These encounters are milestone events in the timeline that serve to draw the heroes into the plot — for they are victims as much as anyone in the city. Not all of the encounters are combat encounters; some of them are strictly role-playing oriented and should help enforce the notion that city life goes on around the characters.

Timed Encounter 1.1: Arrival Amid Revelry

Use this encounter soon after the heroes enter the Grey Citadel, perhaps after they have stabled their mounts and are looking for lodgings. The Band of the Crimson Mantle has defeated and crucified a dretch, and it is parading the demon through the streets as a trophy. A crowd of relieved citizens follows the adventurers, who are on their way to the keep to claim their bounty.

As you move down the cobbled streets, a commotion catches your attention a few blocks away. From where you stand, a group of hardy-looking adventures dressed in red are apparently bearing a corpse up the street on a crucifix. A crowd of people surrounds them, laughing and cheering. They seem to be going up the hill toward the city center and the castle on the bluff.

Be prepared to elaborate further on the grisly, bloated, and obviously non-human nature of the corpse or to describe the Band of the Crimson Mantle (see the NPC Appendix). If the heroes join the procession, they witness Lord Angus presenting a sack of coin to Pratchett, the Band’s leader. Pratchett will pander to the crowd, playing the hero, while the others stand back; Isidra looks disgusted with the bravado, Dresden looks typically on edge, and Yelm just looks uncomfortable, like he would rather be someplace else. The corpse is hung on the wall next to the gatehouse.

The heroes can gather quite a bit of information from the citizens. General “What’s going on?” questions produce responses that tell of the demon infestation and are full of praise for the Band of the Crimson Mantle, derogatory toward Elinda Bannon, and apprehensive about the city’s future. Refer to the City Rumors Table later in this chapter for specific rumors and responses.

Timed Encounter 1.2: The Lord’s Offer

This encounter begins after the heroes have been in the city for a short time, perhaps moving about the market or leaving their lodgings to explore. It can also be inserted directly following Timed Encounter 1.1. If the party does not seek out the local authorities on their own, a young herald approaches it with a summons to the gate of the keep from Lord Arb Angus of Eamonvale.

When the heroes attend or approach on their own, Arb voices his concerns over the events in the city and offers a proposal to the party. Allow the heroes’ reputation to precede them if they have one in the region. Arb stands at the gatehouse of the castle, flanked by a Mist Watch unit. He is gregariously greeting citizens and visitors, but breaks away to attend to the heroes.

“Well met, travelers. Allow me to extend a welcome on behalf of the citizens of Dun Eamon. I am Arb Angus, Lord of Eamonvale, and I have a proposition for you.

“Your arrival is ill timed, yet fortuitous, for while you have come during trying times, I believe you may be able to assist us. Dun Eamon has been troubled by a plague unlike we have known before, a plague of evil creatures who walk like men but kill and plunder without remorse — demons, I am quite certain, from a world beyond our own. While I have known them to exist, I never dreamed that they would appear in the streets of the Grey Citadel.

“The Mist Watch is able to safeguard the citizens and their property for the most part, but the origins of the problem are a mystery. I have offered a bounty on slain demons, and a few adventurers, such as the group you may have seen earlier, have been able to collect. Yet I fear that killing a few demons will not bring an end to...
If the party asks, Arb is willing to advance 50 gp to the party to begin the investigation. He answers any questions truthfully, according to his knowledge. He knows that Elinda Bannon was last seen three nights before the demon’s appearance, and he knows about the three burglaries, but does not speculate as to their significance. He also has heard most of the rumors from the City Rumors Table (see later in this chapter), but does not reveal them unless questioned directly — they are just rumors, after all.

“I am prepared to offer a reward to anyone who can successfully identify and eradicate the source of the infestation. Of course, the original bounty still stands: 50 gold ducats for every demon slain. Find and eliminate the source of the threat, and another 2,000 ducats will be yours, as well as my gratitude.

“What say you?”

The cheerful, noisy atmosphere of the common room is abruptly shattered by a scream of unmistakable horror, coming from beyond the side door of the inn. The sudden hush in the room is broken only by the sound of weapons being readied, but nobody seems eager to leave the safety of the inn to investigate. They know all too well what most likely waits outside. The scream comes from a boy, Mert, who is returning home late with his merchant father Kelvin. A roaming group of 6 dretches has cornered them behind the inn, and unless the heroes intervene, Mert and Kelvin are overpowered in a few rounds. Read the following when the party exits the inn.

In the dim light of the alley below is a terrified looking man brandishing a club in one hand and a dim lantern in the other. He shields a small boy behind him as several bulky shapes emerge from the thick fog. They stand as tall as a man, but are proportioned like grotesque, misshapen children. One of them steps into the lantern light, grinning maliciously as the boy screams again.

The two citizens are cornered at the bottom of the ramp between the upper and lower city, right below the woodlot. They are surrounded by 4 of the dretches, which are closing in; 2 more wait in the mist (Spot DC 23) to catch them if they run for the inn. If the heroes position themselves between the dretches and their intended prey, the father grabs his son and rushes for the inn’s side door. Unless the party has a favorable reputation at the inn (a helpful attitude, having bought several rounds, and so on), the patrons do not join in the fight, but they stand guard at the open door to our troubles. While my people need victories like this afternoon, I need someone who can finish the job.

“A separate circumstance has arisen as well. A wizard who lives here in the Citadel has disappeared. The timing may or may not be coincidental; she vanished just prior to the first appearance of the creatures. Knowledge of this may aid you in your investigation; I pray that your success may return her to us unharmed.

“I am prepared to offer a reward to anyone who can successfully identify and eradicate the source of the infestation. Of course, the original bounty still stands: 50 gold ducats for every demon slain. Find and eliminate the source of the threat, and another 2,000 ducats will be yours, as well as my gratitude.

“What say you?”

If the party asks, Arb is willing to advance 50 gp to the party to begin the investigation. He answers any questions truthfully, according to his knowledge. He knows that Elinda Bannon was last seen three nights before the demon’s appearance, and he knows about the three burglaries, but does not speculate as to their significance. He also has heard most of the rumors from the City Rumors Table (see later in this chapter), but does not reveal them unless questioned directly — they are just rumors, after all.

Arb Angus, Lord of Eamonvale, Ar16/Rgr4/Ftr4: CR 14, hp 90; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Timed Encounter 1.3: The Demons Attack (EL 7)

This encounter brings the heroes face to face with the demons that are terrorizing the city. Introduce it when the heroes are settled at the inn on the evening of their arrival.
admit retreating characters. The exception is Rasputin, who intervenes (with thrown daggers and song) if one or more of the heroes loses consciousness. After 10 rounds, a Watch Patrol arrives on the run. Remember that the special circumstances for restricted visibility and poor footing apply in this encounter, in addition to the moderate darkness that is the base condition.

Kelvin (male human Com1; hp 3; AC 9; Craft [waterproofing] +6, Ride [horse] +2) is a merchant who makes and sells waterproof clothing and tarps of leather and canvas (very useful in the Citadel).

Mert (male human Com1; hp 2; AC 10; Craft [waterproofing] +2) is Kelvin’s 12-year old son and apprentice.

Rasputin, male half-elf Brd6: CR 6; hp 27; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Mist Watch City Patrol: 9 soldiers (War1; CR 1/2; hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2; CR 1; hp 15), 25% chance of 1 constable (Ftr3; CR 3; hp 24); 10% chance of 1 Mist Mage (Wiz4; CR 4; hp 17); see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Dretches (6): CR 2; hp 8, 9, 11, 11, 13, 14; see the MM.

Tactics: When the heroes approach the scene, the dretches have already scared the merchant and his son. They attempt to scare the party before moving in to attack. Their strength is in their numbers, so they use simple mob tactics to maximize their advantage, attempting to surround and flank individuals. They fight until four of them are slain, then attempt to retreat into the darkness, releasing a horrific stench to cover their escape (stinking cloud). Once broken, they do not attempt to stay together but flee randomly into different parts of the city to continue their mischief. Tracking them does not lead the heroes to any place of importance. The dretches have already used their summon tanar’ri power today.

Development: The dretches carry no treasure, but a reward of another kind awaits the heroes if they succeed. Word travels quickly in the Grey Citadel, and by morning the heroes find that their notoriety has opened many doors. Citizens are more inclined to cooperate with the investigation, the ruling family is impressed, and every innkeeper and merchant in the city is competing for their business. If the party performed admirably with no losses, apply a +2 circumstance bonus on Gather Information, Intimidate, and any other Charisma-based checks while the heroes are in the city (apply a −2 penalty if the group was defeated).

The Band of the Crimson Mantle is not happy at being outdone, however, which sets the stage for Timed Encounter 2.2: Unfriendly Competition. Thanks to the eyes and ears of the thieves’ guild, Lilith needs very little time to order the assassination attempt described in Timed Encounter 3.1: The Guild Strikes.

Whether Rasputin participates or not, he invites the party to join him for a late breakfast, described in Timed Encounter 2.1: Rasputin Speaks Out. If Kelvin and Mert survive, they give each hero a waterproof cape or hooded cloak.

Timed Encounter 2.1: Rasputin Speaks Out

The heroes may find their way to the local bard in their search for information, following other people’s recommendations or their own instincts. Unless the party approaches Rasputin, use this encounter on the morning of the second day in the city.
TIMED ENCOUNTER, RUMORS, & MYSTERY ELEMENTS

As the heroes descend the stairs in the morning, a small monkey wearing a red vest and fez approaches them. The monkey seems quite insistent that they accompany him to a table at the rear of the common area, where Rasputin waits for them. He has an important piece of information for their investigation and wishes to enter into an agreement with them. Whenever the heroes approach Rasputin, introduce him and read the following in your best eastern European accent:

“I know a great deal about what goes on in this city. I know, for example, that Arb. Angus wants your help in eliminating the demons and finding the missing wizard. I know from watching you last evening that you are capable, but I also know a few things that may help you in your quest. I suggest we exchange information in hopes that we can work together to mutual benefit.

“Many of my sources have ceased to provide me with information; others are nowhere to be found. The thieves of the city are no longer independent; they have formed some sort of organization and, frankly, they are making my life very difficult. I will find out what I can to assist your investigation, and you will tell me if you discover who is marshalling the thieves. Like many people in the city, I am a merchant, not of goods, but of words. Most people hear my words as pretty songs, but you may hear far more, if you know how to listen. Come and watch one of my nightly performances here, put a few coins in Vlado’s cup, and you shall hear what I know.

“Now be careful, and let me give you some advice: listen to everyone, but trust no one.”

You may need to modify the text slightly to accommodate the heroes’ reactions or major deviations from the plot. They may wish to question Rasputin further, but he is very reserved with his information; he insists that they come see his next performance before he gives them anything more. Remember, Rasputin may be used to feed important rumors to stumped parties, he can support them in a fight, and he could even replace a deceased character. He is a valuable tool, so consider how best to play him.

For example, his next performance can yield information about the three burglaries. If the party watches (and tips) any of his performances that day, he sings of the “cutter of roots,” the “seer of stones,” and the “winder of golden wire.” These are the three citizens whose shops were burgled to provide for the operation of the summoning device, though Rasputin does not know this. Chatting with nearby patrons (Gather Information DC 15) reveals the theme of his song and the location of the shops; otherwise, the party may just need to figure it out through trial and error (i.e., “If I wanted a root cut, who would I see?”). Use the same format to deliver any other information the party might be missing, over several performances if necessary.

Rasputin, male half-elf Brd6: CR 6; hp 27; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Timed Encounter 2.2: Unfriendly Competition (EL 9)

Use this encounter on the second afternoon or anytime after the heroes have distinguished themselves in the city (after successfully completing Timed Encounter 1.3, for example). The Band of the Crimson Mantle confronts the heroes and warns them to stand down. Consider adding some hired hooligans (use the Thug profile from the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix) if the party greatly outnumbers the Band. This encounter is appropriate whenever the party is in a relatively peaceful setting or at least during a quiet moment. Potential opportunities are at the Market Tavern, in the Market, or in the Crafthall. If it develops into a combat encounter, be prepared to improvise the location. A bystander summons the Mist Watch, which arrives 7 rounds after the Band enters. Read or paraphrase the following:

You are interrupted by the crash of an opening door, and all eyes turn to stare at the newcomers. The party of adventurers you saw in the city parading the crucified demon is walking toward you, wearing their distinctive red garb. The dark half-elf is in front and looks to be in charge. The pale, gaunt woman, the wild-eyed gnome, and the tattooed warrior are right behind him, all looking fierce and determined.

“You think there’s enough room in this town for all of us?” the dark half-elf says. “I think not! This demon plague is our business, you lot need to stand down. We’ll wrap this mystery up before you get yourselves killed— you’d better leave the glory work to the real heroes!”

The heroes have a great deal of control over where this encounter goes. If they respond non-violently, play out the exchange of venomous remarks as far as the heroes wish. If this is the case, Pratchett eventually spits at someone’s feet, makes one last colorful remark, and retreats with his group in tow. The Band did not come here looking for a fight, but they are ready for one. If the party rises to the occasion, returns their taunts, or otherwise escalates the threat of violence, the situation may deteriorate into a brawl.

The Band of the Crimson Mantle: The entire Band is present for this encounter. See the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Tactics: The Band does not use lethal force unless their lives are in danger, as they have no desire to wind up in jail. Pratchett produces a leather sap and Yelm wades in enthusiastically with his fists, both of them deal subdual damage. Isidra uses spells such as bane, bull’s strength (probably on Yelm or Pratchett), cause fear, and hold person. Dresden uses grease (against a hero with a lethal weapon, or to cover the Band’s escape), color spray, and his sling. If the fight goes badly against them or when the Watch is summoned, the Band makes a fighting withdrawal (spiced by lots of threats and oaths).

Development: At a minimum, the heroes may need to explain what happened to the Watch when it arrives. They may also be responsible for damages, depending on where the incident takes place. At worst, they may be responsible for someone’s death. Keep these issues in mind as you develop the encounter. On the positive side, the Band has shown its true colors. As a result, a sympathetic bystander might approach the heroes with some basic information about their classes and hierarchy; paraphrase a few select items from their background in the NPC Appendix.

Timed Encounter 2.3:
Howlers in the Night (EL6)

Use this encounter any time on the day following the dretch attack, probably the second day in the city. The later in the day it occurs, the less time heroes will have to recover before Timed Encounter 3.1: The Guild Strikes. It can occur anywhere in the city.

As you move down the street, a long, mournful howl rises through the misty air, chilling your spine. Immediately following it are the cries of panicking citizens, and they sound like they are coming right toward you.

In addition to fighting the howlers, the heroes may try to deal with the tide of panicked citizens. With the fleeing citizens are 4 watchmen whose unit has been decimated. The party may be able to reinforce its numbers with the soldiers or a mob armed with improvised weapons. Paladins, bards, and any charismatic hero can really shine here; reward good role-playing — especially good “stand together” speeches — with a small knot of temporary followers. This development can complicate the combat, but it also helps the heroes preserve their spells and hit points and makes for a cinematic fight scene.

Citizens (10): (Com1; hp 4; AC 9) The commoners have no weapons, though they fight with anything they are given; they are proficient only with a simple weapon (+0 melee), as martial weapons are foreign to them (~4 melee).

Watchmen (4): see the NPC Appendix; these are basic Watchmen (War1). They are still armed and armored as usual.

Howlers (3): CR 3; hp 30, 39, 39; see the MM.

Tactics

Give the party at least 5 rounds between the citizens and the howlers to rally, plan a defense, or take up positions. The howlers were sent into the city to hunt the heroes, and they only attack citizens for fun or if they try to stand their ground. Howlers are instinctive pack hunters, and when they encounter the party, they attempt to encircle it. They attack by charging in and then racing away. To represent this tactic, allow them to make their attacks as if they had the Ride-By Attack feat. Each howler continues this action as long as the party remains in a defensive posture. As soon as a howler is charged or followed, it turns and focuses on that opponent. The heroes must decide when they shift from defense to offense.

The commoners have no combat skills and need the party’s leadership to survive. They fight defensively (AC 11; –6 melee) unless a character passes a Charisma check (DC 15) to inspire and encourage them. The watchmen have solid military tactics, but are disadvantaged without their Sergeant. A party member can attempt a Charisma check (DC 12) to force them into their standard formation, as described in the Mist Watch section of the NPC Appendix.

Development

Even after these howlers are defeated, there is a 60% chance per hour that one or more howlers in or around the city will use their howl ability, which forces all within 100 feet to make a Fortitude save (DC 12) or suffer a point of temporary Wisdom damage. Chances are that the heroes will not be affected unless they pursue the creature (which is up to the DM to administrate). The effects on the population are profound, however: people tend to stay inside or hurry from place to place, sleepless and haunted. Reinforce this “city under siege” atmosphere to the heroes when they next venture into the city.

Timed Encounter 3.1: The Guild Strikes (EL 9)

Use this encounter early in the morning following the encounter with the howlers. Lilith has ordered Devlin to eliminate the party, and he sends two guild agents, Kubris and Thurf to lead a gang (6 War1, 4 Rog1, 2 Rog2) to do the job. The guild intends to strike while the party is weakened from the previous night’s battle, and unless the heroes were highly successful at rallying citizens to fight with them, they may not be fully recovered. During the fighting, Fitch is wounded and struck unconscious and Molly is killed to prevent her from identifying the assassins (she had been informning for the Ebon Union; see Area D–2).

In this battle, remember that most of the party was likely sound asleep. Use each character’s Wisdom score to determine how quickly he or she can shake off the drowsiness. Subtract each character’s Wisdom modifier from 2 (add if modifier is negative) to establish a number of rounds; during these rounds, the character may only take partial actions. Also, note the rules for donning armor described in the PHB, as the heroes may find themselves fighting without it. Until the heroes provide a light source, the encounter takes place in near total darkness (nine-tenths concealment [40% miss chance], one-half concealment [20% miss chance] for thieves and anyone else with low-light vision). This encounter is probably very different from the party’s usual methods, with unarmored fighters and spell-less casters swinging fists in the dark.

Have the characters make a Listen check (DC 15) and read the following to those who succeed:

> The sound of muffled voices below rouses you from your slumber in the dim light of early dawn. A heavy thump is followed by the creak of the wooden staircase.

Thugs, War1 (6):

CR 1/2; hp 7, 8, 9 (x2), 10, 11; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Knives, Rog1 (4):

CR 1; hp 4, 5 (x2), 6; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Nets, Rog2 (2):

CR 2; hp 8, 9; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Kubris, male human Ftr2/Rog2:

CR 4; SZ M; HD 2d10+2 plus 2d6+2; hp 24; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 15; Atk +9 melee (1d6+1, masterwork rapier, crit 18–20) or +4 melee (1d3+1, unarmed); SA sneak attack (+1d6); SQ evasion, low-light vision (conditioned); AL NE; SV Fort +3, Ref +3, Will –1; Str 13, Dex 16, Con 12, Int 13, Wis 8, Cha 8.

Skills: Appraise +3, Bluff +4, Climb +5, Gather Information +2, Hide +5, Intimidate +3, Jump +5, Knowledge (Dun Eamon) +2, Move Silently +6, Pick Pocket +6, Use Rope +4.

Feats: Expertise, Improved Disarm, Improved Initiative, Weapon Finesse (rapier), Weapon Focus (rapier).

THE GREY CITADEL

Description: Kubris is a mean and spiteful man, detested by everyone except Thurf, who idolizes him, and Devlin, who needs a man willing to do the unspeakable with only financial conditions to be met. He has greasy black hair and stained armor, but despite his slovenly appearance, he is a quick and capable swordsman. He aspired to be a great mercenary captain, but his greed and maliciousness have led him down the dark path too many times to turn back.

Thurf, male half-orc Ftr2/Rog2: CR 4; SZ M; HD 2d10+4 plus 2d6+4 plus 3; hp 33; Init –1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 12; Atk +7 melee (1d10+3, ball and chain, crit 19–20) or +6 melee (1d3+3, unarmored); SA sneak attack (+1d6); SQ darkvision (60 ft.), evasion, orc blood; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +2, Will –1; Str 17, Dex 8, Con 15, Int 7, Wis 9, Cha 10.

Skills: Craft (stonemason) +1, Intimidate +7, Jump +5, Knowledge (Dun Eamon) +3.

Feats: Power Attack, Skill Focus (Intimidate), Toughness, Weapon Focus (heavy flail).

Possessions: ball and chain (treat as heavy flail), studded leather armor,

Description: Thurf is as large and powerful as he is slow and thick-witted, with broad shoulders and fierce black eyes. His career as a mason was cut short by a lethal outburst of rage. Kubris took him on as a friend and as a bit of reinforcing muscle, and the pair was notorious as thugs, enforcers, and extortionists in the city by the time Devlin’s gang arrived.

Tactics: If the heroes only took one room, the attack takes place as written; if they occupy two rooms, divide the attackers evenly (ignore any further rooms, as the attackers prefer to focus their strength). If 8 thieves are killed (or 4 if either Kubris or Thurf is among them, or if both of them are killed), the survivors attempt to withdraw using their caltrops. If the ram fails to break down the door, the heroes barricade themselves in, or the heroes meet the thieves in the gallery, the rounds may need to be adjusted, but the plan is the same. The thieves have carefully timed their attack on the party and act in a specific order:

Round 0: The thieves enter the inn and surprise the barman dozing by the fire; make Listen checks (DC 15) for the party and establish levels of drowsiness.

Round 1: The thieves ascend the stairs and prepare their rams; the heroes take their 1st (probably partial) action (rising, arming themselves, and so on).

Round 2: The thieves smash in the door(s) (+4 to Strength check with ram); 2 Thugs (War1) enter the room and fight defensively; heroes take 2nd action.

Round 3: 4 Thugs (War1) enter the room and charge; heroes take 3rd action.

Round 4: 4 Knives (Rog1) enter the room and move to flank the heroes, trying not to provoke attacks of opportunity; 2 Nets (Rog2) burst through the shutters and swing in on ropes, provoking attacks of opportunity; heroes take 4th action.

Round 5: The Thugs and Knives will pair off and try to flank individuals to enable sneak attacks; the Nets will seek out spellcasters from behind the party and try to entangle them; heroes take 5th action.

Round 6: Kubris and Thurf arrive from downstairs to join the fight (Kubris is Molly’s murderer); Kubris tries to disarm the most threatening characters, and Thurf tries to crush the largest ones; heroes take 6th action.

Round 10: A Watch Patrol arrives downstairs (see the NPC Appendix for full stats).

Development

At this point, the party may be badly weakened or even dwindling in number, depending on the battles with demons and assassination attempts. The death of Molly, the serving girl, is a good pretense on which to integrate new party members. Depending on what the party lacks (magic, muscle, and so on), Rasputin and Fitch now have enough personal stake in the matter to want to join in the quest. At this point in the adventure, either NPC could become a permanent player character without derailing the plot.

Timed Encounter 3.2:
The Rivals Depart

Wherever the party is on the afternoon of the third day, allow them to hear of the Band of the Crimson Mantle and their mission below ground. A friendly NPC (Fitch or Rasputin) or an excited child on the run tells them that the “heroes” are going underground in search of the source of the demons. If the party chooses to attend, use the following:

As you reach the Market, you can see that the words of the citizens were true… half the city has turned out to see the adventurers off. A drain has been opened in the middle of the Market, and a huge knot of people crowd around it. An escort of Mist Watch soldiers looks on as the four adventurers in their red capes light torches and sling on their packs.

The half-elf cries out to the gathered crowd: “Friends, citizens, take heart, for the Band of the Crimson Mantle goes now to seek the source of your troubles. Do not fear for our safety; instead, prepare the feast for our return, for we will be victorious! Farewell!”

A huge cheer goes up from the crowd; the members of the Band raise their torches in salute and descend through the drain.

If the heroes scan the crowd, they may find the Angus brothers (Spot DC 18) watching the display with interest. Their sentiments toward the Band are unchanged: they believe the adventurers are good for the morale of the city, but doubt that they will meet with success. Stump is with them, but he is certain the Band will fail based on his assessment of them and his knowledge of dungeoneering.

The heroes may find themselves being looked at questioningly by those who know of their investigation. If the party had no idea that the underground caverns were involved, this event hands that information to them. More likely, they have found one or more of the secret entrances to the tunnels — something the Band did not find — and using the hidden entrances can save them time and energy. They may choose to abandon whatever leads they were following and pursue the Band, or they may continue with their detective work and discover advantages to aid them in their quest. The party may even disagree on the proper course of action — possibly leading to an interesting discussion over a few pints!

Timed Encounter 3:3:
Caught in the Act (EL 8)

This incident provides an opportunity to learn more about the activities of the Ebon Union and their connection to the demons. The party also gets another chance to learn about one of the secret entrances to the tunnels. Use this encounter any time late on the third day while the party is in or near the Market. Initiate it with secret Spot checks (DC 15) for the heroes to see if they notice cloaked figures descending a drainpipe from the roof of a house at the end of Grocer’s Lane.

As you pass near Dun Eamon’s market, an out-of-place movement catches your eye. Several black-garbed figures swiftly descend a drainpipe, one of them dropping a gunnysack to another as they go. Quickly, they scatter and disappear into the grey evening mist in the market.

A team of thieves from the Ebon Union has robbed the home of a wealthy merchant in the city; the party notices them as they leave the scene. Out of laziness and to avoid getting soaked, the burglars choose to disobey orders and head for the house of a wealthy merchant in the city; the party notices thieves and Gulik, a wizard who usually accompanies housebreaker heists.

2 Burglars, Rog2: CR 2; hp 6, 7; see the NPC Appendix for full stats.

2 Bolts, Rog2: CR 2; hp 6, 8; see the NPC Appendix for full stats.

4 Knives, Rog1: CR 1; hp 3, 4, 5, 6; see the NPC Appendix for full stats.

Jak’s Possessions: Jeweled collar worth 65 gp.

Tactics: The activities and reactions of the Ebon Union thieves and the actual location for this encounter depend on the heroes. The encounter begins when the party spots the thieves leaving the scene of the burglary. The heroes may decide to confront the thieves on the spot, or they might try to follow them back to their destination. Use opposed Spot and Hide checks to manage the shadowing pursuit through the market. The thieves’ initial reaction is the same regardless of location.

When they are accosted, either by force, by ambush, or by shouts, the thieves assume they have been spotted either by the Watch or by some private security faction. Their reaction is an attempt to escape with the booty. The Knives turn and stand to allow the Burglars to make a run for the nearest access point with the loot. The Bolts move past the Knives and take up firing positions to cover the retreat. Gulik follows the Bolts, stopping to use spells such as grease and web to discourage pursuit. If this encounter happens in the Market or at the scene of the crime (at the end of Grocer’s Lane), citizens scatter and cry for the Watch, and the thieves head for the drains in the Market (Areas F and G).

If the thieves are allowed to enter the Ironworks unmolested, they take up positions in the shadows of the shop to ensure they have not attracted any attention. If they are out of the Market and near the Ironworks when confronted, they attempt to draw their pursuers inside and dispatch them.

If the thieves have any time alone in the Ironworks, establish surprise using their Hide checks and the party’s Spot checks, but if the heroes are right behind them, begin combat immediately. From just inside the foundry (Area Q—4), Gulik casts web at the party so the Bolts can target them. The Knives work their way around the outside of the web to flank heroes who avoid or escape the area of effect, readying their actions if the entire party is entangled. Remember the special factors for fighting in and around hot forges (Areas Q—2 and Q—4).

Gulik and the others are determined not to reveal the secret entrance and do not enter the Storeroom (Area Q—7). If they are discovered, they fight to the death or attempt to flee into the city to hide. If the heroes dispatch them, they must draw conclusions about the significance of the Ironworks on their own.
Rumors in the City

In this mystery, the success of the heroes—and even the dicult of achieving it—is directly related to the depth of their investigation. The heroes should be prepared to ask lots of questions, follow up on answers, and constantly weigh the worth of the information they receive. The DM must likewise be prepared to adapt to unforeseen questions, make up answers, and humor the players as they pursue fruitless dead-ends. The rumors described below will help make this easier. These are general rumors; more specific facts can be found in the Mystery Elements section.

These rumors are categorized by subject for when the heroes are pursuing a particular topic, and the Gather Information DCs reflect the degree to which a particular rumor is common or rare. Be prepared to recycle and paraphrase the DC 5 and DC 10 rumors, because they represent the majority viewpoints of the community. Do not underestimate the significance of the rumor information, and be careful not to distribute too much at one time —limit one rumor per NPC unless otherwise indicated.

Rumor Subject

Unless the heroes are asking about one of the specific topics, randomize the subject.

Rumors about the Demons

DC Rumor

5   “The foreign merchants have always plotted to overthrow the brothers’ rule. I fear that this is their insidious doing.” (False. The Angus family has never been popular with foreign guilds, but they have no hand in the demonic infestation.)

5   “There’s a fine reward from Lord Angus for the body of a demon. You look like the kind of bunch to collect it.” (True. Angus is offering 50 gp for the body of what he defines as a demon, currently a dretch).

10  “I saw a dark, powerful figure skulking around town the other night… it seems to me it was over by the mill. With all the talk of demons abroad, I’d rather stay in at night, if you know what I mean.” (Mostly True. This man actually saw Gethrax leaving the mill on some nightly errand.)

10  “Someone says that one of the market drains was open this morning, with horrid claw marks all around.
Whatever it is that plagues us, it dwells beneath the streets.” (Mostly True. The claw marks are an embelishment, but an emerging dretch did leave the grate open.)

10  “An old legend tells of a demon prince who was imprisoned at the bottom of the pool below the falls.
I fear he has broken free and dwells deep beneath the city.” (False. The legend is a wives’ tale, although a powerful demon does dwell below the city.)

15  “I saw one of the beasts in the market one night, with my own eyes. Horrible and hunched it was, with a blubbery face and dripping lips. If I never see such a thing again, it will be too soon.” (True. This man saw a dretch.)

20  “I reckon it’s got something to do with that damned witch in the tower [i.e., Bannon]. Always with the flashing lights and smoke; she’s in league with them demons, and now she’s gone off to join ’em.” (Partly True. Bannon is responsible for the demons, but she has gone to eliminate them, not to join them.)

Rumors about the Underground

DC Rumor

10  “I don’t believe all the talk of demons underground.
They say there’s an underground river beneath the city, runs right down the middle. Nothing could live in those sewers.” (Partly True. The underground river is there, but so are many nasty creatures.)

10  “There’s a cesspit under the mill, where all the sawdust and grain hulls are thrown. They say it’s spawned its own life force.” (True. The caves below the mill are infested with sentient plants and fungi.)

15  “This city came under siege many years ago, and the heroes that saved it were buried in lavish tombs near the gates of the Keep. Those burial chambers are still under there…” (True. The catacombs are beneath the Market.)

15  “Every so often, somebody disappears without a trace, no bodies, no remnants. They say a tribe of evil, flesh-eating gnomes lives below the city.” (False. The gnomes are long gone, but their halls are now occupied by the Ebon Union. The body snatcher is more likely Gethrax, the blackguard.)

20  “It’s rumored that an ancient, forgotten race had a great city right under our feet, abandoned now, but still rich with treasures and fearsome traps.” (True.
The Ebon Union occupies the gatehouse of an old gnome city.)

Rumors about the Brothers

DC Rumor

5   “Them boys are the best thing that’s ever happened to this city, an’ I been here fer three generations of Angus law. Tough an’ fair, they are, bless ‘em.” (True.
This is the general sentiment toward the brothers.)

5   “There’s talk that Lord Arb and Captain Bron are feuding over Elinda Bannon. Now of all times, when we need them the most.” (False. Arb and Bron both
anything come before their responsibilities.)

10  “We’ve had some tough winters, an’ bad crops, but nuthin’ like this has ever happened. I can’t say I’m sure Lord Angus’ll see us through it.” (True. Some citizens are losing faith in their leaders in this time of troubles.)
TIMED ENCOUNTER, RUMORS, & MYSTERY ELEMENTS

Rumors about the Wizard
DC Rumor
5. "That crazy woman! Just look at what she's brought down upon us this time! Left just in time to save her own hide, too." (Partly True. Elinda Bannon is responsible for the demon problem, but she has left to solve it. This is becoming the majority view toward Bannon.)
10. "I don't care what the others say, she's always been a sweet girl. She lost her father so young and was raised the best that old gnome knew how, so it's no surprise she's a bit... eccentric." (True. This may lead the heroes to Stump, who can provide more insight about Elinda Bannon.)
10. "She used to work with Ulf Nine-Fingers, over at the Ironworks. They say he ain't been quite right since she left." (True. Elinda and Ulf collaborated on magic items, but now Lilith has seduced him.)
20. "I hear she has a secret laboratory, where she performs all sorts of strange experiments. Some folks say it's guarded by a dragon!" (Mostly True. Except for the dragon.)
20. "A couple of weeks ago, she came home from a long journey with something in a big strongbox. Things just ain't been right 'round here since then." (True. Elinda traveled far to acquire Mamuthok's Aperture, which began causing problems almost as soon as it arrived.)

Rumors about the Thieves or Robberies
DC Rumor
5. "It's the damned trade guilds. They've always envied our market, and I believe this is their effort to upset our economy." (False. The foreign merchants will exploit the circumstances, but they are not the cause.)
10. "They got old Herrick Mendon shook up real bad. I've heard he ain't been himself since all this started." (Mostly False. Mendon the Merchant has not been himself since Lilith seduced him.)
10. "Ha! Some thieves — they robbed the old halfling hag of her magic rock collection! Bet they were disappointed when they didn't turn out to be diamonds or something!" (True. The thieves did steal the seer's "magic rocks," which are not diamonds but mineral samples from other planes.)
10. "They hit Crenshaw's shop over at the Crafthall... if the Crafthall ain't safe, then nothin' is." (True. Crenshaw was not the only victim, however.)
25. "I heard they ran a buncha thieves outta Reme [or any large city in your campaign world]. Betcha them scoundrels set up shop here." (True.)
25. "The merchants say there's a gang of highwaymen robbing travelers on the road outside the city — perhaps they are moving into the city." (Mostly True. The Ebon Union has an allied wilderness counterpart.)

Other Rumors
DC Rumor
10. "Buncha kids wuz throwin' rocks at some sorta big lizard down on the rocks yesterday. Ain't never seen nuthin' like it. Mighty strange stuff afoot these days, mighty strange." (True. The children attacked a lizardfolk infant who had made its way out of the forest. Returning it unharmed to the tribe can win favor with the leaders; see the Wilderness Encounters Appendix and Area U in Chapter Three for details.)
10. "The girls who work at the baths are real disappointed. I guess Herrick Mendon quit bringin' his business in; he used to be good for a nightly massage." (True. Mendon has not engaged the services of the ladies since his first visit from Lilith.)
10. "They say a bunch of drunks broke into the herbalist's shop lookin' for wormwood juice. Oughta crack down on 'em, if ye ask me!" (Partly True. Caledon's shop was robbed, but it was thieves, not drunks.)
15. "Danver finally got himself a woman! Somebody seen her comin' outta the millworks the other evening." (True. It was Lilith leaving the building on business in the city.)

Mystery Elements
In this adventure, a great deal of information (and advantage) can be gained by thoroughly investigating a series of recent events. The guidelines for revealing information to the players are presented below using the "rule of three" as described in Chapter One. All pertinent NPCs are fully described and profiled in the appropriate Keyed Encounter locations, which are referenced below.

These clues, especially those regarding the thefts and the seduced citizens, can be introduced in several ways. The best way is to have the heroes draw their own conclusions from rumors and interviews (as in, "Hmmm. It sounds like a lot of people are 'acting strangely,' doesn't it?" or "Burglaries, huh? So who was robbed?"). If they gather too few rumors or ignore obvious leads, Raspitin, Arb Angus, and other NPCs can help fill in the gaps (i.e., "There has been a rash of burglaries lately. You should look into it."). Force-feeding your players the all the clues should not be necessary; just drop the first one in their laps (such as the wizard reference in Timed Encounter 1.2: The Lord's Offer or the thieves' guild reference in Timed Encounter 2.1: Raspitin Speaks Out) and see how far they can follow it.

The Crime Scenes
Three unusual crimes have occurred in the city since the disappearance of Elinda Bannon and the beginning of the demon attacks. All have certain elements in common: the thieves were efficient, seemed to know what they were looking for, and took uncommon items of questionable value. If the heroes investigate the three crime scenes carefully and interview the victims, they should be able to establish connections with some of the other components of the mystery, such as Bannon's activities and the corrupted citizens. The party may find out about these crimes... from listening to rumors or receiving tips from Lord Angus, Rasputin, or other citizens.

Visiting the Seer

In a cramped shop in the lower city, the heroes can find Amarathea the Seer (see Area N in Chapter Three for stats), one of the burglary victims. Lilith herself entered the shop soon after her arrival, looking for planar material to fuel her summoning device. When Amarathea is asked about the robberies, she responds as follows in her “little old lady” voice:

“I don’t know why anyone would want to rob a harmless old woman. There are those who mistrust my gift, but I’ve never done anyone any harm. They stole simple things, but things that were important to me. Money I can do without or get more of. But they left that and took some of my charms, my precious charms.”

If asked to describe her “charms,” Amarathea says they were all “trinkets from the far corners of this world… and other worlds as well”—meaning other planes. Some of the items were planar in origin:
- A chunk of iron ore from the Abyss
- A moonstone from a fortress on the Astral Plane
- A vial of soil from the fields of Elysium
- A piece of obsidian from the Elemental Plane of Fire

The other items were all mundane, common minerals from exotic locations (volcanoes, great canyons, other unique landforms) of the Material Plane. She wore them all on a cord around her neck, the chunks of stone, pendants, and little glass vials all rattling together. She believed that having them would help gain the favor of natives of those regions if she encountered them while “seeing.”

The collection included what Lilith hoped to find: the Abyssal ore, which she uses to establish the source plane for the creatures summoned with Mamuthek’s Aperture. The other items are still in Lilith’s possession and could also be used with the device. If the heroes deduce the nature of the artifact, knowledge of the Elysian soil can give them a powerful weapon.

While the heroes are visiting, Amarathea insists on performing a “seeing” for them; see Area N for details.

Visiting the Root-Cutter

Caledon (see Area T in Chapter Three for stats) is a druid who runs a small herbalist shop in the city. The thieves came here a few nights ago and made off with several organic components to use with Mamuthek’s Aperture. Caledon is not terribly perturbed at the incident, although the components were quite rare. When he is questioned, read or paraphrase the following:

“I always fancied myself the least likely to be burgled. People know that I take most of my work in trade and keep very little of value. It was the oddest burglary I could imagine; the items stolen were all body parts from exotic creatures that I experiment with in some of my preparations. I cannot imagine them being of any use to anyone else.

“Whoever they were, it seems they knew what they were doing. The Watch saw nothing, and there is always a patrol somewhere in the Market. They left not a mark on the gate on the shop, nor did they damage the vault when they opened it. That vault has a lock of my own creation on it—the most secure lock I have known.

“They took all the coin—about 80 gold ducats and a bag of powdered silver that I use for casting custom
If the heroes request to see the vault, Crenshaw asks them to step outside while he opens it (see Area H–9). It contains items jointly owned by him and Lord Angus, both raw materials and nearly finished products.

This conversation might suggest to the heroes that the thieves were well organized, skilled, and under orders to steal certain items. Also, this is an important occurrence of powdered silver. Characters making a successful Knowledge (arcana) or Spellcraft check (DC 15) will know that powdered silver is a material component used in several Abjuration spells, especially wards. In this instance, it is needed to establish the magic circle that is created when Mamuthek’s Aperture is activated. The knowledge that Bannon purchased silver here may help the party understand the device’s properties.

Lilith’s Thralls

Lilith has seduced three men of the Grey Citadel for the purpose of protecting and supporting her activities and those of the Ebon Union, which is also under her control. Clever heroes will observe that the three men have several common characteristics: they have no family; they are not known as being especially romantic; and they all have workplaces with deep basements — and entrances to the underground caverns. The party may find out about these men from listening to rumors or receiving tips from Lord Angus, Rasputin, or other citizens.

The Smith

Ulf “Nine-Fingers” Ironfist (see Area Q–4 in Chapter Three for stats) is the master smith of the ironworks. Lilith (in dwarven form) seduced him just after she took residence in the caverns. She needed his basement as an access point for her forays into the city to gather components for the operation of Mamuthek’s Aperture and later to allow the thieves of the Ebon Union to do the same. Ulf believes she is a clan chief’s daughter whose family has sworn to remain underground, where they feel dwarves belong. He thinks she plans to run away and join him on the surface, but for now he contents himself with periodic visits in the caves below the forge.

Speaking with employees at the forge (Area Q) might reveal certain clues that pertain to the mystery:

- Ulf has not taken up the hammer in several days (he is weakening, thanks to repeat visits from the succubus).
- He does not spend as much time on the forge floor as he used too (he is often underground or in his quarters dreaming of his love).
- He has made a few foolish mistakes in the little work he does do, such as mixing ores improperly or using the wrong furnace (also a result of his lost levels).
- He busies himself with odd projects (such as reinforcing the door to the basement).

The Merchant

Herrick Mendon (see Area H–4 in Chapter Three for stats) is the merchant who manages the Crafthall and storehouse for Lord Angus. Lilith chose him as a victim because he knew the sources she would need for her material supplies and because like Ulf Ironfist his basement had an opening into the caverns. Mendon believes Lilith is an agent from a foreign guild, sent to gather information about Dun Eamon’s markets and products, and she has promised him a lucrative position in the guild when they usurp control of the local economy. He has given up any information she has asked about, much of which is useless to her, but serves to conceal the important questions, such as where powdered silver can be found. They meet regularly in the basement storehouse.

Speaking with the tenant craftsmen upstairs (Area H) can shed some light on Mendon’s odd behavior of late:

- He has been oddly forgiving in his collection of late rents (he profits more from Lilith’s meeting than he does from skimming rent payments).
- He no longer harasses craftsmen about paying to draw the materials they need from the storehouse; he’s more insistent that they get what they want and get out (he is nervous that the site of his rendezvous might be discovered).
- He actually made a loan of a few silver coins to a man who asked in jest (he needed to clear his office to make it to a meeting with Lilith).

The Miller

Danver the Miller (see Area R in Chapter Three for stats) is the engineer who supervises the waterworks and runs the gristmill. He is a lecherous man whose weakness was easily identified and exploited by Lilith: women. She rarely appears to him in the same guise twice, and he is pleased with his apparent success with romance. Lilith needed access to his mill for an additional entrance to her caverns, and she also had him try to grind silver coins to supply her with powdered silver.

The stout laborers who move all the grain to and from the mill (Area R) have noticed changes in Danver’s personality of late and are willing to discuss them if asked:

- He does not heckle every farmer’s daughter that enters the mill with a bushel of wheat. In fact, he now chides them for “letting him get away” (since meeting various forms of Lilith, his newfound charm has made him confident).
- He is hardly seen around the taverns and inns he used to frequent (most of his evenings are spent preparing for and entertaining Lilith).
- He recently spent a large sum of money on the newest and gaudiest clothing and jewelry in Raiment Row.

Elinda’s Trail of Clues

Despite her hurried departure, Elinda Bannon left a careful trail of clues to her great mistake and her current activities. The clues are deliberately cryptic; Elinda is quite vain and wished to leave what information she could in case she failed, but in such a way that it would not betray her error if she were successful. The clues are also geared toward those close to her — namely, Stump and the Angus brothers — so the heroes must work hard to gain the information for themselves.

Before she left her ruined library, Elinda left a single sheet of parchment with a note on it, actually a secret page. Lying across the drawers of her toppled desk, the page radiates mild Transmutation magic and reads:

!wind Papa’s clock

!clean birdcage

Although the note reads like a “to do” list, these things are actually instructions on how to assemble three parts of a puzzle. Anyone who knows her well will recognize the connections: she loves to play chess (she plays with Cael once each week); she learned her first spells from her foster father (who never remembers to wind the clock she gave him); the birdcage is in the workshop (Stump and the brothers only know that the directions to the workshop are “in the desk”).

In each of these locations (Areas S, I–9, and L–9, respectively; see Chapter Three), Elinda has hidden a small scrap of unmarked fabric. Each scrap radiates an aura of Transmutation magic and is actually one of three fragments of an amulet that Elinda recovered and hid using the shrink item spell. When the scraps of fabric are dropped, they transform into the three broken shards of the amulet and radiate residual Abjuration magic. The amulet was the device that held the succubus imprisoned on her home plane, a device that ceased to function and shattered into three parts when Lilith was called through Mamuthek’s Aperture. Although its magic is gone, the amulet is engraved with the demon’s name — Lilith, a name that is abhorrent to her (see dungeon Area 4–12 for Lilith’s special vulnerabilities).

With each scrap of fabric is a small piece of parchment containing a short bit of poetry; Elinda intentionally disguised her advice so she could salvage her reputation. The three poems, if interpreted correctly, will reveal what little she understands about the device and its properties. Consider copying the poems onto separate sheets of paper as player handouts.

In the Workshop

One scrap of fabric and a poem are hidden in Elinda’s secret workshop (Area L–9). Stump and the Angus brothers only know that the directions to it are “in the desk.” Under the lining of the birdcage where her owl familiar roosts is an envelope. In it is the scrap (a shrink item, actually the left third of the amulet that bears the letters “L1”) and the following poem:

!Intent to reach across the void

Great thoughts to proffer and collect
Instead unpacked an Aperture
That every cloud could not protest.
With this poem, Elinda hopes the finder to realize that what she thought was a device for communication across the planes actually summoned a demon to her. She also alludes to the failure of the silver wards — the lining of "every cloud." She capitalizes the word aperture in reference to Mamuthek's Aperture.

At the Temple

In the courtyard at the Temple of Fortitude (Area I – 9) is a section of alternating black and white tiles used for large-scale games of chess. A small shed nearby holds the game pieces and an envelope with Elinda's clue. The envelope holds the right third of the amulet (with the letters "TH") in shrunk item fabric form. A piece of parchment bears a short poem:

From stony beach to mountain peak
To mighty marbled hall
These building blocks of worlds,
They choose
From whence it comes to conquer all.

In this poem, Elinda describes the role of minerals in deciding the source plane for the creatures summoned by Mamuthek's Aperture.

At Stump's Hovel

In the midst of Stump's cluttered shack (Area S) stands a finely crafted grandfather clock, a gift from Elinda to her foster father. In the case where the winding key is stored is another envelope. It contains the middle third of the amulet (with the letters "LI") in shrunk item fabric form, and another piece of poetry:

With the remnant of a thing that Once was living, choose the form
Of the beckoned creature stepping
From a worldly shimmering door.

Here, Elinda describes the other component for the operation of Mamuthek's Aperture: an organic item to determine the creature summoned.

When the three pieces of the amulet are collected and the name "Lilith" is read near the sheet of paper from the desk, the three clues fade and a secret page is revealed:

I know not what I have done, only that it is most frightening and unintentional. I fear that you read this now only because I have failed to set things right myself. In my attempt to communicate with beings from beyond our world, I have loosed a great evil upon our community. Wherever I must go now, I am sure that darkness waits for me. I can only hope for absolution in my success or forgiveness in my failure. I do not understand what manner of creature this is, only that the amulet you hold may be the only key to its destruction. Should I not return, you — whoever you are — must act to right my wrongs.

Elinda Bannon

Collectively, this information gives the heroes several important advantages. They can guess the identity of their ultimate foe (an evil being from another plane) and have gained a weapon to use against it (her true name). They can speculate about the involvement of Mamuthek's Aperture and how it works, and they can connect it to the burglaries. Also, they have some information that can help them begin to clear Elinda's name.
Chapter Three: Grey Citadel Encounter Areas

Dun Eamon is a bustling, vibrant frontier city, too large and complex to detail completely. Thus, the areas that will most likely draw the heroes’ attention during their investigation are described below. Most of the NPCs are simply good sources for rumors and other information, and others have links to potential further adventures. Areas in the city with a specific connection to the mystery include a reference to the Mystery Elements section in Chapter Two.

Area A: The Gatehouse

The party has no reason to linger here, but the unique nature of Dun Eamon’s defenses deserves description. The River Eamon flows swiftly here, spreading out across the broad basalt spillway. Across the shallow ford, the mighty gatehouse of the Grey Citadel peers out of the drifting mists like an open maw. A steep ramp from the ford approaches it, and a dozen armored men with pikes and shields flank its base. A portcullis stands half-raised at the front of the gatehouse; beyond that, heavy ironbound doors stand open as well. The top of it bristles with ballistae and the steel caps of sentries.

A constable always accompanies the Mist Watch unit that guards the gate. He questions every prospective visitor as to place of origin, duration of stay, and purpose of visit. He oversees the collecting of entrance taxes (1 sp per beast) and 1 sp per cart or carriage, to pay for upkeep of the walls, but requires no surrender or binding of weapons or other items.

The area just inside the gate always attracts more than its share of beggars, hired swords, and harlots, all waiting for caravans to enter or leave the city. Consider using the City Random Encounters Table in Chapter One as the party enters.

Mist Watch Gate Guard: 9 soldiers (War1; CR 1/2; hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2; CR 1; hp 15), 1 constable (Ftr3; CR 3; hp 24); see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Area B: The Public Stables

Located adjacent to the Caravan Camp (Area C), this long wooden building houses the public stables and is identified by an iron sign that trails rust down the stone walls. The smell of dry hay, oiled leather, and horses is dominant inside the stables. The air is warm from the body heat of the animals, especially compared to the cold drizzle outside. Down the row, a powerful stallion kicks and snorts. Stabling options are as follows: 5 sp for 1 day; 3 gp for 1 week; 5 gp for 2 weeks. Extra rations of oats and vegetables are available for 1 sp per day; grooming for another 1 sp per day.

Tad does most of the grooming and feeding at the stables; his uncle Edgar does the mending and bookkeeping. In addition, both are paid informants — nobody knows more about who comes and goes. Each evening, Edgar meets with a member of the Ebon Union at the Hole, who then reports to Devlin, who reports to Lilith. Tad reports to both Rasputin and Bron Angus, although each knows about the other. By the time the heroes have found lodging, nearly everyone of consequence in town will know of their arrival.

The stables have one other secret, and the heroes might be the first to find it out. One of the horses — a tall, powerful stallion — is not a horse at all. It is a polymorphed man named Weck, originally a warrior from a far-off land who ran afoul of a powerful sorcerer (Sor13) while infiltrating his domain. He has been sold several times (his owners usually find him difficult to handle) and is currently owned by a wealthy merchant in the city. Edgar and Tad are unaware of this oddity.

A druid or ranger making an Animal Empathy check (DC 10) will notice something distinctly odd and even unhorse-like about the stallion. Another character will do the same with a successful Handle Animal check (DC 25) or Ride (horse) check (DC 20). Anyone else will simply see frantic snorting and pawing. Only the horse’s vocal mechanism prevents Weck from communicating; he can understand Common perfectly well and is more than ready to play charades. A speak with animals spell is also sufficient.

Once communication is established, Weck will plead with the party to restore him, offering them anything, including servitude, if they will do so. A dispel magic spell (dispel check DC 24) will return him to his true form, including his non-magical armor, weapons, and supplies. If the dispel magic fails (and it may, given the party’s level), he will beg to be purchased or stolen so the heroes might try again.

Edgar (male human Com1; Handle Animal +4, Ride [horse] +2, Craft [leatherwork] +2) is a surly and bitter old man who runs the stables for Lord Angus only to settle his bar tabs and gambling debts.

Tad (male human Com1; Handle Animal +4, Ride [horse] +2) is Ezra’s cheerful nephew, who has a room in the hayloft.

Weck, male human War3 (polymorphed horse): CR 3; SZ L Animal; HD 3d8+9; hp 26; Init +1; Spd 60 ft.; AC 14; Atk +6 melee (1d4+3 [x2], hooves) and +1 melee (1d3+1, bite); Face/Reach 5 ft. x 10 ft./5 ft.; SQ scent; AL NG; SV Fort +6, Ref +4, Will +0; Str 16, Dex 13, Con 17, Int 10, Wis 8, Cha 9.

Skills: Jump +4, Search +7, Spot +7, Swim +4.

Feats: Endurance, Power Attack
Once restored, Weck will be extremely loyal to his saviors. He will also be unwilling to ride a horse except in the most extreme circumstances. In human form, he has the following profile:

Weck, male human War3: CR 3; SZ M; HD 3d8+3; hp 20; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 15; Atk +6 melee (1d8+1, longsword, crit 19–20); AL NG; SV Fort +4, Ref +1, Will +0; Str 14, Dex 11, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 8, Cha 9.

Skills: Climb +4, Intimidate +2, Jump +4, Swim +4, Ride (horse) +3.

Feats: Endurance, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (longsword).

Possessions: Chain shirt, longsword, dagger, small shield, adventurer’s clothing, bedroll, pouch with 23 gp and 12 sp.

Area C: The Caravan Camp

In the lower city, a wide area has been left clear of buildings for the maneuvering, loading, and unloading of the large merchant caravans that are always passing through the Grey Citadel. The stables (Area B) sit on one edge of the large merchant caravans that are always passing through the city. Beyond the stables, a wide stone ramp leads up to the upper city and the Market (Area E). Around the perimeter of the clearing, dozens of wagons are parked close together, many with tents slung between them.

The Caravan Camp is always a busy place. During the day, caravan laborers busily shift goods from the wagons to carts and handbarrows for delivery around the city, and replace them with the products the merchants have purchased from the local craftsmen. Some of the laborers are usually acolytes from the Temple of Fortitude (Area I). Any visitor with goods for trade is expected to visit Semonerion, the Chief Steward of the Angus clan (who is always accompanied by a unit of the Mist Watch). He assesses the suitability of the materials and assigns a tax based on their value: 10% for foreign merchants, 3% for residents of Eamonvale.

At night, bonfires are lit and spits of meat and kettles of stew are hung at the edges. Kegs are procured and opened; fiddles, flutes and drums are unpacked; and the singing, dancing, and gambling continue into the wee hours. The fierce rivalry between merchants of different trade guilds and dynasties often extends to their employees; fights are common here, as are contests of strength and skill such as wrestling, knife throwing, and lifting sacks of produce.

Most of the contraband transactions in the city take place here rather than in the Market. Greedy merchants often barter goods that are illicit under Angus laws, such as poisons, exotic spell components, narcotics, and slaves. Under cover of night, they buy stolen goods for a fraction of their value for resale in other cities. If the heroes wish to buy or sell any such goods, they will most likely be dealing with Kinnan the Dark.

A small, open shrine sits at the base of the slope leading to the Market. A small stone building with a small fireplace and a dozen cramped bunks, it is dedicated to the God of Roads and is maintained by the wandering clerics of that faith. There is a good chance that Brother Melph is here offering healing and counseling services to travelers. The shrine is enchanted with a permanent magical effect providing temperature and illumination equivalent to a Leonard’s tiny hut spell.

Rasputin mingles freely here during the day, considering the value of information as it trickles in from the road and following leads regarding his lost niece.

Finally, the Caravan Camp is a gathering place for mercenaries seeking employment as caravan guards, messengers, and even simple thugs. They usually lounge around outside the stable building, boasting, drinking, and heckling the laborers until their coin runs out and they are forced to find menial work themselves. Hireling NPC warriors can be found here and possibly a low-level fighter or two.

Typical Caravan Guards (male human War1; hp 8; AC 12; +1 melee or ranged; Handle Animal +2, Intimidate +2; Endurance, Toughness; light crossbow, longsword, dagger, leather armor, cloak, pouch with 3d6 sp) are usually hard at work during the day and hard at play during the night.

Typical Caravan Laborers (male human Com1; hp 6; Handle Animal +4; Endurance, Toughness; shoulder yoke or wheelbarrow, dagger, cloak, pouch with 2d6 sp) are usually hard at work during the day.

Temple Acolytes (male human War1; hp 6; Heal +4, Intimidate +4; Endurance, Great Fortitude; robes, leather arm bands with holy symbol) are faithful servants of the God of Strength. Acolytes may cast cure minor wounds once per day.

Semonerion (male human Exp 7; hp 26; Appraise +12, Knowledge [Eamonvale merchants] +7, Knowledge [regional trade] +10, Profession [bookkeeper] +10) manages the flow of goods through Dun Eamon’s markets.

Mist Watch City Patrol: 9 soldiers (War1; CR 1/2; hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2; CR 1; hp 15); see the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Kinnan the Dark, male elf Exp2/Ftr2: CR 3; SZ M; HD 2d6 plus 2d10; hp 19; Init +6; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14; Atk +6 melee (1d6, masterwork rapier, crit 18–20); SQ elven traits; AL NE; SV Fort +3, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 11, DEX 14, CON 10, INT 14, WIS 11, CHA 16.

Feats: Improved Initiative, Run, Weapon Finesse (rapier).

Possessions: Leather armor, masterwork rapier, platinum ring (35 gp), pouch with 24 gp.

Description: Kinnan is called “the dark” because of his jet-black hair and dark eyes. He is every bit the charlatan, able to go from smiling and friendly to serious and threatening in the blink of an eye. Kinnan is independent, but he has ties with the Ebon Union through Gorin, the smuggler and fence found at the Hole.

Brother Melph, male human Clr 5 (CR 5; hp 30) is a cheerful priest of the God of Roads who offers his clerical skills and traveling stories at the Caravan Camp. Brother Melph is one of several NPCs that can serve as a pre-generated or replacement character or as a temporary addition to or permanent part of the party. See the NPC Appendix for his profile.

Rasputin may question the party about its travels in hopes of finding new information about his niece, at the DM’s discretion. See the NPC Appendix for his profile.

Area D: The Market Tavern

This is one of the oldest stone buildings in the citadel, seated firmly on the bedrock slab that hosted the original trading post. It now stands on the edge of the market square, open all day and all night. The service here is not luxurious, but it is always friendly and reasonably priced. The food is hot and wholesome, the beer cold and plentiful, and the beds warm and dry. The menu attests to the concentration of dwarves in the community with its extensive selection of strong spirits and rich meads, as well as to the gnomes with several fine cheeses. Hostel style lodging is available for cheap, with private rooms also available. Services are as priced in the PHB; use the poor, common, and good lodging prices for the dormitory, bunkroom, and private room, respectively.

Exterior doors and ground floor windows are sturdy and secure (Hardness 5; hp 20; Break [DC 23]; Open Lock [DC 25]). All interior doors here are locked, except for unoccupied rooms and the dormitories (Hardness 5; hp 13; Break [DC 13]; Open Lock [DC 20]).

Area D–1: Coat Hall

A short corridor leads from the front doors into the common room. Its walls are covered thickly with coats, cloaks, and rain capes hung on wooden pegs. Rows of boots and overshoes line the floor, and two large barrels hold cudgels and staves. Searching the garments in the hall yields 2d10 cp and 1d4 sp.

Area D–2: The Common Room

The largest room in the inn has an open-beam ceiling that reveals the second story rooms. It is nearly filled with trestle tables, and on each side a staircase leads to the upper level. Heavy iron chandeliers that are anchored to heavy oak beams that support the upper floor light the room. A long bar occupies one end; behind it are doors to the kitchen and cellar. Opposite the entry, an enormous fireplace heats the room, and in the far corner an exit leads to a small woodlot. Other than the wee hours of the morning, dozens of customers and a continuous rumble of conversation are always in this room.

In addition to a large staff of 1st-level commoners, most of the following personalities will be present here or elsewhere in the tavern.

Fitch the Barman, male derv Ftr5 (CR 5; hp 52), is the Market Tavern’s grim dwarven barkeeper and keeper of the peace. Fitch is one of several NPCs that can serve as a pre-generated or replacement character or as a temporary addition to or permanent member of the party. See the NPC Appendix for his profile.

Agatha (female human Exp4; Profession [innkeeper] +7) is the owner and tavern hostess. She is a large, motherly woman who rules with a warm smile and an iron fist and carries a ladle in her apron strings to discourage rowdiness.

Molly (female human Com2) is a teenage girl who helps Agatha serve meals and drinks, but fancies herself an adventurer. To the chagrin of her employers, she spends every free minute listening to stories from the travelers and telling her own embellished tales of conquering the cellars with her knife “Ratsticker.” (Note: Molly has been bribed into informing for the Ebon Union; nobody else is aware if this, and her allegiances lead to her death during Timed Encounter 3.1: The Guild Strikes as described in Chapter Two. The charming, naïve girl should be seen as a victim of tragic times, so give the party ample time and role-playing opportunities to become fond of her.)

Horace (male human Com1) is a dim-witted lad who busses tables, washes dishes, and changes linens. He works tirelessly and is well liked by the staff and patrons; no one tolerates any teasing. Though he was never terribly clever to begin with, he is under the curse of a vacuous grimoire that he snuck a peek at while cleaning the room of an adventuring wizard; he still radiates a mild aura of enchantment.

Area D–3: Kitchen
Through the door to the right of the bar is the kitchen, which is dominated by two huge tables, a pantry, and another fireplace. An iron crane holds numerous kettles and cauldrons over the hearth. The pantry is stocked with dry goods of all sorts, and on the top shelf, a box labeled “peppercorns” holds 4 potions of cure light wounds. Two doors lead from this room into the small apartments for the staff.

Area D–4: Fitch’s Room
This room holds a small bed, a desk and chair, a chamber pot, and a washbasin. Fitch generally lives in squalor, hiding the product of running the tidy bar. His room is strewn with dirty mugs, clothing, and crumpled scraps of paper; he is in the process of writing his memoirs. In a locked chest are the more valuable trappings of his days as a dungeon delver.

The chest contains a partial map of a notorious dungeon (which you may use to introduce future adventures, if you choose), a suit of masterwork dwarven banded mail, a ring of protection +1, and a +1 keen greataxe, a ring of protection +1, a potion of heroism, an outline of his book, and a pouch with 85 gp.

Large Locked Chest: Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 28).

Area D–5: Agatha’s Room
This room has a canopy bed and a large desk, on which Agatha keeps the books for the tavern. The furnishings here are provincial but very tasteful; the proprietress wishes she could display her nice things in the common room, but she knows they would never last the night.

Area D–6: Taproom
The door to the left of the bar leads into a dim room where great casks sit on wooden racks. Also stored here are numerous smaller casks of spirits and bottles of wine. A trapdoor leads to the cellar, and a block and tackle is connected to the beam above to hoist the casks up from the cellar.

Area D–7: Cellar
The large cellar stores an extra cord of wood, large barrels of ale and cider, and crates of apples, potatoes, turnips, and carrots. A wooden loft holds sleeping quarters for Molly and Horace. A large rolling door opens onto the street behind, which is the setting for Timed Encounter 1.3: The Demons Attack (see Chapter Two).

Area D–8: The Loft
This wooden platform is raised off the damp floor and split into two small chambers, kept warm by the kitchen hearth overhead. Molly’s room is tidy and simple, with a pallet bed heaped with furs and a wooden box for her meager possessions, which include a rag doll from her childhood and her mother’s wedding veil. Horace’s room is cluttered with junk that he scavenges from all over the city. He has numerous broken tools, chunks of scrap iron, and rejected projects from the Crafthall. He also has a rusted longsword and a helm from a suit of full plate.

Area D–9: The Gallery
A sturdy railing protects intoxicated guests as they navigate one of two staircases to the gallery. A broad wooden walkway runs around three sides of the common room, lined with the doors to the guest quarters. The thick hemp ropes (Hardness 0; hp 4; Break [DC 26]) that support the chandeliers are anchored here.

Area D–10: The Dormitory
This large bunkroom is located on the upper floor. It is full of bunks stacked three high, and it echoes with the sound of snoring, night or day.

Area D–11: Small Bunkrooms
There are three of these rooms, which are more comfortably appointed than the dormitory. One is usually kept for individuals who want a bit more space but do not mind sharing. Agatha makes an effort to rent the others to groups, usually adventurers, mercenary companies, or the entourages of visiting merchants or dignitaries. Each one has six bunks, a table and chairs, a chamber pot, and a dressing screen.

Area D–12: Private Rooms
These rooms are nicely if not lavishly decorated. Agatha prides herself on the décor and always hesitates before renting one to a filthy adventurer fresh off the road (she always makes a point of how nice the baths are!).

Area E: The Market
The central area of the Market is a sea of carts, wagons, tents, and even semi-permanent wooden structures. The occupants are numerous and diverse, local and foreign, and sell every item imaginable. Most of them are aggressive salesmen and skilled negotiators; they will generally offer prices 30% higher than the listed cost in the PHB and be willing to negotiate down. Some of the merchants are listed below:
Tarsh the Cordwainer (male human Com1; Craft [rope and cord] +7) makes cord and rope with the help of his two sons. He brings his wares to market twice a week and returns with raw materials. His regular travels bring him lots of news; he knows 1 rumor from the City Rumors Table (see Chapter Two).

Gurt Anford (male human Exp3; Craft [woodworking] +12) is a merchant of 10-foot poles; he carries a bundle of them on his back as he walks around the market. He is actually an expert craftsman and makes several poles that disassemble for packing. He can list endless uses for a 10-foot pole; his favorite is “for reaching things you can’t reach with 9-foot pole.” Pole, 2 sp; collapsing pole, 1 gp.

Filip the Hatter (male half-elf Exp2; Alchemy +6, Craft [hats] +11) has succumbed to the noxious fumes from the liquid mercury he uses to shape felt hats of all sorts. He is no longer sane and will often insist that he “has a hat that cries out” for a particular character’s head and sit him or her down while he shapes it to fit. Hat or cap, 3 sp; the price triples for custom work.

Orin Potter (male gnome Exp4; Craft [ceramics] +9) is a skilled maker of clay pots, mugs, and other containers. He is very shaggy, nearly invisible behind his tangled beard, and spends all day at his peddler-driven pottery wheel muttering about how he should be given a shop in the Craft Hall and how much he hates Herrick Mendon.

Oberlin (male human Brd2; Knowledge [regional history] +6, Perform +7) is a juggler, acrobat, contortionist, and orator of colorful limericks who performs in the busy market. The heroes probably notice his flying props before they see him. He travels for most of the year and hears many stories; you may allow him to (a) know of the heroes and laud them with a fantastic tale, for which he will privately try to collect a fee; (b) give them a lead on a future adventure; (c) drop a rumor or two regarding this adventure.

Dora (female human Exp1; Craft [chandlery] +6, Innuendo +4, Sense Motive +5) and her three very attractive daughters (Frieda, Maika and Shara, all female human Com1) make and sell candles in front of their canopied cart. A peasant widow, Dora hopes to marry her girls well and provide a proper future for them. She disassembles and repackages her wares to better present them on her cart. She can list endless uses for a 10-foot pole. She can make colorful clothing for the poor and quilts to sell for food money.

Mert (female human Exp1; Craft [weaving] +4) is a toothless old gnome woman who weaves rugs and tapestries by hand. She is currently weaving a coat of arms for a local merchant and gladly takes commissions.

Logan the Furrier (male human Com1; Craft [tanner] +10) specializes in a rare elfen method of tanning hides that produces the supplest leather, which he stitches into customized, skin-tight garments.

Area G: Grocer’s Lane

This strip of carts and wagons borders the side of the Market opposite Raiment Row. Its merchants are more temporary, many of them are crofters who come to sell their produce once a fortnight. Meats, fish, grains, breads, fruits, and vegetables can all be purchased here, as well as dried rations, imported spices, and beverages of many kinds. A drain in the street here leads to dungeon Area 1-3. Many colorful characters do business daily in Grocer’s Lane:

Matilda (female human Com1; Profession [butcher] +6) is a large, red-faced woman in a bloodstained apron. She prepares and sells meat, fowl, and fish, as well as sausages and pickled organ meats. Her cart is right over the drain to facilitate cleanup; she knows the rumor about the claw marks and open grate.

Cedrix (male human Com1; Knowledge [food preservatives] +3, Profession [trader] +4) is a gaunt man who sells durable and easily preserved foods, including dried fruit, fish, and beef jerky; dry salamis; hard cheese; and unleavened bread. Most adventurers visit him before leaving town; he knows a rumor about the underground from them.

Ephraim (male halfling Exp1; Heal +6, Profession [trader] +6) always has his pony cart laden with bundles of spices, both domestic and exotic. Some of his spices have medicinal properties, including one that has the effect of a potion of cure minor wounds (5 gp, only 1 dose can be used per day).

Nik Ghoerkin (male human Com1; Knowledge [pickling] +4, Profession [merchant] +4) makes delightful pickles from the wild cucurbits that grow in the forest. His pickles are inexpensive (6 cp per jar), but could fetch a high price in foreign lands where such things are unknown. He also sells pickled eggs, garlic, pork knuckles, and onions.

Area H: The Crafthall

An earlier Lord Angus built this long, wooden building to create both working and mercantile space for the city’s craftsmen. It consists of a series of workshops facing each other across a wide corridor for the maneuvering of materials and products. Only the most capable and established artisans have shops here, and an appointment as an apprentice is the only way for a craftsman to gain entrance. Many of the products manufactured here are for export or are commissioned pieces for specific clients, and many of them are of masterwork quality.

The building is a noisy roar of men’s voices, clattering looms, and pounding tools. It is warm and dry here, and the smells of leather, wool, and freshly cut wood are thick in the air. The occupants are mostly men, all sturdy laboring folk with leather aprons and rough, calloused hands. At night, the exterior doors to the Crafthall are securely locked (Hardness 5; hp 20; Break [DC 23]; Open Lock [DC 30]). All interior doors and shop gates are locked as well (Hardness 5; hp 13; Break [DC 13]; Open Lock [DC 20]).

The party may come here while investigating Mendon the Merchant or the burglary at the Finesmith’s Shop. The craftsmen are generally willing to talk, as long as their work is not interrupted; see Mystery Elements in Chapter Two for their comments on Herrick Mendon and the tale of Crenshaw the Finesmith.

Area H–1: The Cooperage

In this shavings-strewn shop, casks and barrels of all sizes are manufactured, as well as wooden boxes and chests. A master and several apprentices work here, and they are capable of building secret compartments, false bottoms, and so on.

Area H–2: Carpentry and Woodwork

All manner of wooden goods are fashioned here, from furniture to fine walking staves. The master here can make scroll tubes of oiled hardwood that are strong, light, and waterproof (2 gp).

Area H–3: Bowyer & Fletcher

Two brothers who excel in the manufacture of bows and arrows (but not crossbows) staff this shop. Masterwork bows and arrows, composite bows, and mighty composite bows are all available, as are specialty arrows (hollow message compartments, 1 gp; whistling signal heads, 5 sp; glass vials, 2 gp; flammable, 5 sp; all have a –1 attack penalty). They know nearly everything pertaining to the wilderness area outside the city. They also make Arb Angus’ personal hunting bow and arrows, and regard him very highly (paraphrase rumors to that effect).

Gerg and Fej (male human Exp3/Rgr3; Craft [bowyer/fletcher] +10, Knowledge [local wilderness] +8) spent their youth in the surrounding forest and are expert hunters; anyone sharing at least 1 hour with them or buying them a drink gains a +1 information bonus to all subsequent Wilderness Lore checks in the Eamonvale region.
Area H–4: Mendon’s Office

In this small but finely appointed room, Herrick Mendon manages the entire Crafthall. He is employed by Arb Angus to purchase much of the raw material in bulk and resell it to the craftsmen; with the financial backing of the Lord’s coffers, he can afford large quantities and makes a profit for Angus while selling it to shops at the normal rate. All the materials, both raw and finished, are cataloged by him and locked in the vast storeroom beneath the workshops. A locked trapdoor reveals a narrow staircase to the storeroom (Area H–12).

Herrick Mendon, male human Exp9: CR 8; SZ M; HD 9d6; hp 30; Init +0; Spd 20 ft. (overweight and out of shape); AC 12; Atk +6/+1 melee (1d4, dagger, crit 19–20); AL LE; SV Fort +3, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 10, Dex 10, Con 11, Int 12, Wis 11, Cha 12.

Skills: Appraise +15, Bluff +15, Diplomacy +19, Forgery +5, Gather Information +11, Knowledge (economics) +13, Knowledge (regional markets) +9, Profession (merchant) +14, Ride (horse) +4, Sense Motive +10.

Feats: Skill Focus (Appraise), Skill Focus (Bluff), Skill Focus (Diplomacy), Skill Focus (Knowledge [economics]), Skill Focus (Profession [merchant]).

Possessions: Luxurious clothing, ring of protection +2, dagger, scales, magnifying lens, pouch with 65 gp and 30 sp, keys to Crafthall doors.

Description: Mendon is unscrupulous, miserly, and materialistic, but an excellent choice for the job he does. His appetite matches his purse, his girth is perhaps the greatest in the city, and he is almost always eating some delicate confection or exotic grilled treat.

Note: Mendon has gained 4 negative levels as a result of Lilith’s embrace. Apply a –4 penalty to his skill and ability checks, attack rolls, saving throws, and effective level. For simplicity’s sake, Mendon has failed all his Fortitude saves to determine permanent level loss; Lilith’s frequent visits have not given him the chance to recover. The DM can make those checks if Mendon will be used in the future. For details on energy drain effects, see Chapter 3 the DMG.

Locked Wooden Trapdoor (to Area H–12): 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 18); Open Lock (DC 30).

Area H–5: Leather Goods

This shop is geared toward the manufacture and sale of leather products including satchels and bags, clothing and armor (leather, studded, or hide). Elaborate book covers, scroll tubes, map cases, quivers, and scabbards are all available as well. They also manufacture the highly heat-resistant work clothing for the forges; for a 20% increase in price and weight, any leather clothing or armor can be made to grant fire resistance (1).

Area H–6: Book Binder & Parchment Maker

A wizened old gnome and his assistants run this foul smelling shop, where great vats of pulp simmer over red-hot brazier. The gnome offers parchment, paper, and books (including spellbooks) of many sizes, some with masterwork latches or locks on the cover.

Area H–7: Tinsmith

Tin, bronze, copper, and other metals are shaped into implements and utensils in this hot, smoky shop. Cutlery, pots and pans, containers, and decorative coverings are all made here.

Area H–8: Weaver

Several massive looms clatter back and forth in this large area, manned by many workers. Three supervisors oversee the blending of colors and patterns. Only large quantities of trade-quality fabric can be purchased here.

Area H–9: The Finesmith (EL 5)

Crenshaw the Finesmith avoids taking jewelry commissions, focusing instead on decorative items, weapon hilts, frames, book covers, fasteners, and any other item requiring intricate metalwork. He collaborates regularly with other craftsmen, adding their skill to his to produce the magnificent wares displayed in this small shop. His apprentices make jewelry settings for the gnomes in Area H–10.

Crenshaw was also the victim of one of the burglaries, which may be the reason that draws the party to the Crafthall. All of his powdered silver was stolen from the locked, trapped vault built into the floor. See Mystery Elements in Chapter Two for his comments.

Crenshaw the Finesmith, male human Exp11: CR 10; SZ M; HD 11d6–22; hp 26; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 11; Atk +7/+2 (1d4–1, dagger, crit 19–20); AL LG; SV Fort +1, Ref +4, Will +7; Str 9, Dex 12, Con 7, Int 12, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills: Appraise +10, Craft (armorsmithing) +8, Craft (gemcutting) +11, Craft (locksmith) +13, Craft (metalwork) +17, Craft (weaponsmithing) +8, Knowledge (arcana) +13, Knowledge (geology) +9, Knowledge (metallurgy) +17, Open Lock +10.

Feats: Skill Focus (Craft [locksmith]), Skill Focus (Craft [metalwork]), Skill Focus (Knowledge [arcana]), Skill Focus (Knowledge [metallurgy]).

Possessions: Monocle, masterwork craftsman’s tools, 3 keys to the floor vault.

Description: Crenshaw is a slender man with a bad stutter and a permanent squint from wearing his monocle. He is a master craftsman of all detailed metalwork and any craft that requires it.

Trapped Iron Floor Vault: 2 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 40; unique triple lock). The lock consists of three keys that must be turned in a particular order to avoid arming the trap. Contains 80 gp, 12 silver ingots worth 20 gp each, silver wire worth 20 gp, gold leaf worth 80 gp, gold wire worth 100 gp, 6 gold ingots worth 60 gp each, a platinum ingot worth 200 gp, an envelope of mithral chips worth 200 gp, 6 works in progress (sword hilts, latches, book binding, and so forth) worth 2d6 x 10 gp in materials.

Vault Trap: CR 5; opening vault without using 3 keys in proper order triggers lightning bolt (9d6 points of electricity damage); Reflex save (DC 17) for half damage; Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28); can only be or Disabled from inside the vault or by opening the vault lock (Open Lock DC 40).

Area H–10: The Gemcutter’s Shop

Entirely staffed by gnomes, the gemcutter’s shop is a hushed and secretive place amid the clatter and bustle of the Crafthall. In addition to selling their own precious stones, the gnomes will consider buying stones as well, cut or uncut, provided they are worth at least 500 gp in their finished state.

Area H–11: The Lift

At the far end of the Crafthall is the huge lift used to move heavy loads of materials into and out of the storeroom. A sturdy gated railing to prevent accidents surrounds a 10-foot by 10-foot lift. That section of floor is reinforced with heavy beams and connected at each corner to block and tackle with thick hemp ropes. The ropes can be tied off to iron cleats for loading and unloading, but the lift is always stored in the lowered position. A Strength check (DC 25) is required to raise the lift; up to 4 characters can contribute their Strength modifiers in addition to the +2 circumstance bonus for cooperation. One character must make a Rope Use check (DC 12) to secure the lift. Should the lift fall on anyone, it deals 11d6 points of crushing damage unless a Reflex save (DC 15) is made. At night, a sturdy set of double doors are closed over the opening and padlocked by Mendon.

Locked Wooden Doors (to Area H–12): 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 20; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 30).

Area H–12: The Storeroom

This massive warehouse takes up the entire lower level of the Crafthall. All raw materials and finished goods are stored here: lumber, bales of wool, refined metals, furniture, bolts of fabric, barrels, and boxes are all around. Half of this level is below ground, and a wide ramp leads up to double doors opening onto the Market. A staircase leads up to a trapdoor to Mendon’s office (Area H–4), which is locked from the other side. The large doors above the lift are also locked from above at night (see Area H–11).

Mendon keeps watch over an entrance to the underground caverns hidden in this storeroom. The passageway is concealed under the flagstones directly beneath the lift. As the lift is always stored in the lowered position and is the flagstones are not a good place to be while the lift is in use, the secret passageway is fairly safe. To discover the entrance, the party will need to open the large double doors above and raise the lift. With the lift raised, a Search check (DC 15) is needed to locate the loose paving stones in the floor. When the stones are lifted, a rush of moist, stale air is released — an indicator of the flooded crypt below. The opening leads to dungeon Area 1–4.

Area I–1: The Entry Vault

This chamber is built from huge blocks of grey stone, but floored with imported marble. On the sides of the short corridor are six massive statues of the God of Strength, facing inward. Two of the six are actually stone golems, enchanted by an earlier priest to protect the Temple; they periodically rearrange themselves and the other, inert statues. They are activated by a command word known only to Cael or one of his ranking clerics, one of which is always in attendance. They also animate automatically if any of the holy relics are removed without Cael’s authority, if a weapon is drawn in anger anywhere in the Temple, or if any magic other than that granted by the patron god is used there.

Stone Golems (2): CR 11; hp 77; see the MM.

Area I–2: The Chamber of Worship

The Temple sits in a large open section in the lower city. A majority of the population of the Grey Citadel worships the God of Strength, as do most of the hardy farmers, hunters, and trappers who live and work beyond the city walls. Strength, endurance, and perseverance are requisite qualities for survival in the harsh landscape of the frontier, and the congregation and clergy of the Temple of Fortitude embody such qualities and more. Part of the recent success of the Temple is due to the leadership of Cael Angus, the young Master and spiritual leader (see the NPC Appendix). He has developed a way to support the Temple with a minimum of required tithes: while not engaged in training, meditation, or maintenance, acolytes from the Temple hire themselves out as stevedores in the Caravan Camp. The merchants are glad to have a workforce that is strong, diligent, and not too eager to head for the taverns, and the acolytes give most of their earnings to the Temple coffers.

While the investigation of the mystery may lead the party here, the Temple does not play a major role in this adventure. Enough information is provided here to support the plot, but mapping the area and developing further personalities for its inhabitants are up to the DM. In addition to the acolytes, a few clergies are always on hand to deal with emergencies of faith or injury.

Temple Acolytes (male human War1; hp 6; Heal +4, Intimidate +4; Endurance, Great Fortitude; robes, leather arm bands with holy symbol) are faithful servants of the God of Strength. Acolytes may cast cure minor wounds once per day.

Clerics of Strength: In the event that a cleric becomes involved in your game, use the templates from Table 2–35: NPC Cleric in the DMG for clerics from 1st to 5th level. Generally, Cael Angus (see the NPC Appendix) is available to minister to the needs of the public.

This vast room is bare of any decoration except for a massive symbol of the God of Strength opposite the entry. There are no pews or benches, only a bare stone floor on which to conduct the rituals and tests of strength and physical prowess that constitute the acts of faith for the devout. Wrestling matches, strength training, combat training, and sparring bouts are all held here; no activity is sacrilege unless it shows weakness under the gaze of the patron deity.

Columns run the length of the chamber, supporting the vaulted ceiling. Between the columns are doors leading to Areas 3 through 9. Above the doors, huge windows let the grey light filter in. A few acolytes are always here, either training or performing maintenance tasks and who can welcome the heroes and summon Master Cael at their request.

Area I–3: The Chapel

This small room is decorated with a few finely crafted tapestries of various trials of strength. A dozen stone benches are arranged before a simple altar. This chapel is reserved for silent meditation or important rituals.

Area I–4: The Dormitory

In this long, narrow room are the beds and personal effects of the Temple's acolytes. Each bunk has a rough woolen blanket and straw mattress, and the footlockers hold only the most basic personal items.

Area I–5: The Priest's Quarters

These simple rooms allow the clerics of the God of Strength space and privacy for their chosen studies and meditations. Each one holds a bed, wardrobe, washbasin, and chamber pot. Most have a small bookcase with the cleric's personal writings and a few treasured books detailing the many instances of manifestation of avatars of their deity. One bookcase is kept vacant for visiting clerics of the same (or even a sympathetic) faith.

Area I–6: Cael's Quarters

The Master's chamber is as stark as the rest of the Temple. He has a wardrobe with his ceremonial clothing and a large table covered with correspondence, research, and notes. A large chest holds his most precious holy icons and texts. He sleeps on the same type of straw mattress as the acolytes.

Area I–7: The Refectory

In this long chamber, the priests and acolytes prepare and eat their meals. Long tables and benches run down both sides of the room. A huge fireplace dominates one end of the room, including a roasting spit, bread ovens, and a smoking cabinet. The occupants of the Temple cook and clean for themselves, making food on long tables and washing in an enormous cauldron on the hearth. A trapdoor in the floor leads to the cellar, where dry goods are stored.

Area I–8: Storeroom

In this tiny, neat room the priests store all manner of training devices for use in the Chamber of Worship. Wooden weapons, padded armor, weights, climbing ropes, and all sorts of strength building aids can be found here.

Area I–9: The Courtyard

This enclosure provides another venue for meditation. It also hosts the Temple's vegetable and herb gardens. Several stone benches situated under fruit trees allow space for reflection. A black and white tile patio serves as a board for games of chess; the oversized game pieces are in a small shed (which also holds one of Elinda's clues, as described in the Mystery Elements section of Chapter Two).

Area J: The Garrison

The garrison is a large, two-story wooden building on a stone foundation. It is big enough to house, feed, and train the members of the Mist Watch. Bron and the high-ranking officers have quarters here, and the building also holds an armory and a jail.

The Garrison is not intimately involved in this adventure. It is a likely location for a meeting with Bron Angus (see the NPC Appendix) or a sure destination for heroes who make trouble in the city. It consists of several large dormitories, an armory, a training ground, a cell block, and a mess hall and quarters for the officers and commanders. Use the stats in the NPC Appendix for encounters here, but any further development is left up to the DM.

Area K: The Keep

The castle and keep of the Angus clan are not integral to the plot of this adventure. This description offers a venue to meet with Lord Angus; any further exploration is beyond the scope of this module and left to the DM.

Area K–1: The Gatehouse

The gate usually stands open during the day, guarded by a Mist Watch patrol. A steward is always here as well, handling castle business and taking requests for audiences with Arb Angus. As often as not, however, Angus is here himself, meeting with his citizens in an informal manner, though important issues are discussed within the castle walls.

The Gatehouse is easily defended with an array of arrow slits, murder holes, two sets of ironclad doors, and a portcullis, which is closed at night. Use the description of the city gatehouse (Area A) for more details.

Area K–2: The Garrison

The Mist Watch City Patrol: 9 soldiers (War1; CR 1/2; hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2; CR 1; hp 15), 25% chance of 1 constable (Ftr3; CR 3; hp 24); 10% chance of 1 Mist Mage (Wiz4; CR 4; hp 17). See the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Area L: The Wizard's Tower

Elinda Bannon's tower is situated on the parapet wall just below where it joins the castle wall. Her family has lived there for several generations — for as long as they have been loyal servants of the ruling family. Elinda is the first generation in two centuries not to serve the Angus clan directly as a steward, bailiff, or in some other official role. Instead, she provides counsel to the brothers on the various elements of arcane magic and its relationship to government.

The tower itself has been heavily modified to suit Elinda's needs as a wizard. She keeps only a small apartment on the second floor; the rest is dedicated to her research. The entire tower is extensively warded against intrusion, as the heroes will likely find out if and when their investigation leads them here.

A wealth of treasure here might reward heroes that survive the defenses, but they will have to answer for it if Elinda is rescued (see Chapter Eight: Resolution).

A flight of stairs leads up to the parapet wall from the edge of the city neighborhoods. Citizens are not permitted on the wall, so the Mist Watch patrols present the first line of defense for Elinda’s tower. Heroes intending to enter must possess a writ of admittance from Lord Angus or be willing to approach using stealth under cover of darkness or distraction. Angus is not unwilling to authorize the heroes to enter if their investigation is proceeding well, but he warns them that he can do nothing about the wards.

Mist Watch Lookouts (2): CR 1; hp 9; see the NPC Appendix for complete stats. These soldiers are quick to summon a full Mist Watch City Patrol or Mist Watch Night Patrol at the first sign of trouble, from outside or inside the city walls.

Area L-1: The Hallway of Doors (EL 10)

A locked iron door seals the entrance to the tower. Opening the door by any means other than the single magical key (in Lilith’s possession) arms all the traps on the approach to Elinda’s apartments.

The lowest level of her tower has been reworked into a long, winding corridor divided into sections by normal wooden doors. This corridor is sprinkled with single-use traps that range from mildly embarrassing to potentially deadly. In some cases, the doors themselves are trapped; in others, the spaces between them are trapped. Each time a trap is triggered, a magic mouth (in the form of perfect, red female lips) appears to speak to command words. Spellcraft can be used to discern the spell as normal, but dispel attempts only eliminate the magic mouth, not the spell connected to the trap.

Locked Iron Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 30); radiates magic.

Wooden Doors (6): 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 13; Break (DC 13).

Door 1. Stepping through this doorway triggers a teleport trap.

Teleport Trap: CR 6; results in teleport and change self; Will save (DC 17) negates; Search (DC 30); Disable Device (DC 30). The victim of this trap is immediately teleported into the middle of the Market (Area E). In addition, the victim is colored purple from head to toe as if by a change self spell. The Mist Watch is familiar with such occurrences.

Door 2. This door is unlocked, but when it is opened, the trapped floor in front of it (where the party presumably stands while opening the door) turns from rock to mud and then quickly back from mud to rock, trapping half-sunken intruders.

Rock to Mud to Rock Trap: CR 5; no attack roll necessary for mud; Reflex save (DC 17) avoids rock; Search (DC 30); Disable Device (DC 30). When the transmute rock to mud spell is triggered, the heroes automatically sink to waist depth. Characters have 1 round to try to find some way out of the mud — levitation, flight, and climbing are all potential solutions. At the beginning of round 3, the transmute mud to rock spell is triggered and the floor reforms into solid stone. An Reflex save is permitted to avoid being trapped by this change. Characters so trapped must be excavated, reduced, magically transported, or removed by some creative means (such as sneaking out of plate mail and then removing it piece by piece). An Escape Artist check (DC 30) is also possible.

Door 3. An iron key hangs on a chain next to this unlocked door. Reading the cloth tag ("unwelcome") on the key for this door triggers the suggestion trap.

Suggestion Trap: CR 6; spell suggests "go report your commendable activities here to the commander of the garrison"; Will save (DC 14) negates; Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28).

Door 4. This door is the recipient of several Leomand’s trap spells: one on the knob, one on the hinges, and one on the frame. These traps are not dangerous, but they are intended to help Elinda identify intruders.

Leomand’s Trap (x3): CR 2; triggers visual imprint; Search (DC 22); Disable Device (DC 22). Each time a Leomand’s trap is triggered or disarmed, a combination of arcane eye and silent image "photographs" the room. The silent images appear in Elinda’s workshop (Area L–9), so the party may be surprised to see evidence of their entry when they get there.

Door 5. Turning the knob on this door triggers the spell effect trap. The door is not locked, but it opens from the hinged side (that is, backwards).

Maximized Burning Hands Trap: CR 2; 10-ft. semi-circle of flame (20 points of fire damage); Reflex save (DC 11) for half damage; Search (DC 26); Disable Device (DC 26).

Door 6. This door is unlocked and untrapped, but the floor beyond it hides a pit trap.

Elemental Pit/Summoning Trap: CR 5; no attack roll necessary; 20-ft. pit with water elementals; Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 20/29); Disable Device (DC 22/29). A pressure plate in the floor triggers this pit trap. A pair of 10-ft. x 5-ft. doors open (total area 10 ft. x 10 ft.) under the heroes, dropping them 20 feet into a cistern in the city wall. All characters in that area must succeed at a Reflex save (DC 20) to avoid dropping into the pool, which is 10 feet deep. On the second round, a heavy beam on two chains swings down from the ceiling, striking anyone still behind (on the entry side) of the pit; it deals 1d6 points of damage and requires another Reflex save (DC 15 + 1 per point of damage inflicted) to avoid the pit. Apply a –1 penalty to Swim checks per 5 lbs. of equipment, and remember the Drowning Rule from the DMG. On the third round, a summon monster IV spell is triggered, summoning 1d4+1 Small water elementals into the cistern.

Small Water Elemental (1d4+1): CR 1; hp 11; see the MM.

Tactics: The water elementals rise up and attack the round after they are summoned. They use their slam attacks to batter the heroes. If an elemental hits the same character on 2 successive rounds, it pushes that character up against the wall of the cistern; any attacks from then on deal 1d4 additional points of subdual damage, and a successful Swim check (DC 13) is needed to get away from the wall. The summoned elementals remain for 8 rounds before disappearing.

Area L–2: The Stairwell

Area L–3: Corridor

Area L–4: The Sitting Room

This is a simple, neat room in which Elinda entertains prospective clients and longtime friends. It holds comfortable horsehair chairs, potted plants, and a small bookcase filled with a few books on non-magical subjects. With the help of unseen servants, Elinda can rearrange this room for a dinner party when the mood strikes her.

On the wall amid several oil paintings of family members is a wooden plaque (Spot DC 10); it bears no inscription, only two brass hooks. This is where Elinda’s foster father’s +1 keen short sword hung until she took it as she left (the other part of the matched pair is in Area S: Stump’s Hovel). A Search check (DC 18) reveals that the lacquer is faded around the outline of a sheathed sword.

Area L–5: The Kitchen

Elinda’s kitchen is small but functional. A fireplace in a corner has an opening in the chimney to her bedchamber. A tall table and stools provide an area for food preparation and dining. A wooden pantry holds her food supplies, mostly dry goods bought in bulk for her long journeys. On the table are a full water skin, some small crusty loaves, and a cheese wrapped in wax that Elinda prepared for her mission but then left behind to save weight. Also scattered around are several open sacks and boxes of food, salted herring, nuts, and dried fruit — more evidence of her frantic packing.

Area L–6: The Bedchamber

Elinda’s bedchamber is back-to-back with the kitchen, sharing its chimney. She has an elegant canopy bed, a large wardrobe, a large chest, a dressing screen, and a washbasin.

The wardrobe is filled with her everyday working garments (leather breeches and linen shirts), her traveling clothes, and a few fine gowns. A dressmaker’s mannequin stands inside wearing nothing but a non-magical leather cap with an iron band around it (she took the rest of her suit of magical leather armor when she left).

The locked chest contains Elinda’s family heirlooms. In it are the symbols of office of previous agents of the Angus family.
Large Locked Chest: Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 28). Contains various badges of office (an amulet, a circlet, a scepter, and so on), collectively worth 700 gp in materials alone and much more to an antiquarian with an interest in the region; a pouch with 500 gp; a large emerald (800 gp); a rod of solid platinum (200 gp); and a small pouch of mithral shavings (30 gp).

Area L–7: Privy
A small chamber past the parlor holds a simple privy. A few books sit on a small stand; one of them is false and holds a potion of neutralize poison.

Area L–8: The Library (EL 8)
This room holds Elinda’s extensive library, now in disarray from her battle with Lilith. The large, circular chamber is a picture of destruction. The finely carved bookshelves that once encircled it have been smashed into kindling, and books and papers are strewn in shin-deep piles from wall to wall. Visible amidst the wreckage are kindling, and books and papers are strewn in shin-deep bookshelves that once encircled it have been smashed into disarray from her battle with Lilith. The large, circular door, all upended and badly damaged. Many clues to the ornate writing desk, a rolling ladder, a divan, and a side-board, all upended and badly damaged. Many clues to the mystery can be found here, as well as the secret needed to find and unlock the door to Elinda’s workshop. Sorting through the literature on the floor is a week’s worth of work, and non-magical texts exist on every possible subject, in no particular order. Randomly generate the subject of any volume picked up off the floor, as appropriate to your campaign world. Other contents of the room, however, are more useful.

The sideboard has been overturned, but most of its contents, in crystal decanters, are intact (total value 300 gp). Elinda kept a valuable stock of spirits on hand for when her gnome mentor (Stump) could be talked into a visit. She also kept a few potions here for easy access; she took most of these when she left, but in her rush she took the cognac and left a single potion of cure serious wounds.

The divan, once comfortably stuffed and upholstered in red velvet, now has a large “X” slashed into the middle cushion. Beneath the stuffing is a wooden panel (Search DC 18) with a recess that is best described as “a large ‘T’-shaped indentation with a curved top and a dozen small holes on either side.” This is where Elinda kept her crossbow and magical bolts, and she took them in a hurry when she left to pursue Lilith.

The greatest wealth of information can be found on the desk, which lies on its back in the middle of the room. A single sheet of paper, which radiates mild Transmutation magic, lies across the drawers (a hint that it was left after the desk was tipped). This is an important clue; see the Mystery Elements section in Chapter Two for a full description.

The desk also conceals the secret of Elinda’s hidden workshop and is extensively trapped against intruders. The paneled front of the roll-top is stuck. There are two knobs on the front that tear free when forced (Strength check DC 10) so that two tanglefoot bags mounted inside burst forth, automatically hitting the character or characters who forced the desk. A hidden catch (Search DC 20) opens the desk without breaking the bags.

Once the top of the desk is opened, the assortment of quills, parchments, and spilled ink is a mess, but the blotting paper is the only thing that appears to have stayed in place. It is lightly stuck to the desktop with adhesive and comes free easily. On the underside are a few words in elegant script that read, “When nimble fingers come to try, I beg them stay, to answer why,” and include a sepiatone sigil. On the panel below the blotter is a lock, which is broken, but the key hangs from a satin ribbon on a small nail inside the desk (Search DC 5). If the key or any other sharp object is inserted into the keyhole, it bursts a bladder of carrion crawler brain juice, spraying the user. Using the key in this way does nothing to release the arcane lock that secures the panel.

When the panel is finally removed by magic or force, a carved message on the underside reads “Welcome” and triggers explosive runes, which will be especially dangerous to anyone whose save is penalized or denied due to entanglement, immobilization, or paralysis.

Tanglefoot Bag Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary; victim entangled (~2 attack, ~4 Dexterity) and immobilized for 10 minutes; Reflex save (DC 15) for half speed movement; Break (DC 27) or deal 15 hp slashing damage; Search (DC 15); Disable Device (DC 22).

Sepia Snake Sigil Trap: CR 4; strikes nearest living creature; victim immobilized for 1d4+9 days; Reflex save (DC 14) negates; revealed with detect magic; removed with dispel magic (DC 16); Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28).

Carrion Crawler Brain Juice Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary (paralysis); Fortitude save (DC 13) negates; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 25).

Arcane Lock: CR 3; Break (DC 23); dispel magic (DC 20) removes; knock releases for 10 minutes.

Maximized Explosive Runes: CR 4; explosive blast (36 points of fire damage); no save for triggering party, Reflex save (DC 16) for half damage in 10-ft. radius; Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28).

This arrangement may seem excessively frustrating (or deadly), but it is with good reason. Beneath the false top is one of a pair of ring gates, one of Elinda’s most prized magical items. It is built into a wooden recess just the right size, and through it the stone floor of her workshop is visible. Her workshop is actually a tiny cottage located miles away in the middle of an impassable bog (see Area L–9). The other ring is built into the underside of a table in the workshop. When Elinda steps through the top of her desk, she drops to the floor in the workshop. She crafted a belt of reduction (see the New Items Appendix), which allows her to use the ring gate more than once each day. She took this belt with her, so the heroes will need to find their own means of fitting through (Note: the limits of the ring gate may strand some or all of the heroes on either side, depending on their combined weight).

Area L–9: The Workshop
Elinda’s laboratory and workshop are hidden nearly 80 miles away from Dun Eamon. She keeps a small cottage (built with fabricate and unseen servants) in the middle of the Trackless Mire, a notorious peat bog that is inhospitable to all. No crofters or trappers cross its marshes, no predators hunt its moors; in fact, with the exception of its rich bird and insect life, nothing is there at all — truly a perfect place for a secret retreat. The floor is stone, the walls paneled in wood, and the roof is of thatch. Two closed windows and a well-made door keep out natural light; outside, a gentle wind rattles the shutters. Like the library, books and papers are strewn about, as well as bent and twisted metal, shattered glass, splashes of colored liquids, and a battered birdcage. The walls, floor, and ceiling are scored with sooty black lines in an irregular, feathery pattern.

If the heroes open the door or windows, they will see that they are no longer in the city, nor is it even visible. Instead, they see only a bleak moor covered with wind-blown heather and the occasional outcropping of rock. Travel across the moor is dangerous due to hidden caves, deep bogs, and sinkholes. It is 50 miles in any direction to the nearest settlement and 80 miles to Dun Eamon. No navigational landmarks are visible in the drifting mist.

Elinda’s workshop was the place where she did most of her tinkering, both experimenting with ancient magical items and devising items of her own creation. She kept here the portion of her massive library that pertained to her current projects. On the wall are three wooden frames holding silent images that probably show the party struggling with the Leomand’s traps in Area L-1. These are invariably poor images and depict the party picking and scratching where they should not be. The frames can be destroyed, but nothing short of that removes the images.

Two long benches stand along opposite walls, covered with tools, dirty dishes, bits of broken mechanical components, and grease-stained notes. A table in the middle of the room (the one with the ring gate in the bottom) is covered with books, scrolls, loose papers, and wooden crates (of more papers). The birdcage is empty, but holds one of Elinda’s clues as described in the Mystery Elements section of Chapter Two. The clutter and destruction combine to make finding anything of value here difficult, but there is a treasure of several magic items. A Search check (DC 15) produces one of the following:

- Treasure: Goggles of minute seeing, Murlynd’s spoon (in a dirty bowl), wand of magic missiles (6 charges, caster level 5), 5 arcane scrolls (ray of enfeeblement, knock, fly, stoneskin, teleport), 3 potions (alter self, levitate, water breathing).

Note: As Elinda is a student of all things magical, her workshop could conceivably hold any item. If a particular item would greatly benefit the heroes (providing an ability they lack), it can be easily inserted here in place of one of the items listed above. Elinda is not concerned if her wand, potions, and scrolls are used to facilitate her rescue, but her ring gates and other valuable items should be returned.

Area M: The Shrine of the Sun

In the corner of the market is a forgotten shrine to the Sun God. A traveling cleric decided that the people of the Grey Citadel needed more sunshine in their lives and built the shrine with the permission of the Angus family. Despite the cleric’s resolve, the damp climate finally wore him down, and he abandoned his efforts and departed for sunnier realms.

The shrine holds a secret compartment (Search DC 25) that will only open if in direct sunlight (or equivalent magical effect) and in contact with a holy symbol of the Sun God. Inside are four divine scrolls of cure moderate wounds. Only the Angus brothers (and the original cleric) know about these items.

Area N: The Seer’s Parlor

This tiny, shabby storefront is marked only by a large purple eye painted over door. Inside, Amarathea the Seer offers divinations, charms, and readings, including tarot, palmistry, and other forms. The shop is set in the lower city, near the Caravan Camp (Area C). Amarathea was one of the victims of the robberies, and this may be what leads the party here (see the Mystery Elements section in Chapter Two for more information).

Inside the shop, charms and tokens of every sort hang from the ceiling, prompting customers to duck low upon entry. A beaded curtain screens the back half of the shop, though flickering candles can be seen beyond it. In that area, threadbare cushions surround a small round table. Amarathea is seated on the far side of the table, which is covered by trays of small pebbles, carved runes, tarot cards, and bones. A flat, polished crystal lens sits on a bed of velvet in the center of the table: Amarathea’s (non-magical) scrying stone.

Whether the heroes come here investigating the mystery or on their own business, Amarathea insists on doing a “seeing.” She tries to extract payment (3 gp), but does the reading for free if refused; she does this periodically when “an aura is unusually strong.” The reading can take whatever form the player wishes: palmistry, tarot, or anything else; Amarathea can use her supernatural divination ability with any of them. Some or all of the following can be applied to one character’s reading or to several party members, or you can devise your own cryptic divinations:

“You have a journey before you. Impulsive departure will send you down the road unprepared, but restraint will ensure you take with you what you need.” (She sees their imminent progress into the caverns. She can see that the information that awaits them in investigating the city will help them below.)

“Darkness reaches out to do you harm; only by remaining alert and on guard will you prevail.” (She can see the intended assassination[s] by the Ebon Union, although not with any specific detail.)

“Your actions are mirrored by others; one who seems a foe may yet become a friend.” (She can see that the efforts of the Band of the Crimson Mantle are parallel to those of the party. She also knows that one of them — Yelm the Barbarian — is not committed to the path of evil.)

Amarathea the Seer, female halfling Adp8: CR 7; SZ S; HD 8d6—8; hp 21; Init +1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 11; Atk +3 melee (1d3—2 subdual, unarmed); SA spells; SQ divination (special, see below), halfling traits, familiar; AL N; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +10; Str 7, Dex 12, Con 8, Int 10, Wis 16, Cha 11.
GREY CITADEL ENCOUNTER AREAS

Area O—1: The Barroom

This main room is always dark and smoky. Its low ceiling is thickly woven with cobwebs, and every floorboard and barstool creaks with age. A short bar and two large kegs stand on one wall, and a small fire smolders in a hearth at the back. The tables are round, allowing more privacy for the small groups of men that huddle there. Weapons are never collected at the door, and most customers leave their cloaks on, ready to run out at a moment's notice. The following are regular encounters at the Hole:

Vodrik (male human Com2; Listen +2, Profession [tavern host] +4, Sense Motive +2) is the owner-operator of the Hole. He keeps a battleaxe under the counter and a potion of bull's strength among the bottles, more for self-preservation than for keeping order in his bar.

Rorin (male human Rog2 [Shifter]: CR 2; hp 8; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats) is a fence and procurement agent for the Ebon Union; he finds buyers for their stolen goods and secures for them what is not worth the risk of stealing, such as food. He also maintains contact with Kinnan the Dark (see Area C).

Yav (male human Com1; Knowledge [alcoholic beverages] +4) is the local drunk and has been known to consume alcohol even while asleep in his usual chair near the fire. Every drink bought for him results in a rumor from the City Rumors Table (see Chapter Two) until he is too drunk to be coherent (after 1d6 more drinks than he has already consumed).

Stump (male gnome Rog3/Wiz3 (CR 6; hp 32) comes here to drink when his house gets tiresome. Unlike most of the clients, he listens carefully to everything said in his presence, regardless of how drunk he is. See the NPC Appendix for his profile.

Drunken Caravan Workers (male human Com1; CR 1/2; hp 4) are always present (2d4 of them); use the profiles from the Caravan Camp (Area C) or the Confrontational Drunk from the City Random Encounters Table (see Chapter One).

Edgar (male human Com1; see Area B) comes in from the public stables each evening to sell information to Rorin.

Area O—2: The Taproom

This small storeroom behind the bar is where Vodrik keeps (and waters down) the wine and ale. A small pantry of dry goods holds ingredients bought from the week-old bins in Grocer's Lane: sprouting potatoes, worm-eaten turnips, and stunted carrots better fit for horses than humans. A back door opens onto the alley behind the bar, and a narrow staircase leads up to the loft.

Area O—3: The Loft

Vodrik lives alone in this cramped room above the bar. A pallet bed, a pile of dusty clothes, and a few dirty dishes are obvious. Hidden in the bedding is a purse with 185 gp... and a ring of swimming given to him by his father (though neither of them were aware of its properties).

Area O-4: The Alley

Sometimes transactions take place behind the Hole in this refuse-choked alley. It is littered with smashed casks and rotting garbage and has 2d10 rats (see dungeon Area 1–2) running about at any given time.

Area P: The Bathhouse

Note: This location includes a potentially lethal encounter with a guild assassin; character death is a strong possibility, and some DMs may wish to modify this encounter accordingly.

The bathhouse is another of the Grey Citadel’s unique institutions. Situated on the sloped market, it takes advantage of a geothermal natural hot spring bubbling up from the volcanically active bedrock below the city. It is a gathering place for negotiating merchants, weary adventurers, and wayward lovers. Both public and private baths are available, as well as several services.

- Baths: 5 sp per visit to the public bath, 2 gp per hour in a private room.
- Refreshments: Food and drink available at +15% of the cost listed in the PHB, private rooms only.
- Laundry: 5 cp per client, undergarments only.
- Massage: 1 sp per masseuse per hour, private rooms only.

Area P-1: The Entry

The main entrance to the baths is on the fringe of the market. Across a broad stone porch is a set of double doors, where one of the staff collects the fees and informs clients that no weapons larger than a dagger are permitted. Just inside are doors to the men’s and women’s dressing chambers and the main office and supply room. A corridor leads toward the back of the building and the private rooms.

Area P-2: The Office

The baths are run by a motherly old crone named Dendra, who seems to turn a blind eye to what goes on in the tubs but observes much more than is believed. She knows very little about Tabitha (see Area P-6, below). Her office is a simple affair, mostly dedicated to linens, with a small desk for bookkeeping. A staircase leads down to the laundry.

Dendra (female human Exp2; hp 5; Craft [perfumes, bath salts, and massage oils] +4, Knowledge [Dun Eamon] +5, Profession [proprietress] +5) is the owner/manager of the bathhouse.

Area P-3: The Basement

In this steamy, stone-floored chamber, the hot water from the tubs above is used to do laundry for clients while they bathe. Any of the girls who are not serving refreshments or providing massages upstairs are at work at the huge tubs. The girls have a distinct hierarchy: the newest ones do the hardest work, while the most established ones barely lift a finger. The talk here is mostly about the lack of business from Herrick Mendon (see the City Rumors Table in Chapter Two).

Area P-4: The Dressing Chambers

Here, clients change into the linen toga provided, putting their own garments into bags of netting to take into the public bath. An attendant is on hand to help clients undress and offer laundry services. The attendant in the men’s chamber, a boy named Ry, is a thief as well, pilfering small coins from the client’s pockets. If caught, he begs to be let off and may know an interesting rumor or two. A single door leads into the bath.

Ry (male human Com1; hp 3; Pick Pocket +4) is a skinny little street urchin with an uncertain future.

Area P-5: The Public Bath

A large, shallow pool occupies most of this torch-lit room. A ledge around the perimeter allows for seating, and the center of the pool is 4 feet deep. Steps descend from the edge nearest the door, and steaming water bubbles from an iron pipe in one wall. At any given time, there are 3d8 occupants, 75% of whom are men. They converse in low voices or rest quietly, paying little attention to newcomers. If a conversation is initiated, bathers will know a random item from the City Rumors Table (see Chapter Two).

Area P-6: Private Baths (EL 8)

If a client expresses interest in a private room, an attendant is summoned from the laundry to escort him or her. The private rooms are small, with a round tub in the center of the floor, and are nicely furnished. An iron chandelier lights the room, a screen is provided for disrobing, and wooden planks are laid across the tub as a massage table. The attendants mention refreshments and massage services before leaving.

One of the masseuses is Tabitha, an assassin and member of the Ebon Union. If a single member of the party books a private bath anytime after Timed Encounter 1.3: The Demons Attack (see Chapter Two), she sells or volunteers her “services” to take action against the lone character. She is fanatically loyal to the guild and eager to prove herself to Devlin.

Tabitha, female human Rog5/Asn3: CR 8; SZ M; HD 5d6–5 plus 3d6–3; hp 22; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13; Atk +5 melee (1d3, unarmed) or +8 melee (1d4 and poison, dagger, crit 19–20) or +8 ranged (1d4 and poison, dagger, crit 19–20, 10 ft.); SA sneak attack (+5d6), death attack, poison use, spells; SQ evasion, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can’t be flanked), +1 save vs. poison; AL LE; SV Fort +1, Ref +10, Will +1; Str 10, Dex 16, Con 9, Int 14, Wis 9, Cha 13.

Skills: Bluff +9, Climb +4, Diplomacy +9, Disguise +11, Gather Information +9, Hide +11, Jump +4, Listen +6, Move Silently +11, Read Lips +5, Search +8, Sense Motive +5, Spot +3, Use Rope +10.

Feats: Improved Initiative, Quick Draw, Run, Weapon Finesse (dagger).
GREY CITADEL ENCOUNTER AREAS

Possessions: Silk robe with rope belt (10 ft.), dagger, blue whinnis poison (1 vial, 2 applications left), scented oils worth 4 gp, pouch with 15 sp.

Description: Tabitha began working with the Ebon Union before they were expelled from their previous home; in fact, she was the one who traveled to the Grey Citadel and assessed the potential for the Ebon Union to set up an operation. She has told everyone that she is “looking for a new home for her several brothers” while “they handle selling the family farm.” She serves Devlin by eliminating his rivals, as well as by distracting merchants and caravan guards. Rather than strike by force or lie in wait, she prefers to use her charms to get right under her victim’s nose before dealing her deathblow. She is slim, dark-haired, and attractive.

Tactics: Tabitha waits, if possible, until the character is disrobed and enjoying the massage. After massaging (and studying) the character for 3 rounds, she attempts the paralyzing version of her death attack (unarmed), probably at +9 (including a defender prone modifier) against AC 10 (no armor, no Dexterity bonus). If this attack succeeds, and the character fails his Fortitude save (DC 15), Tabitha has 1d6+8 rounds of paralysis to complete the act. During this time, she rolls the character off the boards and into the bath. Her robe is belted with a silk rope, which she removes and uses to bind the character’s hands and feet. She holds him under the surface (tied, grappled, and pinned) until he drowns. Because of the paralysis, begin making checks after half the character’s Constitution in rounds. If the paralysis wears off, opposed grappling checks must be made as usual. The drowning character must escape the pin and the grapple before he can get a breath of air. Pending outside intervention, this character may be doomed, and Tabitha smiles quite evilly through the bubbles until he stops struggling. When he does, Tabitha removes the rope, collects her things, and slips out.

If the paralysis attack misses or the save is passed, Tabitha has a backup plan. She carries a small blade coated with blue whinnis poison (injury, Fortitude DC 14; 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness). She attempts to wound the character and then defend herself until the first minute has passed. If the second Fortitude save is failed, the character loses consciousness, and Tabitha drowns him in the tub. If the character does not lose consciousness, Tabitha attempts to fight her way to the door and escape with the help of her spells.

Needless to say, this encounter can complicate matters. If the character survives, he may (a) have a captive or (b) have to explain to the authorities why he killed his masseuse. If he did not survive the first attempt, it will appear he drowned in the bath, in which case Dendra contacts the Mist Watch and tries to minimize bad publicity. If he dies with an injury from the second attempt, the murder becomes very public. If a character is foolish enough to relinquish his weapons, remove his armor, and lie face down with his back to a total stranger, he may just deserve his fate!

Area Q: The Ironworks

This large stone building sits midway across the lower city, and its several chimneys constantly spouting smoke and fire make it easy to recognize. The renown of these ironworks is something with which the heroes should be familiar, for they are widely known as the finest in the realm. Harnessing the power of moving water to drive their bellows and regulate the cooling mechanisms, the ironworks of Dun Eamon have a more consistent temperature than most, and the quality metal goods they produce are widely sought. As with the Crafthall, the Angus family owns the building, and they grant the rights to work there to the most talented craftsmen. Ulf Ironfist is the best smith there and runs the ironworks for Lord Angus, who helps secure large quantities of quality ore at reasonable prices. The ringing of hammer and anvil and the shouts of workers can be heard from outside. Exterior doors (2 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 20; Break [DC 23]; Open Lock [DC 25]) and ground floor windows are sturdy and secure. All interior doors here are locked (1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 13; Break [DC 13]; Open Lock [DC 20]).

The Ironworks is a potentially exciting and lethal location for a fight. The heroes should have an opportunity to track a gang of housebreakers here on their way to the lair of the Ebon Union (see Timed Encounter 3.3, in Chapter Two). If the heroes accost them or are noticed, they fight rather than betray the secret of their location any further.

At some point, the heroes may investigate the Ironworks in connection with the mysterious events. The apprentices here revere Ulf’s knowledge, but have no love for the wrath that arises when an important project is flawed or compromised. If the heroes can question an employee away from the master, they can relate information about Ulf’s strange behavior (see the Mystery Elements section in Chapter Two).

Area Q–2: Main Floor

In this large, smoky room, a dozen men at anvils manufacture everything from horseshoes to axe heads. Grinding wheels, hand tools, and buckets of water and oil are arranged down both sides of the room, and the glowing mouths of the great forges gape on the back wall. A double door between the forges leads to the foundry; a single door at one end leads to the shop.

This area (as well as Area Q–4) is especially dangerous in combat. Coming in contact with the glowing coals in any of the forges deals 2d6 points of heat damage per round (use additional rules for lava in Chapter 3 of the DMG). A number of items are left in the forges at any given time, and they are red-hot. Treat hot irons as a longsword with the following modifications: –1 attack; wielder must roll a Fortitude save (DC 12) each round or suffer 1 point of heat damage; anyone wounded by an attack is also subject to catching fire (see the “Catching on Fire” sidebar in Chapter 3 of the DMG).

Area Q–3: The Shop

In this adjacent, windowless room, all the wares produced in the ironworks are for sale: tools, weapons, metal armor, and hardware. All normal items are available at the costs listed in the PHB, but masterwork items are 10% cheaper, due to the high concentration of skilled craftsmen. A dwarf named Dregdim (male dwarf Exp4) runs the shop, and the door is locked whenever he is away or in the foundry. The room also has a hidden floor vault.

Locked Wooden Door: 4 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 40; Break (DC 25); Open Lock (DC 35).

Hidden Vault: Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 40, for an amazing lock). Contains 1,000 gp worth of... precious metals that would only be useful to a metallurgist, and 200 gp in coins. All other items (such as mithral, finished masterwork and magic items, and so forth) are locked in the Angas vault in the keep and catalogued for sale.

Area Q–4: The Foundry

This hot chamber is thick with fumes from smelted ores. All the mixing of metals is done here, as well as the casting of iron and steel. Several smaller forges stand back-to-back with the large ones in the other room. Ulf Ironfist and the other masters do their work here, where a larger range of furnace temperatures is available. Two huge anvils stand unused at one end of the room; at the other end, doors lead to the storeroom and Ulf’s quarters. The forges here can be very dangerous during a fight (see Area Q–2, above).

When encountered at the ironworks, Ulf is usually in this room, supervising one project or another. He is the master smith of the ironworks, a lifetime craftsman, and a brilliant metallurgist. He oversees the efforts of a dozen forge laborers and also advises the other smiths and apprentices. Rarely, he will undertake a project himself, but only the most challenging (and lucrative) creations will entice him.

Ulf “Nine-Fingers” Ironfist, male dwarf Exp 15: CR 14; SZ M; HD 15d6+30; hp 85; Init +1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 11; Atk +17/+12/+7 melee (1d8+5, +2 warhammer, crit x3); SA dwarven traits; SQ dwarven traits; AL LG; SV Fort +7, Ref +5, Will +9; Str 17, Dex 11, Con 14, Int 16, Wis 11, Cha 9.

Skills: Appraise +21, Bluff +11, Craft (armorsmithing) +23, Craft (foundry) +21, Craft (metalworking) +21, Craft (weaponsmithing) +23, Knowledge (arcana) +21, Knowledge (metallurgy) +21, Profession (blacksmith) +23, Sense Motive +10.

Feats: Expertise, Power Attack, Skill Focus (Craft [armorsmithing]), Skill Focus (Craft [mentalworking]), Skill Focus (Profession [blacksmith]), Weapon Focus (warhammer).

Possessions: +2 warhammer, masterwork artisan’s tools.

Description: Ulf is a strong, squat figure with a singed beard and a face that has been frequently scarred by flying slag. He is also missing the ring finger on his right hand, the result of an old foundry accident, and he hates being called “Ulf Nine-Fingers.” Working with metal is his bread and butter; he has no time for anything else, including family or friends. He is the quintessential dwarf — gruff, deliberate, and resolute.

Note: Ulf has accumulated 7 negative levels as a result of Lilith’s embrace. Apply a –7 penalty to his skill and ability checks, attack rolls, saving throws, and effective level. For simplicity’s sake, Ulf has failed all of the Fortitude saves to determine permanent level loss; Lilith’s frequent visits have not given him the chance to recover. The DM can make those checks if Ulf will be used in the future. For details on energy drain effects, see Chapter 3 in the DMG.

Area Q–5: The Glassworks

This small shop sits adjacent to the foundry room. It was built during the reign of Arb’s father to maximize on the forge’s waterswheel. His agents traveled far abroad to find the master craftsmen to design and operate the business, and the glass and crystal they produce is beyond compare. The dwarven smiths were not thrilled about keeping company with the foreign masters who work at their back door, but they give grudging respect to their ability.

Two masters and three apprentices work at the glassworks, which has one large furnace powered in the same manner as the forges, plus two smaller cooling furnaces. Shelves in the shop hold all manner of glassware and decorative items, plus stacks of valuable window-glass.

Area Q–6: Ulf’s Apartment

Area Q–7: Storeroom

This room houses large crates and hoppers filled with raw ores and also piles of unassembled iron rods. A door in the back leads downstairs to dungeon Area 1–6. It is locked, and only Ulf Ironfist, Devlin and Lilith have keys. The door is well made and brand new — Ulf constructed it himself at Lilith’s suggestion.

Locked Iron-Bound Door: 1 in. thick; Hardness 7; hp 25; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 25).

Area Q–8: The Basement

Hewn from dark stone, the forge’s basement is oppressively hot, and the combined thunder of moving water and the wooden groan of the bellows is deafening. The upper half of a water wheel rises from the middle of the floor, churning and spraying icy water. On the wall opposite the rough stone stairs are stacks of wooden crates.

The crates conceal the opening to the underground network of tunnels. Ulf arranged them after Lilith first charmed him. One of the largest crates is bolted to the stone floor and has a hinged top concealing a secret door. The bottom of this crate is missing, and a wooden ladder descends through the old drain to dungeon Area 3–1. Now that the drain no longer serves its purpose, several inches of water have pooled around the crates, which should indicate something is amiss.

Also, Ulf left himself a reminder of which tunnel to enter for his rendezvous with Lilith (he is notoriously forgetful). Written on the wall above the crate (Search DC 15), in Dwarven script, is the following note:

From house of iron toward the molten core, embrace the Dwarf-maid I adore, take the path at outstretched Dwarven arm, that brings back memories of Dwarven harm.

The reference is to Ulf’s missing ring finger on his right hand. When held ‘at arm’s length, the stump of his finger indicates the second tunnel from the right, the only one that leads into the cavern complex.

Secret Door: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 10; Break (DC 13); Search (DC 20).
Area R: The Mill and Waterworks

This building sits in the lower city and taps an underground channel of the River Eamon. Its huge waterwheel drives several axles that provide power for the gristmill and the lumber saws.

Danver the Miller is the engineer who supervises the operation and maintains the waterworks.

Lilith seduced Danver soon after Herrick Mendon. She wanted access to the city from more than one location, and the foundations of the waterworks are adjacent to Level 2 of the underground caverns. Yet these entrances are less frequently used because of the variety of molds and fungi that feed on the sawdust and grain washed from the mill. Only Lilith, Devlin, Gethrax, and a few thieves are willing to brave the hazards to use this entrance. The City Rumors Table (see Chapter Two) includes a sighting of Gethrax around the mill.

Danver is usually found moving between the sawmill and gristmill. The employees have noticed his odd behavior and are willing to talk about it (see the Mystery Elements section in Chapter Two).

Danver the Miller, male human Exp 8:

CR 7; SZ M; HD 8d6; hp 30; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 11; Ark +6/+1 melee (1d4, dagger, crit 19–20); AL LN; SV Fort +2, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 11, Dex 12, Con 11, Int 12, Wis 11, Cha 9.

Skills: Bluff +13, Craft (carpentry) +7, Diplomacy +11, Disguise +5, Innuendo +8, Knowledge (engineering) +15, Knowledge (hydrodynamics) +9, Profession (miller) +15, Ride (horse) +6, Sense Motive +6.

Feats: Skill Focus (Bluff), Skill Focus (Diplomacy), Skill Focus (Knowledge [engineering]), Skill Focus (Profession [miller]).

Possessions: Dagger, engineering tools (abacus, calipers, and so forth), tasteless wardrobe, overly strong cologne (6 vials).

Description: Danver favors himself an attractive bachelor, though those days have long gone by. His education in engineering took place in a large city, where bright students could spend the evening hours with the women of their choice. He finds Dun Eamon to be too rough and unsophisticated and the women too “uptight.” Any of the local women will characterize him as a “dirty old man.” He is skinny and gaunt, his clothing is cheap but gaudy, and he usually smells overpoweringly of scented oils.

Note: Danver has accumulated 5 negative levels as a result of Lilith’s embrace. Apply a –5 modifier to his skill and ability checks, attack rolls, saving throws, and effective level. For simplicity’s sake, Danver has failed all of the Fortitude saves to determine permanent level loss; Lilith’s frequent visits have not given him the chance to recover. The DM can make those checks if Danver will be used in the future. For details on energy drain effects, see Chapter 3 in the DMG.

Area R–2: Gristmill

The other half of the mill holds one large and two small millstones, which grind most of the grain produced in the valley. Danver collects a measure of grain from each bushel he grinds; this grain supplies the city’s reserves in the castle or is ground and sold to bakeries and households in Grocer’s Lane (Area G). Four men monitor the griststones and move heavy bags of grain to and from waiting carts.

An important clue awaits the heroes at the smallest millwheel. The grinding stones had been separated and cleaned of all grain residues, then used at Lilith’s suggestion to grind silver coins with which to ward Mamuthok’s Aperture. The experiment damaged the wheel, and it has not been used to grind flour since then. A Search check (DC 18) reveals traces of silver powder on the floor around the stone; a Strength check (DC 22) will separate the stones and reveal a silvery gouge around the circumference and a few coin fragments.

Area R–3: The Waterworks

This chamber is built into the bedrock of the island city. The floor is rough, un-worked stone. A channel allows water to rush through the base of the building where the massive wheel is suspended.

An entrance to the underground caverns can be found here, though seldom used. At the point where the axe passes through the stone foundation into the mill, a deep crack in the rock allows water to drain away. All the wastewater from the mill building eventually drains through this crack, which leads to dungeon Area 2–1. All the sawdust and grain hulls are washed down through the crack as well; the rotten stench of stagnant water and fermentation wafts up through the crack on a warm breeze. To enter here, heroes must make a Dexterity check (DC 12), failure resulting in 1d6 points of damage from the moving cogs and axes.

Area S: Stump’s Hovel

The old gnome adventurer Stump lives by himself near the Caravan Camp (Area G). His home is a run-down shack, mostly because his missing hand hinders him in making repairs. He lives on the profits of his last adventure and mostly contents himself with alcohol instead of companionship. Inside, a small fireplace warming the single room, which also contains a bed, wardrobe, table, stool, locked chest, and grandfather clock (which holds one of Elinda’s clues as described in the Mystery Elements section of Chapter Two). Over the fireplace is a wooden plaque with two brass hooks—Stump’s +1 keen short sword hangs here. He fought with a matched pair in his adventuring days, but he gave the other one to Elinda after he lost his hand (an identical plaque hangs in her sitting room in Area L–4). The rest of his adventuring equipment is in the chest.

The heroes most likely come here for information about Elinda (although they might also approach Stump regarding the tunnels). He is troubled by her disappearance and by the deterioration of her reputation. He is very protective of her and will not tolerate any insinuation of wrongdoing. If and when the heroes question him, he has little to offer. He can confirm her obsession with all things magical and mechanical; he knows that she left recently to pursue another artifact in far off lands and that she returned with it just a few days before her disappearance. In his opinion, she has never had any interest in summoning or had anything to do with it.
Stump, male gnome Rog3/Wiz3 (CR 6; hp 32) is a bitter, drunken old gnome and is completely unpleasant to deal with. He is also one of several NPCs that can serve as a pre-generated or replacement character or as a temporary addition to or permanent part of the party. See the NPC Appendix for his complete profile.

Large Locked Chest: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 30). Contains a masterwork light crossbow, 20 bolts, a mithral shirt, maps of several dungeon complexes, masterwork thieves' tools, 5 arcane scrolls (comprehend languages, invisibility, knock, resistance, spider climb; each caster level 3).

Area T: The Root-Cutter’s Shop

Caledon the Root-Cutter operates a small herbalist shop in the lower city. The druid makes and sells potions, potions, and alchemical distillations and keeps a huge garden of exotic plants and herbs. He is usually willing to trade goods or services for his preparations, including exotic plant and animal substances.

Inside, baskets of ferns hang from overhead beams and the humid air is rich with smells of earth and organic matter. The floor is soft and mossy, the walls are covered in lichen, and potted plants clutter every available surface. A large brazier sits in the middle of the shop, with several small cauldrons suspended at different heights above it. His animal companion, the ancient wolf Gareth, usually sleeps curled around the base of the brazier. Caledon is most often seated at a counter opposite the door, trimming buds, docking roots, or scraping bark for his preparations. He will appear unaware of visitors until they speak, but he is merely allowing them to absorb the tranquility of his shop for as long as they like. He sells his products, but he is not concerned about money — usually, he will be willing to trade for any rare substances, especially those botanical in nature.

He keeps a stock of healing preparations on hand and ready for sale: a bowl of good berries (x12, 1 gp each), potions of care light wounds (x4, 50 gp each), potions of care moderate wounds (x2, 300 gp each), a potion of delay poison (300 gp), and a potion of neutralize poison (750 gp). He also scribes divine scrolls: invisibility to animals (x2, 25 gp each, caster level 8), speak with animals (x2, 150 gp each, caster level 8), speak with plants (300 gp, caster level 8). He will prepare other potions and scrolls on request, but he will carefully consider the alignment of the user and possibly question his or her intent. He can distill poisons, but does not usually do so; using his Profession (herbalist) skill, he can produce any of the plant-derived poisons listed in Chapter 3 of the DMG.

He also offers alchemical items; use the Special Substances and Items section of Table 7—9 in the PHB for pricing, but modify the description to reflect that his preparations are mostly derived from plants; he uses highly combustible sap for his alchemist’s fire, distills digestive enzymes of carnivorous plants to yield acid, phosphorescent alge for sunrods, and so on. Some of these substances will be especially useful against Lilith’s summoned creatures in the dungeon.

Note: Caledon is one of the people visited by Ebon Union thieves seeking components for Mamathok’s Aperture; the robbery and Caledon’s reaction are described in the Mystery Elements section of Chapter Two.

Caledon, male human Drd8: CR 8; SZ M; HD 8d8+16; hp 54; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 12 or 17 (with +2 hide armor); Atk +7/+2 melee (1d6+1, blackthorn walking stick) or +7/+2 melee (1d8+1, short spear, crit x3) or +8/+3 ranged (1d8+1, short spear, crit x2, 20 ft.); SA spells; SQ nature sense, woodland stride, trackless step, resist nature’s lure, wild shape (3/day, Large); AL NG; SV Fort +8, Ref +4, Will +9; Str 12, Dex 14, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 12.

- Skills: Alchemy +7, Concentration +9, Heal +9, Knowledge (nature) +4, Knowledge (botany) +3, Profession (herbalist) +10, Spellcraft +3, Wilderness Lore +5.
- Feats: Brew Potion, Maximize Spell, Scribe Scroll, Skill Focus (alchemy).

Divine Spells Prepared (6/5/4/4/2): 0 — care light wounds (x2), detect magic, detect poison, guidance, mending; 1st — care light wounds (x3), goodberry, shillelagh; 2nd — animal messenger, delay poison, lesser restoration, wood shape; 3rd — care moderate wounds, neutralize poison, remove disease, speak with plants; 4th — control plants, cure serious wounds.

Possessions: Blackthorn walking stick (treat as club), +2 hide armor, apron with trowel and shears, alchemical lab.

Description: Caledon’s curly brown hair and beard are worn in long braids and are just beginning to show flecks of grey; he wears a woolen vest and trousers with a leather apron. He began his career as a member of a rural druidic order, but they soon grew wary of his “tempering with the natural order,” despite his good intentions. When he was banished from the circle, he chose to leave his cherished woods behind and come to the city, where his skills could benefit a greater number of people. He travels often in search of new plants and grows many of them in his shop. He also maintains contact with a nymph named Bernya, who dwells in the wilderness outside the city (see the Wilderness Encounters Appendix) and provides Caledon with some rare components.

Animal Companion: Gareth, Wolf: CR 3; SZ L Animal; HD 3d8+6/2d8+8; hp 46; Init +1; Spd 50 ft.; AC 14; Atk +8 melee (1d8+5, bite); SA trip; SQ scent; AL N; SV Fort +6, Ref +6, Will +1; Str 21, Dex 13, Con 19, Int 2, Wis 12, Cha 6.

Gareth’s Skills: Hide +3, Listen +6, Move Silently +4, Spot +4, Wilderness Lore +1 (+5 to track by scent).

Gareth’s Feats: Weapon Finesse (bite).

Area U: The Waterfront

The Citadel has a small gate at the edge nearest the pool at the base of the waterfall. This gate is not so heavily guarded as the main gates, but it would be very difficult to access unnoticed. A few citizens make their living fishing in the deep pool, and the large bales of lumber that are floated over the falls from upstream are retrieved here and hauled to the sawmill.

Beneath one of the moss-covered docks is a lizardfolk youth. (See the Wilderness Encounters Appendix and the City Rumors Table in Chapter Two for additional material.) A track check (Wilderness Lore DC 15) identifies the nature of the tacks in the mud and leads the party to the space under the dock. The young creature is injured, half-starved, and frightened of its uncertain fate and the possibility of punishment on return to its village. Returning it to its village can be beneficial to the party, but the citizens of Dun Eamon would kill the child if given the opportunity.

Lizardfolk Youth: CR 1; hp 2; no skills or items of note.
Chapter Four: Level 1 — Tales From The Crypt

Level 1: Tales From The Crypt

Entrances: The drain in Raiment Row empties into Area 1–1. The drain in Grocer’s Lane empties into Area 1–3. A tunnel from Area H–12 in the Crafthall leads to Area 1–4.

Exits: Area 1–7 opens into the waterfall well in Area 2–24. A tunnel in Area 1–6 leads to Area 3–9. The unstable floor in Area 1–16 may collapse, dumping characters into Area 2–6.

Wandering Monsters: Very few wandering monsters are on this level; most keep to their lairs or defend their food source. Check on 1d20 for wandering monster encounters every hour or after any loud event, although only the carrion crawler or the rast will investigate noise with food in mind.

Detections: The whole level radiates faint evil. The box o’ darkness traps in the corridors of Area 1–9 cause detections aimed in their direction to indicate not only evil but hopeless despair as well.

Continuous Effects: The natural caverns and tunnels are shin-deep in stinking black water; the crypt corridors are only inches deep. Any character moving more than double his movement rate or adding actions to a double move (e.g., run, charge and attack, and so on) is subject to tripping over a hidden obstacle. Make a Reflex save (DC 12) for the character; failure results in falling prone and 1d3 points of subdual damage. Any character that falls prone for any reason on this level has a 10% chance (per immersion) of contracting a disease (see “Disease” in Chapter 3 of the DMG; randomly determine blinding sickness or filth fever, Fortitude saves as normal). Dropped items require a Search check (DC 15) for recovery. A thorough search beneath the water reveals 1d3 gp worth of coins (mostly silver and copper) per minute of sifting through muck, which also requires a test for disease. Unless the heroes have a light source with them, the entire level is in near total darkness (9/10 concealment, 40% miss chance).

Standard Features: In the sewage caverns, the walls are of rough stone and the floor is a combination of loose cobblestones, sand, and garbage. The overhead clearance is 10 feet in the tunnels and 15 feet in the rooms. In the crypt, the walls are of mortared stone and the floors are flagstone. All doors are of stone (4 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 60; Break [DC 28]; Open Lock [DC 30]) and open inward. The ceilings are 10 feet high and barrel-vaulted.

Area 1–1: Entry Chamber — Raiment Row Drain (EL 4)

This stinking pit is awash in dark water and choked with rotting piles of garbage and discarded fabric. Dim light filters down from the drain 20 feet above, and in the watery reflections a passage can be seen leading into darkness. One wall is made of mortared stone, and a section seems to have collapsed, revealing an entrance to the crypt. Gethrax’s box o’ darkness traps (see Area 1–9) are positioned so that entering the crypt without triggering them is impossible. The piles of garbage cast off from Raiment Row above help to conceal this chamber’s occupant: an otyugh. This muck-dweller hides beneath piles of rotten cloth and wears the only treasure in the room, a magic cloak.

Otyugh: CR 4; hp 36; see the MM.

Tactics: This otyugh knows there is something special about its cloak and has grown brash. It attacks any creature entering its lair, although it does wait to attack until the...
level 1: Tales from the Crypt

1 square = 5 feet  □ = box o' darkness  ■ = collapse area heroes move to investigate one of the openings. Noticing the otyugh before it surprises the heroes requires a Spot check (DC 23).

Treasure: A cloak of resistance +1, which is only slightly cleaner than anything else here; wearing it without washing it subjects the new owner to disease as if he had been immersed (see above).

Area 1–2: The Rat Cave (EL 2)

The water is only ankle-deep in this oblong chamber, and the bits of trash floating about show signs of being chewed. With the water shallow and the food plentiful, some rats have taken up residence in this room. Their lair is deep in the shadows on a rock ledge 10 feet off the ground. Climbing to the ledge requires a Climb check (DC 15); the climber is most likely attacked upon arrival. The ledge is barely big enough for 1 Medium-size or 2 Small characters. The treasure is hidden near the back in a pile of droppings — an adventurer had been trying to use it to escape the otyugh and dropped when he was surprised by a face full of rats.

Rats (20): CR 1/8; hp 1 (x10), 2 (x10); see the MM.

Tactics: Unless the player declares that her character is attempting to Move Silently, the rats prepare an attack action and leap onto the hero when she peeks over the edge. Staying on the wall when this happens requires a Reflex save (DC 15) using the character’s Wisdom modifier instead of Dexterity. The rats attack until 75% of them are slain before fleeing into the tunnels.

Area 1–3: Entry Chamber — Grocer’s Lane Drain (EL 6)

Situated right below Grocer’s Lane, this chamber collects all the rotten produce from the Market above. The squirming of maggots is audible, and the stench brings bile to the throat of any character passing through. Double the chance of disease if anyone falls prone in this area. Lurking near the exit tunnel are 2 carrion crawlers, one on either side. Submerged in the corner of the area opposite the entrance are 2 bodies (an Ebon Union Cutpurse failed to make it back home safely one night, and a beggar who refused to inform for the Ebon Union) that constitute the treasure.

Carrion Crawlers (2): CR 4; hp 21, 19; see the MM.

Tactics: The carrion crawlers lurk on either side of the entry (the light from the drain sometimes lures prey into their lair). They lash out from hiding, attempting to catch the first 2 heroes flat-footed (use DC 16 to represent the creatures’ opposed Hide roll). They instinctually fight until slain, abandoning a prone character for one still moving.

Treasure: On the Cutpurse is found 2 daggers, leather armor (stained with his entrails), a pouch of caltrops, a pouch with 6 gp and 20 sp, and a masterwork short sword with a secret compartment in the hilt (Search DC 18) that contains a slip of paper which reads “green first.” This is a clue relating to a trap in Area 3–22. On the beggar is a signet ring worth 150gp, or triple that if returned to his family in a far off land of your choosing.

Area 1–4: Entry Chamber — The Crafthall Tunnel (EL 3)

This small room has a raised floor that is mostly free of water. Bones are scattered all over, and at the base of one wall is a pile of broken pottery and glass. At the back of the room are two deep cracks in the wall. This room is the arrival point of a long tunnel from the basement of the Crafthall (Area H–12). It is infested with dire rats, which the thieves have learned to distract with sugary sweets such as jam and honey. Upon arrival they smash a jar or two against the far wall and slip past the rats while they eat. The rats’ lair in one of the cracks contains their non-combatant young (2d6 dire ratlings, with stats as a rat) and a few bits of treasure. The other crack leads to the passage to the Crafthall.

Dire Rats (8): CR 1/3; hp 9, 8, 7, 6 (x2), 5 (x2), 4; see the MM.

Tactics: The dire rats attack as soon as they are aware of beings approaching their lair, unless they are distracted with sweets. When 75% of them are killed, the remaining rats will back into their lair and defend their offspring.

Treasure: A chewed satchel containing a chewed roll of blank parchment, a pouch with 28 gp, a thunderstone, an unopened jar of strawberry jam that acts as a potion of cure light wounds (although the resulting sugar toxicity results in a temporary −1 Dexterity penalty that lasts for 3 hours or until the next meal).

Area 1–5: Stirges and Secrets (EL 3)

Most of this room has a relatively dry sandy floor. Obvious tracks lead across it from a deep fissure on one wall into the murky water of the natural corridor. A few burned scraps of rag lie scattered around the room. One of the walls is of mortared stone, which has collapsed to reveal a chamber beyond. Allow the party a Listen check (DC 15) to hear the quiet buzzing of stirges in the crevices of the ceiling above. Immediately lighting the oily rags will keep them at bay, otherwise they attack the party just after they arrive. The creatures’ treasure is wedged far up in the ceiling cracks.

A secret door in this area hides the entrance to a cavern used by the Ebon Union as a stop on their way to their lair on Level 3. In the crack on the wall is a pivoting stone door with a pair of iron rings at the base. The Strength check to open it can be reduced with a pole or quarterstaff inserted in the rings for leverage.

The collapsed stone wall leads to Area 1–8. Stepping through it will probably trigger a trap in Area 1–9.

Stirges (6): CR 1/2; hp 6 (x2), 5 (x2), 4 (x2); see the MM.

Tactics: The stirges attack as soon as they have reason to believe there is prey below — note that they may react to the skeletons that result from the trap in Area 1–9, depending on the party’s location when the trap is triggered. The only thing that deters them is smoke; if the oily rags are lit or some other smoke is introduced, the stirges retreat into the cracks.

Treasure: 12 rat corpses (the stirges’ larder), one of which is noticeably heavier than the others because it has a string of pearls in its belly (900 gp).

Secret Door: 1 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 50; Break (DC 30); Search (DC 22); Strength check (DC 26) to open, Strength check (DC 12) using poles for leverage.

Area 1–6: The Ready Room (EL varies if thieves are present)

Compared to the foul mess that is unavoidable elsewhere, this small cavern is nearly livable. A pile of rags looks like it could be a bed, and a few crates arranged in a corner have several candle stubs and dirty cups on them. A faint spot of light touches one wall. At the back, a low tunnel descends into darkness. There is a 10% chance per hour that an Ebon Union individual or group arrives; randomly determine which direction they are heading and use the profile from the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix. Check for this possibility as soon as the heroes arrive.

This is the staging area for the Ebon Union’s forays into the city. They usually rest here after the climb up from their lair or stockpile supplies here to be carried down. A hairline crack in the ceiling allows whatever sunlight or moonlight exists above to filter down, where a mirror reflects it into the room so the thieves can establish the hour of the day. The tunnel in the back leads down to Area 3–9.

Treasure: A sack with 3 loaves of bread, a round cheese, a hunk of cured ham, and 3 bottles of wine (8 gp each) wrapped in cloth. On the makeshift table is a deck of playing cards that have been magically treated to resist moisture and dirt (possibly valued as high as 1,000 gp, but only worth so much to a handful of people, easily mistaken for more powerful magical cards). The mirror jammed in the ceiling is made of silver and tortoise shell (35 gp).

Area 1–7: Outflow Tunnel

This tunnel slopes down toward the sound of rushing water. Some distance down it picks up the drainage from Area 1–8. It eventually leads to the huge waterfall well described in Area 2–24.

Area 1–8: Perimeter Corridor

The first time the heroes enter this area from either Area 1–1 or Area 1–5, they will almost certainly trigger a trap left in Area 1–9 by Gethrax (refer to this area for complete details).

This corridor is 10 feet wide and runs all the way around the tomb complex. The walls are breached at 3 places, leading to Areas 1–1, 1–5, and 1–15. In one corridor, a wide crack at floor level drains away water toward Area 1–7. Only a small character could fit through this tunnel and is subject to disease, but halfway down is a lost treasure.

Treasure: A corroded tin box containing a garnet necklace worth 360 gp.

Area 1–9: Crypt Corridors (EL 5)

Refer to the box o’ darkness trap below when the party enters.
Burial niches in both walls dominate this long narrow corridor. They are lined up head to toe from one end to the other and are stacked three high. In most of them are ancient corpses, no longer clad in flesh, but still wearing armor and sometimes clutching weapons. These are the long-dead heroes of the near-forgotten war that threatened the valley. They were loyal defenders of the island city when it came under siege and so were buried here near the keep's gate to guard it for eternity. Thieves have already scavenged most of this area, so only a few bits of treasure remain. In one burial niche is a stone statue in place of a corpse; the stone wall behind it conceals a secret door to Area 1–12.

Read the following as the party approaches within 50 feet of either box o’ darkness trap:

As you move into the corridor, a strange sound reaches your ears. It sounds like the cries of happy children playing and the cheerful notes of a wind-up music box.

[If the party can see the box at the end of 5 rounds, add:] The top of the box pops open on hidden hinges, and a one-inch figure rotates slowly inside. The cheerful music slowly winds to a stop, the pitch falling off in a tuneless moan. A thick, oily mist begins to seep from the box, spreading out around you, and the figure rotates to face you as the music dies out. It is a reaper in black, bearing a scythe. All around you, the dead begin to stir....

Box o’ Darkness Trap: CR 4; triggered by good-aligned creature coming within a 50-ft. radius; casts desecrate and animate dead (15th level, 50-ft. radius); one use only; Search (DC 28, to find and identify nature); Disable Device (DC 28 or removal); rogue is subject to alignment triggering conditions.

These portable magical traps were designed by evil priests to hamper the efforts of good-aligned creatures. Gethrax placed them to further secure the caverns against the righteous, and he felt (rightly) that the Crypt below the Market was the most accessible area. Parties will likely be surprised by the first one and may even be holding it when the top pops open and the evil mists seep out. If the heroes keep their wits about them, they may react quickly enough to minimize the effect of the second one — by moving it, consecrating the area, or perhaps some other creative solution.

The traps are armed when wound up, and from then on are triggered by the approach of any good-aligned humanoid within 50 feet. When triggered, they begin to play a pleasant tune as would a child’s music box, and the sound of laughing children can be heard. After 5 rounds, the music slows and thick black fog seeps out of the box, expanding to cover a 50-foot radius. This area receives the effects of a desecrate spell, followed by animate dead, both cast at 15th level. Then, 15 HD of undead are raised from that area (if available) and receive +1 hit points and a +1 bonus to attack, damage, and saving throw rolls. Checks to turn undead in this area suffer a –3 penalty for the duration of the desecrate spell (30 hours). On the bottom of the box is an engraved sigil (see also Area 3–17 and the Wilderness Encounters Appendix) that may lead the party to the powerful creator of the boxes in a later quest.

Desecrated Skeletons (15): CR 1/3; SZ M Undead; HD 1d12+1; hp 5 (x3), 6 (x3), 7 (x3), 8 (x3), 9 (x3); Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13; Atk +1 melee (1d4+1 [x2], claws); SQ undead, immunities; AL NE; SV Fort +1, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 10, Dex 12, Con—, Int—, Wis 10, Cha 11.

Feats: Improved Initiative.

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 4; hp 30; Search (DC 28); Break (DC 18), Open Lock (DC 30); leads to Area 1–12.

Treasure: 2 rusty daggers, a small steel shield, 25 gp worth of coins (mostly silver) found on the floor or in the burial niches.

Area 1–10: Chapel (EL 7)

This room appears to have been a place of worship at some point, complete with curtained altar. Unless the heroes have taken steps to infiltrate the room, the grimlocks here leap up and grab their weapons as the door opens. If the heroes enter through the secret corridor from Area 1–11, they emerge behind a tapestry and have a good chance to surprise the creatures. Two of them are hidden beneath the altar and will almost certainly surprise the heroes regardless of which way they come in.

The chapel was included in the tomb to represent the dominant belief system in the valley at the time; feel free to use any non-evil deity, forgotten or otherwise. The chapel was taken over by Bashrib’s grimlock band when they were displaced by the arrival of the Ebon Union. A ranger, gnome, dwarf, or other character with a reasonable background may recognize that grimlocks tend to dwell much deeper in the earth, coming this close to the surface only to raid or scavenger but not to build a lair. Most of their treasure is in a large locked chest in the corner, but a few items are in Area 1–11. Behind the altar tapestries, a secret door (Search DC 18; opens easily) leads through a passageway to Area 1–11 and has a disgusting treasure of its own.

If any of the grimlocks survive the encounter, they might be convinced to share some of what they know about the dungeon. They might be charmed, intimidated, or even tortured; let the role-playing abilities of the players determine what their characters learn. If Bashrib survives, he will attempt to barter for his survival with information, perhaps even agreeing to guide the party through the parts of the dungeon he knows. All of the grimlocks are familiar with Level 3; their lair used to be in Area 3–29, the troll cave.

Bashrib the Barbarian, male grimlock Bbn3: CR 5; SZ M Monstrous Humanoid; HD 2d8+4 plus 3d12+6; hp 45; Init +2; Spd 40 ft.; AC 16; Atk +5 melee (1d8+4, warhammer, crit x3) and +5 melee (1d4+4, light hammer); SA blindsight, rage (1/day); SQ immunities (gaze attacks, visual effects, illusions, attacks that rely on sight), scent, fast movement, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC); AL NE; SV Fort +5, Ref +6, Will +4; Str 19, Dex 14, Con 15, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 7.

Skills: Climb +10, Hide +11*, Intimidate +6, Intuit Direction +6, Jump +8, Listen +7, Search +5, Spot +7.
Feats: Alertness, Ambidexterity, Two-Weapon Fighting. *Grimlocks receive a +10 racial bonus to Hide checks when in mountains or underground.

Possessions: Warhammer, light hammer, key to treasure chest, jade necklace worth 85 gp. The rest of Bashrib’s valuables are in the group’s treasure hoard.

Grimlocks (7): CR 1; SZ M Monstrous Humanoid; HD 2d8+2; hp 9, 10 (x2), 11 (x2), 12, 13; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 15; Atk +4 melee (1d10+3, greatclub) or +4 melee (1d8+2, shortspear, crit x3); SA blindsight; SQ immunities (gaze attacks, visual effects, illusions, attacks that rely on sight), scent; AL NE; SV Fort +1, Ref +4, Will +2; Str 15, Dex 13, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 8, Cha 6.

Skills: Climb +7, Hide +6*, Listen +6, Search +5, Spot +3. *Grimlocks receive a +10 racial bonus to Hide checks when in mountains or underground.

Feats: Alertness.

Possessions: Greatclub or shortspear.

Tactics: Crouched in the center of the chapel are 6 grimlocks, squabbling over food scraps. The 7th, a female, is spending quality time under the altar with Bashrib the Barbarian, the leader and dominant male. The grimlocks in the open will grab their weapons and attack the heroes as they enter, although the party may be able to surprise them. Regardless of how the fight begins, the chief and his mate wait 2 rounds before leaping out and attacking the heroes closest to the altar, preferably ones with their backs turned to the altar. Bashrib is very irate at having his snuggling time interrupted and immediately flies into his barbarian rage.

Treasure: A mildewed tapestry (used as bedding) with gold thread in it (worth 250 gp) and 3 silver bowls (12 gp each, or double that if sold to a temple of the appropriate deity) that the grimlocks use as chamber pots in the hidden passage.

Large Locked Chest: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 25). Contains 180 gp, 260 sp, 3 pieces of uncut amber (80 gp, 95 gp, 110 gp), a silver-plated dagger with a turquoise and jet handle (380 gp), and an ivory statue of a horse (65 gp).

Secret Door: Located behind the tapestry on the altar; Search (DC 15), opens easily.

Area 1–11: Memorial

This rectangular room is devoid of furnishings save for a bed of furs made up in a corner. The walls are exquisitely carved in bas-relief and depict an epic battle between an allied force of humans, dwarves, and gnomes and a great evil horde of orcs and orc-kin. These carvings are a tribute to the epic battle for the valley in which so many great heroes lost their lives. The carvings themselves are worth several thousand gold pieces each, but the logistics of removing them are complicated, as each panel weighs thousands of pounds and was actually carved in this room. Of course, the citizens will not take kindly to their relics being removed, even if they have forgotten that they exist. A secret door leads to Area 1–10. A few items of the grimlocks’ treasure are hidden in the stinking furs.

Secret Door: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 20; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 20).

Treasure: A silver pitcher (matches the chalices in the tunnel, worth 80 gp or double that if sold to a temple of the appropriate deity), and a pouch with 11 moonstones (40 gp (x4), 50 gp (x4), 60 gp (x2), 70 gp).
Area 1–12: Hidden Burial Vault (EL 3)

The craftsmen who built the tombs created this hidden vault. In addition to the great heroes who fell in battle, scores of commoners died, and the stonemasons were allowed to place a stone statue in the vault to represent their dead. Regardless, they created this small antechamber behind a secret door to honor the dead of the lower classes. Hundreds of skulls line the walls in great piles, and a number of items of treasure (clearly those of common folk) were left with the dead in keeping with various belief systems. The vault is reached by squeezing through a trapped passage behind a secret door in the stone carving of a craftsman in Area 1–9.

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 40; Break (DC 30); Open Lock (DC 25); Search (DC 22).

Falling Block Trap: CR 3; +15 melee (4d6); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).

Treasure: 12 clay jugs of stale beer (1 sp for the jugs), 7 bottles of fine wine (4gp each), 3 bottles of not-so-fine wine (worthless), 2 sets of masterwork artisan’s tools (55 gp each), silver holy symbol of a good-aligned deity (25 gp), and a small oak cask of several hundred-year-old unblended “cask-strength” whisky (80 gp, or 2,000 gp if sold to a collector or master distiller).

Area 1–13: Dwarfven Burial Vault (EL 5)

The door to this area is locked and trapped. This room is decorated with beautiful carvings and graceful stone arches. The burial niches that line these walls are slightly shorter than the ones in the other corridors, and a large stone casket dominates the center of the room.

This tomb is dedicated to the many dwarves that fell in the great battle, and their leaders and heroes are buried here. Ten dwarfven warriors lie in rotted robes holding dwarfven waraxes across their chests. The central casket is the tomb of the dwarf lord Gedgrath; his name and title are carved on the lid in dwarven script. Removing the lid requires a Strength check (DC 28). Gedgrath is lying in state here. His items and the treasure he fathered before his final journey are here, as well as the weapons of the other dwarves made up the treasure.

Locked Stone Door: 4 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 80; Break (DC 30); Open Lock (DC 35)

Falling Spike Trap: CR 5; +15 melee (6d6, crit x3); Search (DC 24); Disable Device (DC 30); a field of spikes drops from the ceiling as a character enters the room; apply damage to the 5-ft. square on either side of the door.

Treasure: 10 dwarfven waraxes (300 gp), masterwork dwarven full plate (1,800 gp), jewel-encrusted masterwork great axe (820 gp), mithral crown studded with fire opals (5,500 gp). Note: Bringing this many dwarfven artifacts to the dwarfven market might raise questions about how they were acquired.

Area 1–14: Gnome Burial Vault (EL 2)

The door to this vault has been smashed to rubble. Inside are a large marble slab and a few burial niches, but the bones of the dead lie scattered on the ground. The air is noticeably colder in this chamber, which has already been looted. It is a tribute to the gnome heroes of the great battle; the marble slab has their story and the history of the battle inscribed on it, which may be of interest to bards. It could also make reference to the villains’ stronghold that was sealed but never cleansed; this detail is left to the discretion of the DM for further development. A patch of brown mold and a pitiful treasure both wait in the corner.

Brown Mold (1): CR 2; deals 3d6 points of cold subdual damage within 5 ft.; fire within 5 ft. causes it to double in size; cold damage destroys it; for more information, refer to the DMG.

Treasure: 1 sp per party member.

Area 1–15: The Rast’s Lair (EL 5)

This rough-walled stone chamber is lit by an unseen source. A rast dwells in a smaller cave to one side of the main room. Lilith called it after she had the Ebon Union rob the herbalist’s shop; if the heroes have not already made the connection, they may realize that a rast’s claw was one of the stolen items, but only if they can identify the creature. It attacks fearlessly and relentlessly as soon as the party enters its lair. The rast’s treasure is the source of the light and hovers at the ceiling of the smaller chamber (15 feet up; describe them as you would colored light bulbs).

Rast (1): CR 5; hp 28; see the MM.

Tactics: The rast hovers in the smaller section of the cave until the party enters, possibly drawn by the light of the potion. It attempts to paralyze as many opponents as possible before selecting one to feed on, and this unlucky hero gets all four claw attacks as the rast tries to drag him or her away while the rest of the party watches helplessly. If surrounded in close combat, the rast rises to the ceiling and actively targets opponents with its gaze attack until the odds are evened.

Treasure: Potion of fire breath (red), potion of fly (blue), and potion of gaseous form (green). Note: Until consumed, these potions also produce a faint glow of the color indicated and levitate upward at a rate of 1 foot per round unless restrained.

Area 1–16: Angus Tomb (EL 5)

The doors to this chamber are locked. Double doors give way into a vault at the end of the corridor. A large casket sits in the center of the rectangular room, unadorned except for some carved script on the lid. Rotting tapestries hang from brass rods on all four walls, and brass braziers stand empty in all four corners. The brazier in the southwest corner seems to be leaning at an odd angle. This room is the final resting place of the Lord Angus who marshaled the army and masterminded the defense of the citadel during the war. He was laid to rest in a place of honor, and for many weeks mourners passed around his tomb (the worn path in the floor can be noticed with a Search check [DC 18]). The inscription on the lid reads:

Colm Angus
Lord of Eamonvale
Slain on the Ramparts
For the Sake of his People
Let None Disturb his Rest

A great hunter, he was buried with a treasure of his personal hunting weapons, although the Sword of Angus was passed on through his heirs to Arb. The tomb can be opened with a successful Strength check (DC 20).

The brazier in the southwest corner leans because the floor it sits on is ready to collapse. This weakness can be identified by the usual Knowledge (architecture... or engineering), Craft (stonemasonry), or dwarfen Wisdom checks (all at DC 20). Any weight greater than 150 pounds on a 10-ft. by 10-ft. square around the brazier will trigger a collapse. The floor in a 25-ft. by 25-ft. area in the corner will buckle momentarily before collapsing. Treat characters in the triggering area as being in the bury zone and characters elsewhere in the collapse area as being in the slide zone of a cave-in as described in Chapter 4 of the DMG. Characters in the bury zone suffer 2d6 points of damage from the fall and 8d6 points of damage from the stone blocks that follow them down (Reflex save [DC 15] halves), and they are pinned automatically (1d6 points of subdual damage per minute until freed). Characters in the slide zone take 2d6 points of falling damage, plus 3d6 points of collapse damage and are automatically pinned (Reflex save [DC 15] halves and avoids pin). Rules for freeing pinned characters can be found in the DMG. The collapse spills some or all of the party into Area 2–6, which has its own nasty surprises.

Locked Stone Doors: 4 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 70; Break (DC 30); Open Lock (DC 35).

Collapsing Floor Trap: CR 5; 10-ft. x 10-ft. bury zone (10d6), Reflex save (DC 15) save for 5d6 plus pinned for 1d6/round); 25-ft. x 25-ft. slide zone (5d6 plus pinned), Reflex save (DC 15) for 2d6 and no pin; Search (DC 20, certain skills only); Disable Device (DC 30). The zone takes 2d6 points of falling damage, plus 3d6 points of collapse damage and are automatically pinned (Reflex save [DC 15] halves and avoids pin). Rules for freeing pinned characters can be found in the DMG. The collapse spills some or all of the party into Area 2–6, which has its own nasty surprises.

Locked Secret Door: 4 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 35); Search (DC 25); disguised as stone, but formed of iron on the inside.

Area 1–17: The Paladin’s Cenotaph

No doors restrict access to this small room. It holds only a large marble tomb raised off the floor on a slab of granite. An inscription on the pedestal reads:

Let none forget Roark the Righteous, Palace of the North and Defender of Eamonnval, Lost on the Last Day as he Ended the Dark Reign of the Dead Lord Bless Him That He May Never Succumb To the Curse of Unlife

The citizens of Eamonnval were unwilling to see Roark buried here because of the manner of his death. The cenotaph was placed to commemorate his death, but the heir to the Angus lordship buried his body in a secret chamber anyway. The “tomb” is actually a block of solid marble carved to represent a burial vault and it does not “open.”

Roark was a paladin from the distant north who heeded the call of the imperiled valley and rode to aid the defense. A cadre of powerful nercromancers and undead beings led the invaders, and a wight fatally wounded Roark even as he struck it down. He bade the citizens prepare a consecrated grave for him as he struggled with the curse. They laid him down before the injuries claimed him, and even as he passed, his spirit struggled against the spawn within. His soul remains trapped within the husk of his body, barely holding the wight impulse at bay, and as the evil influences on this level have increased his grip on undeath has been slipping.

Nothing here indicates that Roark is anywhere in this room, but a thorough Search (DC 25) reveals a secret door. Behind it lies Roark’s tomb, hidden from would-be grave robbers in hopes that what he might become would never see the light of day.

Locked Secret Door: 4 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 35); Search (DC 25); disguised as stone, but formed of iron on the inside.

Inside the recess beneath the lid is the body of Roark the Righteous. His skeletal remains are clad in age-tarnished splint mail, a large shield rests across his torso, and his penitently folded hands hold a large sword, point down across the shield. A whispered voice suddenly whirs around you like an icy wind. “You have unleashed me… my fight is lost….again…. The voice cries out “Noooooo!” as the skeletal corpse leaps up and flings itself at you!

Roark the Righteous (Wight): CR 8; SZ M Undead; HD 8d12; hp 62; Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 19; Atk +5 melee (1d4+1 plus energy drain, slam) or +6 melee (1d10+2 plus 1d6 cold, +1 bastard sword of frost, crit 19–20); SA energy drain, create spawn; SQ undead, on the brink; AL LE; SV Fort +2, Ref +2, Will +7; Str 12, Dex 12, Con –, Int 11, Wis 13, Cha 15.

Skills: Climb +5, Hide +8, Listen +8, Move Silently +16, Search +7, Spot +8.

Feats: Blind-Fight, Improved Initiative.

On The Brink (Su): The powerful spirit of Roark’s living self is nearly able to keep the wight from animating his corpse. When Roark the Wight is active, any shift in the balance of positive and negative energy affects him. Sources of positive divine energy such as bless, consecrate, prayer, or holy water (or others at the DM’s discretion) allow Roark’s spirit to subdue the undead impulse and disable but not destroy the wight. Similarly, introducing negative energy reinforces the wight’s dominance over the remains; for each spell powered by negative energy cast on or around the wight, it requires one additional positive spell to restore the balance and return Roark to a pile of bones. Destroying the wight destroys Roark as well, but an extensive quest may allow Roark’s spirit to be salvaged and laid to rest. This development is up to the DM.

Tactics: The wight abandons the shield and attacks with either its slam/energy drain ability or its sword (50% chance of either) until killed, turned, or overcome by Roark’s spirit. Based on the clues on the statue and in the text block, the heroes may be able to help Roark overcome the wight and return his own corpse to the tomb. The pedestal says “Bless Him,” and a bless or other intervention introduces enough divine energy to allow Roark to regain control of his remains and fling them back into the burial recess. The heroes must still return the lid to its original position, and the wight only remains subdued temporarily; the party may still need to find a permanent solution.

Treasure: +1 bastard sword of frost (inscribed with “chillblade” in northern script), large steel shield, scale mail.
Chapter Five: Level 2 — Fungus Among Us

Level 2: Fungus Among Us

Entrances: This level has only one surface access point: a slimy tunnel winding down from the basement of the mill. The unstable floor in Area 1–16 may collapse, dumping characters in Area 2–6. A passage from Area 1–7 arrives in Area 2–24. The waterfall room.

Exits: The waterfall room in Area 2–24 has an underground river that flows out to Level 4. A secret passage in Area 2–17 leads to Area 3–9. If the heroes were to bring down the ceiling in Area 2–6, they could climb up to Area 1–16.

Wandering Monsters: Many of the creatures on this level are plants and tend to wait rather than actively look for their prey. A few of the creatures, however, do move about — check on 1d20 for a wandering monster encounter every hour or after any loud event.

1d20 Encounter
1-2 Bats (2d6, subtract from Area 2–2)
3-4 Rats (2d6, subtract from Area 2–23)
5 Dire Rats (1d6+1, subtract from Area 2–5)
6 Gethrax (from Area 2–17)
7 Sogrin the Ogre (from Area 2–16)
8 Rust Monster (1, subtract from Area 2–10)
9-20 No Encounter

Detections: The level has a strong life force, but neither good nor evil seems to dominate it... rather, hunger is the driving force of these creatures. The lair of Gethrax the blackguard radiates potent evil.

Continuous Effects: This level is a major drainage for the city, and the constant flow of runoff and nutrients ensures that the caves and corridors are always full of water and slime. Any character moving more than double his movement rate or adding actions to a doubled move (e.g., run, charge, and attack, and so on) is subject to tripping over a hidden obstacle. Make a Reflex save (DC 12) for the character; failure results in falling prone, but no damage is taken thanks to the thick moss growing everywhere. Enough luminescent fungi are scattered throughout this level that the overall lighting is the equivalent of moderate darkness (1/4 concealment, 10% miss chance).

Standard Features: The walls here are of rough, unworked stone, and the floor and ceiling are uneven and studded with stalactites and stalagmites. Tunnels are generally rounded with water trickling down the middle; rooms have pools of standing water with thick carpets of bright green algae. Secret doors on this level are actually curtains of moss and fungus, but detect just like doors. Overhead clearance is 10 feet in the tunnels and 15 feet in the caverns, measured from the water level (some caverns have pools that go much deeper).

This is the second level below the surface, although it can be reached directly via the tunnel below the Mill. The caverns here were carved by the force of moving water and still tend to be more wet than dry. The steady flow of organic waste from the mill has spawned a great deal of botanical and fungal growth on this level — some if it quite intelligent. Among the vegetable denizens of the swampy caverns are a shambling mound and some assassin vines, and non-botanical life abounds in the form of monstrous cave crayfish and comical (but deadly) dire frogs. Lilith’s summoned rust monsters are here as well. The most dangerous occupant is Gethrax, one of Lilith’s allies, who makes his lair here to be close to the surface.

The hazards here generally keep the thieves from passing through, but Lilith and Devlin use this level to access the surface from time to time. Several adventurers seeking bounties on the demons penetrated this far into the dungeon before meeting their ends. As the plants have little use for the bodies beyond nourishment, the possessions of the fallen make up most of the treasure here.

Area 2-1: Entry Chamber — The Millworks Basement

This wedge-shaped cavern has tunnels leading to other areas on Level 2 and one leading to Area R–3 in the mill. A pool of stagnant, stinking water in the corner conceals a water-filled tunnel (see Area 2–15) leading to Area 2–16.

Area 2–2: Going Batty

This cave holds a relatively harmless surprise for the party — dozens of bats. As soon as they are disturbed by loud noise, attacks, or major changes in their environment, the bats take flight, wheel crazily around the party for a few moments, and fly off into some other part of the cave. They inflict superficial injuries, spread lots of guano, and alert Gethrax (Area 2–17) to the intruders.

Bat (40): CR 1/10; hp 1; see the MM.

Area 2–3: Albino Cave Crayfish (EL 5)

Consider each character’s encumbrance before running this encounter.
Gliding blue fungi on the ceiling light this long, narrow cavern. The floor is flat for the first time and is covered with a spongy layer of mossy growth. A trickle of water is heard at the far end. The flat surface in this area is not actually the cavern floor, but a floating bed of moss on the surface of a pool of stagnant water. The heaviest members of the party will likely fall through the surface of the moss bed to be trapped underneath. There, they will encounter the albino cave crayfish that live in the pool, not to mention the potential of drowning as a result of armor or encumbrance. Several previous adventurers have died here, and a rich treasure awaits surviving explorers of the pool.

False Floor Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary; Reflex save (DC 24) avoids; Search (DC 24); Disable Device (DC 22 to bypass). Creatures weighing 200 pounds or more attempting to cross the cave trigger this "trap." The mossy blanket closes over the hero’s head as he falls, trapping him in the dark (use near-total darkness, 9/10 concealment, 40% miss chance). He might be able to find his way back to the original hole, which requires a Search check (DC 15) and a Swim check (DC 10). An alternative is to make a new hole; in this case, treat the carpet of moss as having damage reduction 5 and 4 hit points per 5-foot section. Characters under the moss can tear a hole with a Strength check (DC 24). Other heroes may attempt to assist, but they are subject to the 200-pound weight limit. Dispersing body weight by slithering on one's belly or using long or flat objects (ladders, large weapons, and so forth) increases the limit to 300 pounds; doing both increases it to 400 pounds.

Albino Monstrous Crayfish (2): CR 3; SZ L Vermine (10 ft. long); HD 4d8+8; hp 26; Init +0; Spd 20 ft., swim 40 ft.; AC 15; Atk +5 melee (1d6+3 [x2], claws, crit 19–20); Face/Reach 5 ft. by 10 ft./5 ft.; SA improved grab, squeeze, improved critical; SQ vermin, blindsight (when in water); AL N; SV Fort +6, Ref +1, Will +1; Str 16, Dex 10, Con 14, Int –, Wis 10, Cha 2.

Skills: Hide +6, Spot +10

Note: The Monstrous Crayfish appears in The Tome of Horrors, by Necromancer Games.

Tactics: When the first character enters the pool, the crayfish leave their holes and approach slowly. They wait 1 full round after the fall and then attempt to flank a single opponent until another becomes available. They fight until reduced to 25% of their original hit points before retreating into their deep holes (treat as 3/4). Treasure: Breastplate, longsword, rotten canvas satchel with silver latch (5 gp for latch), broken crossbow, 4+1 crossbow bolts, jar of Keoghtom’s ointment, pouch with 49 gp.

Area 2–4: And Then There Were Two (EL 2, or 3 if 2 creatures are present)

The pale, blubbery creature crouched here is a dretch and should look familiar from the party’s adventures in the city above. It is scratching strange circles in the sand… that is, it is about to use its summon tan’ri ability.

Dretch (1): CR 2; hp 11; see the MM.

Area 2–5: Dire Rats

This area seems to have been set up as a camp of some sort. The remains of a small fire and a few chewed bones are tuck up against the back wall, and some tatters of woolen cloth may have once been a bedroll. This cave is home to hungry dire rats that are dangerous on their own and even more so if they strike while the party is suffering the effects of the collapse in Area 2–6. In a small hollow behind the shredded bedroll is their nest; they keep their treasure here, still on the back of a dungeoneer who failed to return to the surface.

Dire Rats (8): CR 1/3; hp 5; see the MM.

Tactics: The dire rats are defensive of their lair, although no young are present at this time. They fight aggressively until 75% of them are killed, at which point they flee into the caverns to seek another home.

Treasure: Leather pack, clean linen shirt, 3 torches, short sword, scroll tube with 3 arcane scrolls (mirror image, spectral hand, Tensor’s floating disk), chainmail coin pouch with waist chain and simple lock (25 gp) containing 32 pp, key on rotten leather cord (to lock).

Area 2–6: Bring the House Down (EL 5 if ceiling collapses)

This chamber is different from any other on this level in that a portion of its roof is constructed of mortared stone. This section supports Area 1–16 above, although not very well. Any loud noise, concussion of applied force (striking, leaning, pushing, and so on) against the columns or ceiling will bring it down on top of the heroes. See Area 1–16 for damage and opportunities to recognize the danger. The damage zones are larger here, however; use the entire collapse area as the bury zone and a 10-foot perimeter beyond that as the slide zone. There is a very good chance the party will enter this room from above!

If the dire rats in Area 2–5 have not already been dealt with in some manner, they investigate the collapse. This encounter may hamper the rescue of pinned characters or deal lethal damage to an already injured party, so allow 2 or more rounds before the rats arrive.

Collapsing Ceiling Trap: CR 5; 10-ft. x 10-ft. bury zone (10d6), Reflex save (DC 15) for 5d6 plus pinned for 1d6/round; 25-ft. x 25-ft. slide zone (5d6 plus pinned), Reflex save (DC 15) for 2d6 and no pin; Search (DC 24, certain skills only); Disable Device (DC 22 to stabilize). See Area 1–16 for details.
Area 2–7: Just A Fun Guy (EL 2–5 if encountered alone)

Hidden among the multitudes of mushrooms and fungi that cling to the walls of the corridor is a violet fungus. It is well fed and inactive and does not attack the party unless alerted by the shriekers in Area 2–8 or attacked. Noticing it among the other fungi requires a Spot check (DC 18).

Violet Fungus (1): CR 3; hp 15; see the MM.

Tactics: This fungus does not attack the party on sight. If it is attacked or if it hears the shriekers in Area 2–8, it moves as fast as it can to attack. Its primitive, fungal instincts kick in, and it fights until destroyed.

Area 2–8: The ‘Shroom Room (EL 7)

This narrow cave is split by a fissure so deep that the bottom is beyond the reach of the party’s lights. Tunnel openings are on both sides of the fissure. The entire room is densely populated with slimy fungi; a particularly tall purple variety dominates the north side. Some of the tall purple mushrooms are shriekers, with 2 violet fungi hidden at the edges of the chasm. The chasm is 10 feet wide and jumpable, requiring a Jump check (DC 15). A failed Jump check requires a Reflex save (DC 12) to avoid falling prone; failure by more than 5 results in 1d3 points of bludgeoning damage.

For the purposes of this adventure, the fissure is bottomless, and any character or item falling into it is lost. Alternatively, the DM may use it to integrate other dungeon areas or place a river at the bottom that drains into Area 2–24.

Lying under a mound of fungal growth (Search DC 20) is the body of an independent burglar who fatefully tried his hand at dungeon delving; his belongings make up the treasure for this area.

Violet Fungus (2): CR 3; hp 15, 16; see the MM.

Shrieker (4): CR 1; hp 11; see the MM.

Tactics: The shriekers here react to any light or movement within 10 feet or anywhere on their side of the fissure. If some party members are more inclined or equipped than others to jump the fissure, this probably means that the party is split up for this encounter. The distribution of heroes between the 2 sides is especially important if the violet fungus from Area 2–7 has not been killed; it will arrive after 3 rounds of shrieking. All of these fungi fight (and shriek) instinctively until killed.

Treasure: Chain shirt, dagger, 3 silver and emerald hairpins in a velvet envelope (1,200 gp), gold bracelet (60 gp), pouch with 18 gp, 20 sp.

Area 2–9: The Little Madman

This small cave has two tunnels at one end. In the corner furthest from the tunnel entrances lies a crumpled body. The robes are tattered and dirty, but even from a distance they seem to be the colors of the Band of the Crimson Mantle. This is the body of Dresden the Mad (unless the DM has chosen to alter these events). When the Band engaged the rust monsters from Area 2–10, Dresden got separated from the group. The other members had far more to fear from the creatures and they fled with their metal items, leaving the little gnome to his fate. Rust stains are around his body, and he has been scavenged of all metal items, but his remaining equipment makes up the treasure for this area (his original profile can be found in the NPC Appendix). Note that any loud noises may attract the rust monsters from next door.

Treasure: Sling, dirty red robes, potion of fire breath, potion of gaseous form, 2 arcane scrolls (haste and knock), pouch of rocks, clay flask. (Note: The rust monsters have consumed Dresden’s dagger, sling bullets, and magic ring.)

Area 2–10: Rust Monsters (EL 3)

Bits of wood and leather stained with rust litter the floor in this long, narrow room. Two domed, earth-colored creatures with the appearance of large beetles burst from a burrow at the far end and rush toward the heroes as they enter. These rust monsters are more of Lilith’s called creatures (although they are normal, not fiendish) that she turned loose in the caverns to guard against intruders. Their treasure is entirely non-metal and is mostly buried in their burrow (Search DC 15).

Rust Monsters (2): CR 3; hp 28, 29; see the MM.

Tactics: The rust monsters rush directly toward the largest source of metal in the party, although they do not attack the same target if several similar volumes of metal are present. They do not pursue fleeing adventurers if a meal of rusted metal is available. If both are reduced to 25% of their original hit points or if one is killed, they flee.

Treasure: Several worthless weapon hafts and handles (clubs), 50 feet of silk rope, a jeweled leather belt with no buckle (160 gp).

Area 2–11: The Oracle Frogs (EL 7)

On the right side of this tunnel is a large, dark pool of water. Sitting on a stone ledge at the back are three very large, placid looking frogs. Their eyes swivel to watch the heroes as they walk past. A few coins are visible in the murky pool below the ledge. These dire frogs possess rudimentary intelligence and a gift for extra-sensory visions. They answer one question per character, per day, to a maximum of 3 per day. Before a question is answered, an item worth at least 1 gp must be tossed into the pool below the frogs. That pool is full of the frogs’ treasure, but it is trapped with a curse that follows anyone who steals from it.

If attacked, the dire frogs fight until killed. They are unwilling to leave the dungeon voluntarily and resist any attempts to capture them. If the party is a single character of any size or is made up of 3 or fewer Small characters, there is a 20% chance that the frogs will be hungry and attack on sight.

Dire Frogs (3): CR 4; SZ L Animal; HD 4d8+8; hp 33, 34, 35; Init +1; Spd 30 ft., swim 40 ft.; AC 16; Atk +4 ranged (tongue grapple) and +2 melee (2d6+7, bite), or +7 melee (2d6+7, bite), or +7 melee (1d8+2, claw rake on successful leap); SA leap, improved grab, swallow whole, rake; SQ collective oracle, darkvision 60 ft.; AL N; SV

Fort +3, Ref +1, Will –1; Str 12, Dex 13, Con 14, Int 2, Wis
9, Cha 6.

Collective Oracle (Sp): These three dire frogs have a unique shared ability to perform minor acts of clairvoyance and fortune telling. They answer a maximum of 3 questions per day, but only 1 question per character per day. All three frogs must be alive and together to answer questions. Treat the questions as divinations with a 70% chance of accuracy. The answers are limited by the frogs’ vocal capabilities and will always consist of three syllables, one from each frog. For example, asking about a mysterious cave in which lurks a dangerous, plant-based creature might result in an answer such as “vines... bring... death.” Simple questions such as “Who are you?” still count toward the daily limit and produce simple answers such as “We... are... frogs.” There is a 50% chance that the syllables/words are in the wrong order and require deciphering by the asker.

Note: Dire Frogs appear in The Tome of Horrors by Necromancer Games.

Tactics: The dire frogs only fight if attacked. Any other activity is met with total apathy. If an opportunity to escape a fight is possible, they take it; otherwise they fight to the best of their ability until dead.

Treasure: Potion of cat’s grace, flask of oil, silver hand mirror (11 gp), drinking horn with gold and lapis lazuli rim (65 gp), 78 gp, 130 sp.

Bestow Curse Trap: CR 4; triggered by removal of items from the pool; victim cursed as per spell; Will save (DC 18) negates; Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28). The frogs’ pool, for an unknown reason, bestows a powerful curse upon any creature taking an item from it. The curse functions as per the spell bestow curse, although the DM is free to come up with more colorful curses, such as “can only eat insects” or “can only speak in single syllables.” The curse on the character or on the pool can be removed by the methods listed in the spell description, but killing the frogs does not lift either curse.

Area 2–12: Awwwww, Rats! (EL 1)

A huge pile of rotten plant matter and flotsam has washed up in a sandy corner of this room. The rats have hollowed out a nest in the pile of garbage, which also conceals their treasure.

Rats (10): CR 1/8; hp 1 (x5), 2 (x5); see the MM.

Tactics: These rats are more likely to flee than fight, although they attack any creature between them and the mouth of their cave for 1 or 2 rounds on their way out.

Treasure: Pouch with 4 pp, 11 gp, 54 sp and a mummified human hand bearing a tattoo of a dragon (actually the icon of a distant cult).

Area 2–13: Assassin Vines (EL 5)

This corridor has an unusually low ceiling. Up ahead, backlit by a purple glow, is a pile of something on the ground — bodies. More specifically, the remains of bodies: bones, armor, weapons, and baggage lie strewn across the corridor, surrounded by hundreds of tiny mushrooms of every color. The 2 assassin vines that dwell on the ceiling of this corridor do not strike until the remains of their victims have attracted the party. Detecting them before they attack requires a Spot check (DC 25) modified by the party’s vision abilities and light source. Their treasure is spread over the length of the corridor, along with the remains of the deceased owners. The glow from down the tunnel originates in Area 2–14.

Assassin Vine (2): CR 3; hp 30 each; see the MM.

Tactics: As soon as one or more creatures enter the corridor below them, the vines attack, lashing out with their tough vines. They immediately attempt to use their improved grab/constrict ability and may try to hoist up a grabbed character.

Treasure: Broken shortbow, broken hilt of a bastard sword, club, backpack full of rotten food, 50 feet of hemp rope (rotten, will break under a load greater than 100 pounds), suit of half plate (with skeletal remains inside despite being scattered throughout the tunnel), ring of climbing (still on finger inside gauntlet).

Area 2–14: A Cozy Hollow

This small alcove is just big enough for the party to enter. Light is provided by clumps of phosphorescent fungus as described in the DMG; and the floor is relatively dry, providing a good place for a break.

A Search check (DC 15) reveals an etched sigil on the wall of this cave: the stylized initials “E.B.” Elinda Bannon spent a few hours here when she passed through several days ago.

Area 2–15: Underwater Tunnel

This underwater tunnel connects Areas 2–1 and 2–16. Passing through it safely requires 3 Swim checks (DC 15, cumulative –1 penalty per round underwater). Only Medium-sized creatures or smaller may attempt it. Halfway through it is the treasure of an unsuccessful swimmer, though the skeleton has long-since washed away.

Treasure: Canvas wrapped solid gold bust of a merchant patriarch from a nearby kingdom (900 gp, possibly worth more to the merchant house).

Area 2–16: An Ogre’s Tears (EL 2)

A motionless pool of dark water stands on either side of the tunnel, with a narrow gravel path leading between them. A water-filled tunnel (see Area 2–15) connects one of the pools with Area 2–1. A slab of rock at the back of the tunnel originates in Area 2–16.

Tactics: Sogrin is wounded from his last fight and does not feel like another one just yet. He tries to frighten the party with loud, smelly bellowing and false lunges with his club and spear. A Sense Motive check (DC 15) reveals that he is only feinting with his weapons. If given the opportunity, he flees past the party and hides elsewhere. He is not above making peace with the heroes and even considers joining them to fight Gethrax, if they make such an offer. How long he stays and his overall disposition as an NPC is up to the DM.

Treasure: Huge greatclub; Huge longspear; hide armor (Large, and foul-smelling); potion of cure moderate wounds; potion of cure serious wounds (Sogrin does not know what these are, only that they are valuable); pouch with 60 gp, 50 sp, and a dead rat.

Area 2–17: The Dead Man’s Party (EL 10)

This low-ceilinged cavern stinks of fresh death and the salty-sweet odor of blood. In one corner is the source of the stench: a pile of eviscerated corpses under a cloud of black flies. This is the lair of Gethrax, the powerful blackguard. He visits the city regularly, causing havoc here and there and returning with news for his patron, Lilith. He has also trapped Level 1 with his box o’ darkness traps (see New Items Appendix), a device crafted by his sinister order. He waits, invisible and bathed in blood, in the far corner behind the bodies. He may know that the party is coming from the bats in Area 2–2 or from various other events or loud noises. His items are the only treasure here.

This area is desecrated, and undead created here receive +1 hit points and a +1 bonus to attack, damage, and saving throw rolls. Checks to turn undead in this area suffer a –3 penalty for the duration of the desecrate spell (10 hours). The bodies (beggars, drunks, harlots, and other “unmissed” types) are the results of Gethrax’s deranged anatomical exploration and his blood rituals. Each corpse has a chunk of black stone in its eye socket — they are prepared to be animated, but only a Spellcraft or Knowledge (necromancy) check (DC 15) reveals this.

Gethrax, male human Ftr3/Clr5/Blk2: CR 10; SZ M; HD 3d10+6 plus 5d8+10 plus 2d10+4; hp 70; Init; Spd 20 ft.; AC 19; Ark +13/+8 melee (2d4+4, +1 mighty cleaving falchion, crit 18–20); SA spells, command/rebuke undead, poison use, smite good (+2 attack, +2 damage); SQ detect good, dark blessing; AL CE; SV Fort +12, Ref +4, Will +7; Str 17, Dex 13, Con 15, Int 10, Wis 16, Cha 15.

Feats: Cleave, Combat Casting, Extra Turning (rebuke), Power Attack, Sunder, Weapon Focus (falchion).

Divine Spells Prepared (5/4/3/2): 0—cure light wounds, detect magic (x2), guidance, read magic; 1st—bane, cure light wounds (x2), doom; 2nd—bull’s strength, cure moderate wounds, death knell; 3rd—animate dead, dispel magic.

Domain Spells (Death/Evil): 1st—protection from good; 2nd—desecrate; 3rd—animate dead.

Blackguard Spells (2): 1st—cure light wounds, inflict light wounds.

Area 2–18: The River Room

A powerful underground river flows along the back wall of this cavern, and a body is lying near it. Across the swift flowing river is a secret door that leads to Level 3, where the Ebon Union has their lair. The thief (whose body holds this room’s treasure) was headed for the door when Gethrax surprised him in an unusually malicious mood. The presence of his corpse may help the heroes locate the secret door.

Secret Door: Search (DC 18), opens easily. A small ledge on the far side of the river holds a tunnel entrance that the thieves use to come and go from their lair. It is concealed by drooping strands of algae but is not otherwise secured. One must cross the river to gain access; the river is 10 feet wide at this point (Jump DC 15) and flows at a rate of 40 feet per round toward Area 2–22.

Treasure: Leather pack containing jeweled ebony inkpot and pen (40 gp), gold hourglass (100 gp), empty map case with inlaid mother-of-pearl (35 gp), thieves’ tools, 50 ft. of silk rope, grappling iron, 2 daggers, leather armor, pouch of caltrops (2 uses), pouch with 6 gp and 10 sp.

Area 2–19: Darkmantles (EL 3)

The corridor widens here, and there is a deep pool of murky water on one side, and a small alcove on the other. A shovel and a crowbar lie half-buried in the middle of the soggy floor. The tools are the leavings of an ill-fated pair of fortune-seekers whose bodies in the pool make up the treasure. A group of 4 darkmantles on the ceiling await the heroes’ investigation of the pool, the chamber, or the odd debris, although they are stationed directly above the pool from the floor, an underwater passage (see Area 2–21) leads to Area 2–23.

Darkmantles (4): CR 1; hp 5, 6 (x2), 7; see the MM.

Tactics: The darkmantles hang hidden over the center of the chamber (Spot DC 21). If a character enters center of the area at any time, the darkmantles release their grip on the ceiling and attack. If the initial attacks miss, they use their darkness ability to cover their flight back to the ceiling for another attempt. All of these creatures fight until slain. A character whose vision is obscured by darkmantles or by darkness may find that she is prone to accident. Each round, each character should make a Reflex save (DC 12) to avoid falling prone (15% chance of falling into pool) and suffering 1d4 points of subdual damage. The low DC represents that only the clumsiest or unluckiest character will stagger into a wall with a darkmantle on his head!

Area 2–20: Slimed (EL 3)

This low tunnel has many stalactites hanging from the ceiling. In addition to the water dripping down, a green slime waits here to drop onto unsuspecting parties, usually attacking the second or third person to pass under it. That character immediately notices a burning sensation on exposed flesh as the wet, slimy mass falls from above. A previous victim lies nearly completely buried (Search DC 18) in the tunnel with a few bits of treasure.

Green Slime: CR 4; deals 1d6 points of temporary Constitution damage per round while in contact with flesh and 2d6 points of damage per round against wood or metal (also ignoring metal’s Hardness); may be scraped off on first round of contact or frozen, burned, or cut off on subsequent rounds; destroyed by extreme cold or heat, sunlight or cure disease; for more information, refer to the DMG.

Treasure: Hand axe, potion of invisibility, pouch with 8 gp and 20 sp.

Area 2–21: Underwater Tunnel

This tunnel is full of black water and connects Area 2–19 to Area 2–23. Passing through it safely requires three Swim checks (DC 15, cumulative –1 penalty per round underwater). Only Medium-sized creatures or smaller may attempt it. Characters arriving in Area 2–23 break the surface in the middle of a very large pile of rats.

Area 2–22: The Big Pool (EL 8)

A great pool of murky water dominates this large cavern. Piles of debris and driftwood are piled up around the edges, where the sheer walls come right down to the water. On the far wall, a swift current runs across the pool to an exit tunnel and pours over what could only be a giant waterfall. A small cave is next to the inlet of the river, but standing water isolates it from the sandy beach at the tunnel entrance.

This pool leads to the exits from this level, but it is difficult to navigate. The fast moving river current keeps the pool flowing in a whirlpool motion; thus, crossing the room is not easy. Creatures falling into the pool are swept into the reach of the shambling mound that dwells here or into the current the pulls them over the falls. A secret door to Area 2–24 is not hard to locate or open, but to reach it the party must find a way across the water. Also, a narrow ledge begins at the far edge of the waterfall and leads to another exit, but the logistics of crossing the swift current at the edge of the waterfall are complicated.

The shambling mound lurks between the entrance tunnel and the mouth of Area 2–23 and may be mistaken for another logjam of floating debris (Spot DC 22). Despite the name, the creature no longer shambles: it is rooted to the bottom of the pool lest it be swept over the falls. Still, its reach threatens the exits of both tunnels, and nearly everything coming downstream gets swept once around the whirlpool, so it has grown big and lazy. Any treasure the creature might have possessed has been washed away by the swift current (although a great amount of wealth awaits in Area 2–23).

Accessing the secret door is the easiest way into Area 2–24 (although not many options are available once there). The whirlpool, which flows counter-clockwise at a rate of 20 feet per round, must be crossed to reach the door. The whirlpool effect in the big pool carries floating objects into the current naturally (and over the falls!).

An alternative is to cross the river current to the far side of the waterfall and find the small ledge there. Doing so requires some way to stay afloat (flotation, a raft, magic, and so on) and a way to maneuver across the river. The current flows at a rate of 40 feet per round. The walls are smooth up to 3 feet above water level and are then rough.
and covered with slimy protrusions from there up to the ceiling.

Huge Immobile Shambling Mound (1): CR 8; SZ H; Plant; HD 14d8+46; hp 109; Init –1; Spd 20 ft. (currently 0 ft.); AC 21; Att +13 melee (2d6+9 [x2], slam); Face/Reach 10 ft. by 10 ft./20 ft.; SQ plant, electricity immunity, fire resistance (30); AL N; SV Fort +14, Ref +3, Will +4; Str 29, Dex 8, Con 21, Int 7, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills: Hide +12, Listen +4, Move Silently +4.

Tactics: The shambling mound has learned the value of patience in waiting for its meals to be delivered by the river current. It waits for the heroes to enter the room, either by the water or perhaps by picking their way across the rafts of driftwood that conceal the beast itself! When it attacks, it strikes first with a series of slam attacks to reduce the opposition. On the 2nd or 3rd round, the creature uses its improved grab/constrict attack against one character. It cannot move or flee, although clever heroes may decide to apply their energy to dislodging it and forcing it over the falls (which requires 20 points of damage to its underwater extremities).

Secret Door: Search (DC 15), opens easily. This secret door is located 20 feet above water level on the wall opposite the entrance tunnels. The wind generated in Area 2–24 causes the tendrils of slime that conceal the door to move about — this is what the party should notice. Getting to the door requires a Climb check (DC 20); falling into the pool results in being swept back toward the shambling mound.

Area 2–23: Rats, Rats, and More

Rats (20): CR 1/8; hp 1 (x5), 2 (x5); see the MM.

Tactics: These rats are threatened regularly by the shambling mound and so are easily panicked. As soon as they notice an infiltrator, they rush into a clawing, biting frenzy that does not subside until they are all killed. They do not pursue a character underwater or into the reach of the shambling mound.

Treasure: Ebony coffer (150 gp) wrapped in canvas containing 24 3-oz. platinum bars (90 gp each) stamped with the mark of a foreign merchant house. Revealing these in the city may have complex political results, but any development is up to the DM.

Area 2–24: Waterfall Well

This cavern is shaped like a cylinder, nearly 150 feet from top to bottom. The roar of falling water makes conversation in this area impossible, and the air is full of spray. A huge waterfall rushes over a precipice halfway up, crashing 80 feet down to a churning pool. Opposite that, a smaller waterfall exits a small tunnel and trickles down the slimy wall. A narrow ledge looks like it connects the exit of the small tunnel to the edge of the large waterfall. The water below swills and eddies before flowing out through a large tunnel opening.

This is the final area on this level. The waterfall flows into a deep well leading to Level 4, while a rough path leads to a tunnel to Area 1–7. A fall from (or being swept over) this waterfall results in 2d3 points of subdual damage and 4d6 points of normal damage. A character in the pool at the base should be required to begin checking for drowning after half his Constitution score in rounds, due to the incredible force of water involved. Characters in the pool must struggle to escape the force of the waterfall; a Swim check (DC 18) is required to stay afloat and suffer only 1d3 points of subdual damage. Failing this check requires another check immediately to avoid going under (for more on drowning, consult “The Drowning Rule” sidebar in Chapter 3 of the DMG). After 2d4 rounds, objects in the pool are swept downstream toward Area 4–1.
Chapter Six: Level 3 — A River Runs Through It

Level 3: A River Runs Through It

Entrances: The basement of the Ironworks (Area Q–8) has a secret passage to Area 3–1. Tunnels from Area 1–6 and Area 2–18 converge in Area 3–9.

Exits: The river flows over a waterfall to Area 4–1. The passage from Area 3–29 leads to Area 4–3.

Wandering Monsters: Most of the creatures on this level have lairs and move around very little. As a result, most of the wandering monster encounters are with minor creatures or with thieves on their way in or out of the lair. Roll 1d20 every hour, or after a loud event.

1d20 Encounter
1–2 Dire Rats (1d6+1, subtract from Area 3–5)
3–4 Ebon Union Thief (Burglar, Shifter, or Cutpurse)
5–6 Ebon Union Gang (2d4 Thugs/Knives plus 1 or 2 specialists)
7 Monstrous Spider (1, subtract from Area 3–11)
8–20 No Encounter

Shielding: The deep gnome stronghold is shielded with lead barriers. No magical detection or transportation is possible through the perimeter walls. The trap corridor is shielded as well, preventing detection and transportation magic within it.

Detections: The level radiates evil, although not to any overpowering degree.

Continuous Effects: The tunnels here are mostly dry, the water having drained off into the river. The reflected sunlight from the surface is far behind, as is the phosphorescent fungal growth; unless the party provides its own light, this area is in total darkness. The exception are the areas occupied by the Ebon Union, which are lit with torches or small fires and are considered to be equivalent to moderate darkness (1/4 concealment, 10% miss chance).

Standard Features: In the tunnels, the walls, floors, and ceilings are all rough, unworked stone. These tunnels and chambers average 10 feet high, unless otherwise indicated. The river gorge is 100 feet from ceiling to water level on average, and the depth of the river averages 15 feet. The lair of the Ebon Union features the exquisite craftsmanship of the deep gnomes: flawlessly fitted stone floors and walls with smooth stone ceilings. In these areas, overhead clearance is only 7 feet high, unless otherwise indicated. All interior doors are of worked stone (4 in. thick; Hardness 8; hp 60; Break [DC 28]; Open Lock [DC 30]) and open inward.

This is the third level below the surface, although it may be reached by a direct tunnel from the Ironworks (Area Q). Be aware that parties who arrive here via Levels 1 and 2 will have most likely gained a level. Those parties will need less recovery time between encounters, while parties coming directly from the surface will find the creatures, traps, and lack of neutral ground here very challenging indeed. The level is made up of the lair of the Ebon Union in an abandoned gnome gatehouse and the tunnels by which it is approached. The tunnels are filled with dangerous creatures, some placed by the thieves and others naturally occurring. Opponents on this level include gricks, monstrous spiders, mephits, and an enormous squid. Also present are Lilith’s abyssal troll and the bulk of the Ebon Union, including their master, Devlin.

A mighty underground river dominates the level, cutting it in half. The approach to the lair of the Ebon Union crosses it several times, and some form of trap or creature protects the crossings. The gnome gatehouse once protected the entrance to the gnomes’ great underground city, but the entry tunnel has collapsed, leaving a handful of rooms and the gnomes’ deadly trap corridor to be inhabited by the thieves’ guild.

Area 3-1: Entry Chamber — The Ironworks Tunnel

Descent into this spray-dampened chamber lands the heroes on a stone ledge. A sluice channel has been carved into the floor to carry fast-moving icy water through the room, powering the huge waterwheel. Past the thundering wheel, there is a matching ledge on the opposite side of the channel. The sluice is one of several powerful waterways that flow through the bedrock beneath the city. The builders of the forge cut this room out of the stone to access its forceful current to power their wheel, which drives the bellows and water pumps for the forges above. The party must slip through the narrow spaces around the thundering water wheel and over the sluice itself to proceed; this route requires a successful Balance or Dexterity check (DC 15). Ropes, poles, ladders, or other items can be used to reduce the danger (DC 10).
Level 3: A River Runs Through It
The water in the sluice moves at a rate of 40 feet per round. Any character falling in is swept through a low tunnel to be expelled high over the river; falling into the river in this way inflicts 2d3 points of subdual damage and 3d6 points of regular damage. They are then swept downstream into Area 4–1, passing below Area 3–11 on the way. A character falling into the sluice upstream from the wheel has the added pleasure of being crushed before falling into the river, suffering 4d10 points of damage without a save.

The far side of the room is the same 10-foot wide ledge as the area at the base of the ladder. From here, 5 tunnels lead off in various directions. A poem that Ulf Ironfist carved on the wall upstairs in Area Q–8 reveals which one to take — the second from the right. The others lead to various dangerous traps and encounters that are not without reward, but do not take the heroes any closer to their goal.

Area 3–2: A Wild Ride (EL 2)

This tunnel seems to dead-end as the party moves around a corner. The end of the tunnel actually occupies the space directly over the sluice tunnel from Area 3–1. A trap here drops characters directly into the fast-moving flow and carries them swiftly to be expelled in a long free-fall into the river gorge near Area 3–13. Falling into the river in this way inflicts 2d3 points of subdual damage and 3d6 points of regular damage. Characters are then swept downstream into Area 4–1, passing below Area 3–11 on the way.

Hidden Sluice Trap: CR 2; results in fall into fast-moving current and over waterfall (2d3 subdual plus 3d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 18); Disable Device (DC 18).

Area 3–3: Secret Door

This small round chamber appears completely empty, but it hides the secret door to the location of the romantic union between Lilith and some of her victims. The ground is covered with loose stone rubble (from carving the doors).

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 4; hp 30; Search (DC 28); Break (DC 17); Open Lock (DC 30).

Area 3–4: Stirge Cave (EL 4)

A number of leathery-skinned stirges hang near the ceiling of this chamber. The blood-drained corpse of a guild prisoner lies bound at the back of the area, the result of a painful interrogation process involving the blood-sucking beasts. He is dressed in common clothing, but an astute character (Wisdom DC 20) might notice his boots are unusually well made. In hidden compartments in the heels of his boots (Search DC 22) are the items the Ebon Union was after — the only treasure here.

Stirges (7): CR 1/2; hp 4 (x2), 5 (x3), 6 (x2); see the MM.

Tactics: The stirges attack as soon as they have reason to believe there is prey below. They are deterred only by smoke; if it is introduced, they retreat to another area.

Treasure: Leather boots with secret compartments in heels (sized to fit adult human male, worth 30gp); 3 uncut sapphires (250 gp, 225 gp, and 200 gp, or quadruple that when cut and polished); a tiny map with landmarks but no names, except a drawing of a gem labeled “Temple of the Azure Eye.” This map and the short adventure that goes with it are available as free downloads at www.necromancergames.com.

Area 3–5: Dire Rats (EL 3)

This small side-chamber is empty, but a deep hole in the back wall ends in shadows. It is full of dire rats, their non-combatant young, and a few bits of treasure.

Dire Rats (8): CR 1/3; hp 4, 5 (x2), 6 (x2), 7, 8, 9; see the MM.

Tactics: The dire rats attack as soon as someone begins exploring the entrance to their lair, most likely flying into the face of a single curious explorer. When 75% of them are killed, the remaining rats back into their lair and defend their offspring or flee into the dungeon.

Treasure: Human ear with pearl earring (120 gp), silvered dagger.

Area 3–6: Yellow Mold (EL 5)

This room smells dry and musty and is bare of anything of interest except for a small, fungus-covered chest in the corner. The chest is contaminated with yellow mold just waiting to be disturbed, but the contents are worth the risk. The chest was left as an emergency cache by a party of adventurers that did not survive to retrieve it.

Yellow Mold (1): CR 6; bursts into 10-foot radius spore cloud when disturbed; all within radius suffer 1d6 points of temporary Constitution damage followed by an additional 2d6 points of temporary Constitution damage 1 minute later; 2 Fortitude saves (each DC 15) negate the damage; both saves must be rolled regardless of results.

Small Locked Chest: Hardness 5; hp 5; Break (DC 17); Open Lock (DC 30). Contains 2 flasks of alchemist’s fire, 4 flasks of oil, hooded lantern, 5 sunrods, 5 tindertwigs, 10 torches, 50 ft. of silk rope, 200 ft. of cotton cord, a clay jug of water (stale), and 4 potions of cure light wounds.

Area 3–7: Pit Trap (EL 2)

The tunnel appears to dead-end as the party turns a corner. In actuality, the last few feet of the corridor conceal a trap in the form of a concealed pit.

40-ft. Pit Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary; results in fall into 40 ft. deep pit; 4d6 points of damage; Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 22); Disable Device (DC 18).

Area 3–8: The Love Shack

This area is at the end of the second tunnel from the right in Area 3–1: the only one of five that leads somewhere productive. The tunnel opens into a small cavern that is musky with the smell of incense. Near the back, dozens of candles surround a pile of luxurious pillows and cushions and a small alabaster table. A complex mechanism of iron bars and latches is mounted to large slabs of rock that cover the tunnel entrances.
This chamber is one of the locations of the covert trysts between Lilith and Ulf Ironfist. Ulf manufactured the secret doors for Lilith to protect their cozy little hideaway. If the heroes come directly from the Ironworks, they are looking at the back of it; if they came from Level 1 or 2, they probably detected it from outside.

Treasure: Alabaster table (90 lbs., 800 gp); jade incense burner and box of imported incense (550 gp); 10 silk pillows (7 gp each); jug of strong, high-quality dwarven mead (8 gp).

Area 3–9: Entry Chamber — Tunnels from Level 1 and 2

If the party descends to this level from Level 1 or 2, this is the chamber that it enters. The Ebon Union uses it as a storeroom and staging area, especially when they coordinate activities from more than one location. A rough map of Dun Eamon is sketched on one wall in chalk; the locations of the burglaries, the garrison, the tavern, and all the entrances to the underground are clearly marked. A well-made secret door conceals the exit to Area 3–8 and the Ironworks access point.

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 4; hp 30; Search (DC 28); Break (DC 18), Open Lock (DC 30).

Area 3–10: Grick Lair (EL 7)

At this point, the narrow tunnel splits into two that seem to run parallel. An easy Search check (DC 10) allows the party to notice several sets of assorted tracks leading up the left-hand passage. A tracking attempt (Wilderness Lore DC 20) reveals flaws in the tracks: a dwarven stride is too long, a footprint is reversed, and so forth. An unusually intelligent pair of gricks that dwell here has intentionally laid these tracks. Fewer visible tracks go down the right-hand tunnel due to a smaller quantity of dust.

The passage to the left narrows to little more than a crack that is long enough for the whole party to squeeze through. On the ledge with the gricks is the corpse of a recent victim, a thief from the Ebon Union. The gricks strike as soon as they judge the party to have entered the chamber. The smaller grick lowers the corpse of the thief, using its area of silence to envelop the last character in line. The large one attempts to grapple the character and drag it up onto the ledge. Once the victim is on the ledge and silenced, both creatures turn to the attack. Unless that character can find a way to announce his plight to his comrades, he may not last long against both creatures.

Treasure: Charm of silence (as per silence spell; limit 10 ft. radius; 1/day with unlimited duration; see the New Items Appendix), masterwork short sword, large sack of powdered silver (45 gp).

Area 3–11: Cavern of Spires (EL 7)

The smooth walled tunnel opens abruptly into a huge cavern here, roughly 100 feet across. The floor drops away over a steep cliff a few feet into the cavern, and whatever lies below is hidden by thick mist. Several dozen rough stone spires rise up from the mist, a series of stone islands in a sea of grey fog. On the opposite side of the cavern, a small ledge is visible, as well as a narrow tunnel entrance. Heavy wooden beams have been laid across the tops of the spires, forming a makeshift walkway that leads to the mouth of the other tunnel. The sound of roaring water is heard from far below.

This area has been adapted by the thieves’ guild to serve as the outer line of defense for their lair. The carefully laid board walkways is a trap rigged to collapse under the weight of intruders, spilling them into the web of the monstrous spiders imported from the forests outside the city. The spiders’ treasure is kept at the base of a large spire in the center of the chasm, along with the body of its previous owner (Spot DC 15) — a guild thief who had stopped off for a few pints after a heist one night and took a bad step while returning to the lair.

Crossing the cavern by leaping from stone to stone is possible, as many of the thieves do. This method requires a series of Jump checks (DC 15). A failed Jump check requires a Reflex save (DC 15) to avoid a fall. Characters must make one check for each jump attempt, and 7 attempts are required to cross the cavern. When the thieves must carry heavy objects across the chasm, they retrieve the boards stored in Area 3–11. The surface of the fog lies 10 feet below the tops of the spires, the spiders’ webs are 10 feet below that, and another 60 feet further down is the rushing underground river. Characters falling into the river take 2d3 points of subdual damage and 2d6 points of normal damage, with an extra 1d6 points of normal damage if they manage to fall from the tops of the spires. The river carries them through a low tunnel to Area 4–1.

Collapsing Beam Trap: CR 1; results in fall into spider webs; Reflex save (DC 18) plus Strength check (DC 15) to avoid; Search (DC 22); Disable Device (DC 22). The 4-inch square beams have been rigged to collapse. The first two beams are secure, but the third has been hollowed out; it appears the same as the others from above, but can only hold 150 pounds before snapping. A Reflex save (DC 18) allows a character to leap toward the nearest spire, with a Strength check (DC 15) required to grab the edge. Characters in the spider web can attempt to escape from the webs with an Escape Artist check (DC 18) or to break free with a Strength check (DC 24). The webs have damage reduction 5/fire and 4 hit points per 5-foot section. Grabbing a spire or lowered item gives a +5 bonus to an Escape Artist or break attempt. Treat creatures in it as entangled (–2 attack, –4 Dex, can't move, Concentration check [DC 15] to cast spells). The rest of the beams are secure.

Monstrous Spiders, Small (8): CR 1/2; hp 4 (x2), 5 (x2), 6 (x2), 7, 8; see the MM.

Monstrous Spiders, Large (2): CR 2; hp 22 (x2); see the MM.

Tactics: The monstrous spiders respond to anything heavier than 5 pounds falling into their webs, which span the entire chasm. The Small spiders are hungry and impetuous and attack immediately, but the Large spiders are more cautious and remain unseen behind a pillar unless a successful Spot check (DC 18) is rolled. When the Small spiders distract the victim, the Large ones attempt to flank him.

Treasure: Leather armor, short sword, dagger, satchel containing a pouch of silver dust worth 15 gp, a pouch of coins (8 gp, 19 sp, 12 cp), a tobacco pipe and a silver flask (12 gp) half full of cheap brandy. In the bottom of the flask are 3 jade beads (12 gp each).

Area 3-12: Storage Cave

This area is full of flea-infested grain sacks, empty casks, and other junk. The thieves store things here on the off chance they might come in handy. Several 10-foot beams kept here are used for carrying heavy items across the chasm in Area 3–11.

Also present in this area is the body of Tell, Elinda Bannon’s owl familiar. Tell was killed elsewhere in the dungeon and Esme brought his body here (see Area 3–13).

Area 3–13: Mephit Gallery (EL 5)

The claustrophobic tunnel gives way to a narrow ledge that snakes along the cliff, high above the fog-shrouded river. The ledge is 2 feet wide and can be traversed without incident, provided the heroes are not distracted by combat or other events. During combat on the ledge, treat any critical miss as a stumble; stumbling characters must make a Reflex save (DC 12) to avoid a fall as described below.

After making Listen checks (DC 15), inform the players that their characters hear the sound of flapping wings, like some flying creature swooping through the darkness. The creature is Esme, a dust mephit. Her history is intertwined with the other creatures in this encounter: a pair of fire mephits named Iktor and Vlaus, who have prepared a trap for the party. They have a small treasure stored on top of the isolated rock spire where they harass adventurers and thieves from out of reach. Esme has no desire to attack the characters, only to watch them or something else die. She likes to get to know the victims of an imminent accident or ambush, and she approaches the party if permitted.

Esme’s obsession with death has kept her from leaving the other mephits, though she despises them for their

"Have you dealt in death today?" she asks morbidly. "I can sense it on you..."

Mischievous attitudes. They manage to create enough carnage to fulfill her requirement for death, but she would just as happily watch them die as well. The party intrigues her, and she flies about pestering them about their acts of violence and asking how painful various deaths were until they reach the halfway point of the ledge. She stops suddenly and informs the party, "Oh, um, the others will try to kill you now," and flies away to watch the show.

Swinging Boulder Trap: CR 3; +6 ranged (2d6+4 [x4], rocks, crit x3); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 24). The mephits have attached 4 large rocks to chains on the cavern ceiling above the party and release them to swing across the 30-foot gap and slam into the ledge. These blend with the color of the rock and are difficult to detect (Spot DC 25). They roll to hit and deal damage normally; anyone struck with a rock must make an immediate Reflex save (DC 15). A successful save results in half damage; passing the save by 5 or more results in no damage. Anyone suffering full damage from a rock must make a Fortitude save (DC 15) or fall from the ledge, although adjacent characters may attempt to assist or catch a falling character (adjudicate the fall on the following round, and roll initiative between characters to see if they can assist in time). Characters falling from the ledge into the river take 2d3 points of subdual damage and 3d6 points of normal damage and are swept over the waterfall into Area 4–1, passing below Area 3–11 on the way.

Esme, Dust Mephit: CR 3; hp 15; see the MM.

Iktor and Vlaus, Fire Mephit (2): CR 3; hp 16 (x2); see the MM.

Tactics: Iktor and Vlaus attack from their prepared position on top of a tall spire in the middle of the river gorge. The spire is 30 feet away, and the fiery little figures can be seen dancing in excitement on the top. On the first round of combat, they release chained rocks to swing into the ledge where the heroes stand, hoping to reduce their numbers and have a good laugh. The boulders continue to swing, coming close to the ledge every other round but losing momentum at a rate of 2 feet per round (impact on round 1, 2 feet away on round 3, 4 feet away on round 5, and so on), and they could be used by heroes to cross to the mephits’ spire. On subsequent rounds, the mephits use heat metal on armored heroes, then magic missile, and finally their breath weapons. They do not engage the heroes in melee unless they appear badly weakened. If they lose more than 75% of their hit points or if any mephit dies, the rest flee.

Esme, as indicated, bears no ill will toward the party, but she does hope that they either kill something in a spectacular fashion or die excitingly themselves. She can actually be quite a morbid little cheerleader throughout the conflict. She fights back if attacked, but does not flee if there is no immediate danger to her; she would rather watch the dying mephits/heroes expire.

Treasure: Everburning torch, potion of swimming, half melted silver ingot worth 60 gp, pouch of 35 gold coins painted copper (35 gp).

Development: Esme, Iktor, and Vlaus were called using Mamuthek’s Aperture. Lilith used a chip of obsidian as the material component, hoping for a fire elemental or something equivalent. Instead, she got Iktor and Vlaus, much to her disappointment. Esme was drawn into the bargain because of the layer of dust that Lilith failed to remove from the obsidian. Furious, Lilith expelled the mephits from the lowest level of the dungeon, warning them to stay out of her way and not to attack or hinder the Ebon Union. The mephits have followed her orders out of fear, although they periodically “help” one of the thieves to his death. They know that Lilith’s lair is on Level 4, but they are not aware of the greater plot or the events in the city. Esme, if she survives, can relate much of this information to the party; she thinks it unimportant, but she has no reason to withhold it. She may also accompany the heroes if they tolerate her company, as she sees them as a good source of death and suffering.

Area 3–14: Bridge Over Foggy Waters

Nothing is unusual or dangerous about this sturdy hemp bridge, although it sways and creaks ominously with every step. On the far side, an iron ladder of individual rungs has been bolted to the wall. It descends to a narrow, gravelly beach at water level. This beach runs only one direction: along the chasm wall toward Area 3–15.

Area 3–15: Calamari, Anyone? (EL 4)

The beach narrows and disappears near the evidence of a bridge that once spanned the underground river. The waterway is wide, swift, and shallow, swirling around stone pylons that are arranged in rows of four all the way across. A large barrel of some stinking liquid stands on the beach with a bucket next to it, and a matching barrel is visible across the river.

This is the ruin of a gnome bridge. Identifying it as such may tell the heroes that they are close to the stronghold (Knowledge (engineering) or Craft (stonemasonry) DC 15). The defender of this area is a Large cave squid. It lives in the swift-moving water downstream from the bridge, hanging on to the pylons with its tentacles to resist the force of the water. The barrels contain a strong tanning solution that the squid finds unpleasant. By flinging a bucket of it into the water upstream, the heroes can compel the squid to protect its sensory organs and thus are able to sneak by. This has no effect on the squid during combat, when hunger overcomes instinct.

Hopping from one pylon to the next is easy. A character using a full-round action to do nothing but move his speed needs no checks to cross the remains of the bridge. Moving faster than that (double move) or combining a move action with another action requires an easy Jump check (DC 12) each round. Failing this check requires a Reflex save (DC 12) to avoid falling. The river is 50 feet wide at this point, so it should take most characters 2 or 3 rounds to cross.

LEVEL 3-A RIVER RUNS THROUGH IT to cross in this manner. During combat on the pylons, a critical miss should be treated as a stumble as in Area 3–13; a stumbling character must make a Reflex save (DC 12) to avoid a fall. Anyone suffering a critical hit from the squid should check as well (Reflex DC 15).

Large Cave Squid (1): CR 4; SZ L Animal (Aquatic); HD 9d8+6; hp 46; Init +3; Spd Swim 60 ft.; AC 16; +11 melee (1d2+6 [x10], arms) and +6 melee (1d8+3, bite); SA improved grab; SQ ink cloud, jet; AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +8, Will +4; Str 22, Dex 15, Con 15, Int 1, Wis 12, Cha 2.

Skills: Listen +7, Spot +7.

Tactics: The squid attacks as soon as there are characters halfway across the pylons. Two of its arms are committed to holding itself in position against the current; of its remaining 8 arms, it uses 4 for feeding and 4 for attacking. The 4 feeding arms make improved grab attacks each round; any successfully grabbed characters are dragged to the mouth on the following round and bitten automatically. Treat the 4 attacking arms as unarmed bludgeoning attacks.

Each arm can take 3 points of slashing damage before being severed, and any excess damage is not carried over to the creature’s total hit points. Piercing and bludgeoning weapons deal damage to the creature’s total hit points. The arms holding on to the pylons can be located with a Spot check (DC 18) and can be attacked normally. Each time one of these arms is severed, the squid reallocates one of the attacking or feeding arms on its initiative. If both anchoring arms are severed before the squid’s initiative, it tumbles away downstream.

On the far side of the bridge, the tunnel turns back downstream toward Area 3–29, and Area 3–16 is readily visible just ahead.

Area 3–16: Entry Alcove (EL 7 if thieves are in Area 3–17)

This small area is carved from solid rock and adorned with images of gnome culture. If the party has not yet encountered any thieves on this level, the alcove is unthreatened. If a randomly encountered guild member or members survived, then four Bolts man Area 3–17. An iron door protects the entrance to the gnome’s gatehouse.

Locked Iron Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 30).

Area 3–17: Gatehouse (EL 6 if thieves are present)

If the party has engaged thieves on this level but allowed survivors to escape, they have returned to their lair with a report and the level of security has increased. If Devlin learns (presumably from survivors) that a party of adventurers is making its way down through the tunnels, he posts 4 Bolts in this area (though they tend to post a single lookout and retire to Area 3–18). Subtract these thieves from the total in Area 3–25. Devlin keeps the heightened watch for 24 hours or until he has reason to believe the threat has passed. The thieves fire their crossbows at anyone not announcing themselves as loyal servants of the Ebon Union. If the sentries do not know the interlopers, they summon reinforcements and Devlin from within the lair.

Bolts, Rog (4): CR 2; hp 7 (x2), 8 (x2); see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Tactics: If the crossbowmen are here, then the party is expected. As soon as they become aware of the characters, the crossbowmen set up a lethal crossfire from the arrow slit, focusing on anyone trying to open the door. If the door opens, one of them tries to escape into Area 3–19 to go warn Devlin, while the others cover his retreat. If half of them are killed, the others withdraw through the series of traps to make a report and prepare for the party as a group.

Area 3–18: Guardroom

This room used to house a small unit of gnome guards to man the gatehouse, but now it is set up to accommodate a few thieves who might be assigned to watch the entrance. An upturned crate serves as a card table, and numerous empty bottles are strewn around the room. The deck of cards has 6 aces.

Area 3–19: But in Dwarf-Script, Gnome Begins With (EL3)

This rectangular room is lit by a soft, ambient glow. Stone tiles etched with letters and strange, unrecognizable icons cover most of the floor. A large slab of marble set into one wall bears an inscription, with something scrawled next to it in charcoal. In this chamber is the first of several traps and puzzles the heroes must overcome to gain access to the Ebon Union’s lair. Since the lair is in the gatehouse of an ancient deep gnome stronghold, the engineers found it easier to recondition some of the gnome traps rather than create their own.

The floor here is divided into a series of stone tiles, each with a different letter or symbol on it. The letters come from every alphabet imaginable: Dwarven, Elven, Common, Infernal, Celestial, and so on. Only certain tiles can bear the weight of a person, and a riddle on the wall indicates which ones. On a marble slab recessed into the wall are four lines of text in Gnome, using the Dwarven script. On the wall next to the marble slab, someone has written the Common translation in charcoal.

Trapped Floor: CR 2; 40-ft. deep pit (4d6); Reflex save (DC 15) avoids; Search (DC 21); Disable Device (DC 25). The high save DC represents the fact that the character must land solely on another appropriate tile. It helps to remember where one is, so the character’s Intelligence bonus may be added to the roll.

Area 3–20: Illusionary Hallway

Pincushion Trap (EL3)

This rectangular chamber is lit like the first. There is a pit in the floor whose bottom is lost in darkness. On the far side of the pit is a doorway in the wall, surrounded by age-tarnished spikes. There is no ledge at the threshold, only the hallway beyond. In this area, it is the illusions for which gnomes are notorious that present a trap to be overcome. The doorway and corridor image is an illusion; that space on the wall is actually solid stone covered in sharp spikes. The visible spikes are illusions as well, for they cover the actual doorways to the corridors, one on either side of the spike field. The most likely initial response is a running jump into the concealed spikes. The only way in is to jump through the illusionary spikes and land in the hallway.

The jump itself is not very difficult, but the consequences are dangerous. The pit is 10 feet across and 15 feet wide (the width of the area). A Jump check (DC 15) allows a character to clear the pit. If a character hits the real spikes, she suffers 1d4 hits, each dealing 1d4+1 points of damage, and must make a Strength or Climb check (DC 12 +1 per successful spike hit) to hold on to the spikes. Leaping into the illusionary spikes sends a character skidding into the hallway beyond. Falling into the pit (because of a failed Jump check or failure to hang onto the spikes) results in 4d6 points of damage. The bottom of the pit is hidden by magical darkness and silence.

Illusionary Hallway Pincushion Trap: CR 2; +10 melee; 1d4 spikes (1d4+1); Reflex save (DC 26) for half damage; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20). The modified save is due to the impracticalities of changing direction in mid-leap.

Pit Trap: CR 2; 40-ft. deep pit (4d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (detected automatically); Disable Device (DC 20).
Area 3–21: Disassembled Trap

This area is cluttered with shattered chunks of stone, bent iron rods, gears, and vicious-looking blades. There is a doorway on the far side of the rubble. The engineers of the Ebon Union were unable to devise the function and application of this trap and had to destroy it. A rogue or character with Knowledge (engineering) can spend several minutes here examining the debris to gain a +1 bonus when dealing with mechanical traps of gnome origin.

Area 3–22: Shocking Developments (EL 5)

This stretch of hallway is floored with simple grey and green marble tiles. There are 50 of them, in 10 rows of 5, set in no obvious pattern or order. Scrawled charcoal writing in Common is on the wall, but there is no corresponding Gnome script. A door is at the far end. This open expanse of hallway is trapped, and the charcoal writing on the wall again reminds the thieves (some of whom are not especially sharp) how to enter safely. The black scrawl near the door reads:

Foolish feet that walk astray
Bring bolts of lightning from the floor
Escape a frightful crisping — go
Where every other went before.

Perhaps this is some gnome riddle used to grant safe passage, but when the Ebon Union restored it to operation for their purposes, such trivialities were done away with and they periodically reset the tiles in a completely random fashion. What is important is the arrangement of the pressure-plate triggers beneath the tiles, which are still arranged in the original gnome layout: a checkerboard grid. The clue in the rhyme is "where every other went before," meaning that every other tile is trapped, regardless of color. By starting directly opposite the entrance and skipping every other tile, a character can proceed unharmed with no checks at all. The first tile opposite the door is green and all the others in that row are grey; the party may have found a scrap of paper in Area 1—24 that lists the colors. There are an equal number of grey and green tiles because they used to be laid out in the checkerboard pattern, so counting tiles may help solve the puzzle (25 of each color). Analyzing the trap can also reveal the secret, but any failed Disable Device check in this regard triggers the trap and delivers the lighting shock (as opposed to the normal 5-point margin of error) if the tile is actually trapped underneath.

Electrified Floor Trap: CR 5; every other 2-ft. x 2-ft. section of floor (4d10 electricity); Reflex save (DC 14) for half damage; Search (DC 25); Disable Device (DC 25).

Area 3–23: Gnome Barbeque (EL 4)

This corridor is longer and narrower than most, tiled rather simply compared to the last chamber. The air smells thickly of something aged and earthy, and the corridor turns a corner at the far end. The area beneath the floor is filled with natural gas, and a character making an Intelligence check (DC 15) might recognize it as smelling like swamp gas. The simple stone tiles have wide cracks in between, which allow the gas to seep up. If an open flame is carried over the tiles, the gas is ignited and flares up between the cracks in a spectacular wall of flame.

The gnomes had solved their problem with the sensitivity of the gas by applying the effects of a quench spell to the entire corridor, which is still in effect. Any character stepping through the doorway from Area 3–22 is subject to the effects, and all non-magical fires on their person (torches, lanterns, candles, and so forth) are extinguished. The spell cannot affect magic items, and magical fires are only affected if a dispel roll using caster level 10 is passed. Conveniently, this allows parties to proceed safely into the darkness without igniting the gas.

Yet the quench only extinguishes open flames, not sparks. If a character attempts to relight his torch with flint and steel or otherwise creates a source of ignition, the gas explodes, causing 6d6 points of fire damage. Only characters within half of their movement of either door may attempt a save.

Natural Gas Trap: CR 4; 6d6 points of fire damage; Reflex save (DC 15, only within half-move of a door); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 25).

Area 3–24: Antechamber

The chamber at the end of the series of trapped hallways is wider by several feet and is unlit. A large iron door is on one side. Stacked against the walls are several long poles, a few polearms, ladders, coils of rope, and some small casks and crates. This is the anteroom to the gnomes’ gate chamber (Area 3–25). The only treasure is the collection of items that the Ebon Union needs only during their forays to the surface or items they have not yet brought into their lair.

Treasure: Canvas bundle with 2 ranseurs and 2 glaives, 2 100-ft. coils of hemp rope, 20 torches, cord of firewood, miner’s pick, shovel, 2 buckets, cask of ale (10 gp).

Locked Iron Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 10; hp 60; Break (DC 28); Open Lock (DC 30).

Area 3–25: Gates to the Deep (EL 12, or higher more thieves are present)

This chamber was the focal point of the old gnome stronghold, as it held the massive stone gates to their underground community. In events that may or may not have been connected to the gnomes’ departure, the tunnel beyond the gates collapsed, sealing off access to their city and isolating the gatehouse complex. The gatehouse stood empty for untold years before being discovered by the Ebon Union. The room is easily three times the height of the corridor that approached it, and massive, ornately carved columns support its vaulted ceiling. A stone ledge runs all the way around the room at a height of 10 feet. On one wall, a pair of enormous doors stands wide open, revealing piles of rock and rubble beyond. The chamber is obviously in use as a makeshift dormitory and mess hall; pallet beds, hammocks, trestle tables, and cooking fires contrast sharply with the stately stone edifices.
This room is a significant encounter, most likely a showdown with the core of the Ebon Union. If the Ebon Union is expecting trouble (probably because a thief escaped a previous encounter and made it back), they have used the time to prepare a nice welcome for the party. If the party manages a stealthy approach to the lair (that is, without encountering any thieves or triggering any of the traps in Areas 3–19, 20, 22, and 23), then they may catch the thieves at rest and off their guard. The encounter is structured based on the high probability of the former; if the party achieves complete surprise, a few modifications may be necessary. There is a chance that the party may attempt to infiltrate one or more characters into the thieves' guild — see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for details on this process.

If the thieves are aware of the heroes' approach, they have taken up positions in hiding around the room and in adjacent chambers. The Bolts and Nets occupy the high ledge, hidden by shadows, pillars, or piles of trash and bedding. The Knives are hidden around the lower portion of the room, under tables, in beds, behind crates, and so on.

The possessions of the various combatants of this room constitute the treasure.

Thugs, War1 (5): CR 1/2; hp 8 (x3), 9 (x2); see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Knives, Rog1 (5): CR 1; hp 3 (x2), 4 (x2) 5; see the Ebon Union Appendix for complete stats.

Bolts, Rog2 (6): CR 2; hp 7 (x3), 8 (x2), 9; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Nets, Rog2 (2): CR 2; hp 7, 8; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Cutpurses, Rog2 (2): CR 2; hp 7, 8; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Shifter, Rog2 (1): CR 2; hp 7; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Burglar, Rog2 (1): CR 2; hp 8; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Note: If any Bolts were killed in Area 2–17, subtract them from those found here. Do not subtract any thieves killed elsewhere in the dungeon, as it is assumed that they were coming or going on business in the city. This group represents the number that can be found here at any given time.

Devlin, Master of the Ebon Union, male human Ftr2/Rog6: CR 8; SZ M; HD 2d10+2 plus 6d6+6; hp 40; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17; Atk +9/+4 melee (1d6+3, +1 keen rapier, crit 15–20/x2) and +6 melee (1d4+2, masterwork dagger, crit 19–20), or +9/+4 ranged (1d4+2, dart, 20 ft.); SA sneak attack (+3d6); SQ evasion, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can't be flanked); AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +8, Will +5; Str 14, Dex 17, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 12, Cha 16.

Skills: Appraise +7, Bluff +10, Climb +6, Diplomacy +8, Disable Device +7, Disguise +4, Escape Artist +9, Gather Information +8, Hide +5, Innuendo +2, Intimidate +5, Jump +7, Listen +4, Move Silently +9, Open Lock +8, Pick Pocket +7, Ride +5, Search +7, Sense Motive +6, Spot +4, Wilderness Lore +3.

Feats: Ambidexterity, Improved Initiative, Quick Draw, Two-Weapon Fighting, Weapon Finesse (rapier), Weapon Focus (rapier).

Description: Devlin inherited leadership of the Ebon Union after the organization was devastated by the inquisition of a group of paladins, lawful priests, and ambitious adventurers. The previous guildmaster and his lieutenants were killed, and many of the thieves were incarcerated for their crimes or returned to petty thievery and extortion. Of the small group that remained together and fled the city, Devlin was the most charismatic and held the highest rank. The group subsisted on highway banditry for a time before settling under Dun Eamon (a portion of the gang remains in the Eamonvale wilderness; see the Wilderness Encounters Appendix). Despite the fact that he had few men and almost no resources, Devlin’s tactical instinct and clever plans have helped turn the Ebon Union into an efficient and wealthy organization. He has impressed upon his men the value of preparation and teamwork and taught them that abandoning a heist before it turns sour is sometimes best. In return, he demands ultimate loyalty from his men and punishes turncoats and skimmers ruthlessly. The men respect and obey him and would die before betraying him or their brothers.

Devlin is a slender, dark-haired man with a smooth voice and an aura of cool confidence. He will always attempt to talk instead of fight during a transaction, but when the deal is too far gone to salvage, his rapier is as quick as his tongue and as sharp as his mind.

Possessions: +1 keen rapier, +1 studded leather armor of silent moves, potion of invisibility, masterwork short sword, masterwork thieves’ tools.

Tactics: The thieves of the Ebon Union are very likely aware of the party’s approach, either from encountering them elsewhere in the dungeon, engaging them in Area 3–16, or by listening to the various sounds resulting from the triggering of traps along the corridor. If this is the case, the Bolts and Nets take up positions in hiding (Spot DC 17) around the gallery in the chamber. The Knives hide (Spot DC 16) around the bases of the columns and amid the pallet beds and other furnishings on the floor. If the party achieves surprise, the thieves are scattered about sleeping, playing cards, drinking, or training. In either case, they respond to the party’s entrance immediately, attempting to gain a surprise round of missile fire and net dropping before entering melee and attempting to flank as many heroes as possible. The Thugs and the other specialists enter from Area 3–26 to join the fray. Devlin enters from Area 3–27, along with any unique NPCs who may have survived previous encounters, such as Kubris, Thurf, or Gulik. This development increases the difficulty of this encounter; consider these NPCs as emerging from places other than Area 3–26 as possible. The Thugs and the other specialists enter from Area 3–26 to join the fray. Devlin enters from Area 3–27, along with any unique NPCs who may have survived previous encounters, such as Kubris, Thurf, or Gulik. This development increases the difficulty of this encounter; consider these NPCs as emerging from places other than Area 3–26 as well.

Devlin is a skilled swordsman, but he prefers to escape alive if possible. He joins the fight in such a way as to minimize his apparent ability if he has a clear shot at the exit corridor (he does not want to be targeted as the leader if the battle is going poorly). If death is imminent and his escape is blocked, only a heroic death will do. The other thieves flee or surrender if two-thirds of them are killed or if the heroes kill more than double their own number in a single round. Realistically, the party will have trouble defeating the thieves if they are allowed to establish flanking positions. If the heroes use the doorway to protect their flanks and cast area effect spells to deal damage, the thieves should not present an undefeatable challenge. The only treasure in this area is the equipment of the thieves; the rest is hidden away in Area 3–28.

Treasure: The mundane items of the thieves and Devlin’s possessions (if he is killed or detained); see above.

Development: The further exploration of the gnome tunnels beyond the rubble-choked gates is a possibility, but the results of such a venture are left to the DM (see Resolution).

Area 3–26: Chapel

This room was clearly a religious fixture of some type, but it now serves as more of a kitchen. Crates and barrels are stacked near an altar, several strings of vegetables are hung in place of ruined tapestries, and a large brazier now serves as a scummy stewpot. This room was originally a shrine to a gnome god, either a recognizable deity or one long forgotten, at the DM’s discretion. It has now been modified to serve as the Ebon Union’s primary cooking and food storage area. The dry goods that are stored here are of poor quality and are aged well past freshness, but several cases of salted meats make the stews worth eating. The brazier is the only treasure in the room.

Treasure: Bronze brazier (worth 200 gp).

Area 3–27: Private Quarters

Devlin has taken for himself the quarters that were once given to the commander of the gnome garrison. A few of the items here are valuable items of treasure that serve enough of a purpose to be kept out of the hoard. The room features running water, piped in by some unknown gnome method, although the receiving basin is shattered and replaced with a wooden tub. Devlin’s sleeping arrangements consist of a massive pile of silken pillows draped with several bolts of valuable fabric stolen during the days of highway banditry. A large table dominates the room’s center and holds several maps of the city and the surrounding wilderness, a magnifying lens, scales, and a pair of oil lamps.

Treasure: 2 oil lamps, magnifying glass, 10 silk pillows (7 gp each), 2 slightly soiled bolts of woolen cloth (30 gp each), map with location of Hobark’s camp marked in red (see the Wilderness Encounters Appendix). A secret door (Search DC 28; Break DC 18) leads to Area 3–28.

Area 3–28: The Hoard (EL 6)

This room is dirty and filled with rubble except for a raised platform in the back corner. Piled upon this platform are the ill-gotten gains of dozens of heists: stacks of shining silver coins, gem-encrusted serving pieces, and gold-embroidered tapestries. Stacked around the bottom of the platform are two wooden chests, canvas wrapped bundles, a large mirror, a small casket trimmed in silver, and several other items of exquisite beauty, exemplary craftsmanship, and, presumably, great value. The treasure is dominated by silver coin (of which there is simply a lot) and unique or hard-to-market items; the simple serving pieces and jewelry have already been fenced. The chests are trapped to protect their contents from the prying fingers of greedy thieves as well as from outsiders.

Treasure: Masterwork greatsword, masterwork half-plate with winged helm, canvas bundle containing silversword short sword with amethysts in cross guard (580 gp), canvas bundle containing curtain of glass beads and freshwater pearls (1,000 gp), canvas bundle containing 4 bolts of trade-grade silk (100 gp each), canvas bundle containing 2 bolts of exquisite silk (200 gp each), full-length mirror in ivory frame (60 lbs., 750 gp), silver serving platter (20 gp), 6 lead-crystal goblets in wooden case (15 gp each, or 100 gp for entire set), 2 gold marriage goblets (50 gp each), gold-rimmed bowl (28 gp), set of 6 jeweled masquerade masks (wolf 90 gp, lion 95 gp, hawk 100 gp, bull 100 gp, unicorn 105 gp, dragon 110 gp), 6,780 sp.

Large Locked Trapped Chest: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 15; Break (DC 23); Open Lock (DC 25). Hall of Poisoned Darts Trap: CR 2; fires cloud of tiny darts from inside of lid when opened; +20 ranged (2d4 plus large scorpion venom; Fortitude save [DC 18] negates, 1d6 temporary Str/1d6 temporary Str); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 22). Contains 978 gp, leather belt (15 gp) that hides 8 gold bars (20 gp each) in concealed pockets, wooden case holding 30 small silver bars (5 gp each), iron box with 25 pp, 2 small platinum bars (50 gp each).

Small Locked Trapped Chest: 1 in. thick; Hardness 5; hp 5; Break (DC 17); Open Lock (DC 30). Poisoned Needle Trap: CR 3; triggered by failed Open Lock check; +10 melee (1 plus giant wasp poison; Fortitude save [DC 18] negates, 1d6 temporary Dex/1d6 temporary Dex); Search (DC 22); Disable Device (DC 25). Contains a variety of trade gems: 50 assorted agates, azurite, turquoise, and other gems (10 gp each, or 4d4 gp each); 10 bloodstone and quartz gems (50 gp each, or 2d4 x 10 gp each).

Cursed Silver-Trimmed Casket: CR 4; triggered by opening of casket; victim cursed as per spell; Will save (DC 19) negates; Search (DC 28); Disable Device (DC 28). Contains mumified remains of infant prince of ancient desert kingdom (not an undead creature) wearing a hammer-sword with gold death mask with garnet eyes (1500 gp); the casket is worth 900 gp.

Area 3–29: Tougher Than the Average Troll (EL 6)

This cavern is one of the largest on this level, with several smaller caves and a tunnel exiting the far side. A huge, black-skinned humanoid beast is digging in the sandy floor at the base of a crack in the wall, as if it were looking for something. Roll immediately to establish awareness. This troll was called from the Abyss after Lilith obtained the items from the Seer’s Parlor and the Root-Cutter’s Shop. She placed it at the edge of Level 3 to protect her domain and to keep thieves from wandering down into her lair. The Band of the Crimson Mantle is hiding here, injured and cornered by the troll. They take advantage of the party’s arrival to escape, taking some cheap shots at them on the way.

Abyssal Troll (1): CR 6; SZ L Giant; HD 6d8+36; hp 70 (currently 55); Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18; Atk +9 melee (1d6+6 [x2], claws) and +4 melee (1d6+3, bite); Face/Reach 5 ft. by 5 ft./10 ft.; SA rend, smite good (1/day, +6); SQ regeneration (5), darkvision (90 ft.), scent, cold and fire resistance (10), damage reduction (5/+1), SR 12; AL CE; SV Fort +11, Ref +4, Will +3; Str 23, Dex 14, Con 23, Int 6, Wis 9, Cha 6.

Skills: Listen +5, Spot +5. Feats: Alertness, Iron Will.

Band of the Crimson Mantle (3): The Band’s stats are listed in the NPC Appendix. For the purpose of this encounter, they are all at 50% of their maximum hit points. Unless the DM has chosen to do otherwise, Dresden the Mad has already killed his body may have been found on Level 2.

Tactics: The troll is easily distracted from his project and attacks as soon as he becomes aware of the party. He ignores the fleeing Band and continues to attack the heroes until killed. This is an Abyssal troll, and his fire resistance makes overcoming his regeneration difficult. He ignores the first 10 points of fire damage each round, but further fire damage and all acid damage are treated normally. Also note damage reduction (5/+1) and spell resistance (12). Luckily, the Band was able to do some fire and acid damage during its battle, giving the heroes a head start.

The Band of the Crimson Mantle has been pinned in the small cave for several hours, recovering and monitoring the troll’s activities. As soon as the troll leaves the opening of the cave (most likely to fight the party), the Band grabs its possessions and races for the tunnel exit to Level 4. On the way, it targets the party with a few minor attacks, such as a crossbow bolt from Pratchett and a bane or doom spell from Isidra, mostly adding insult to whatever injuries the troll is inflicting. Unless the party goes to great lengths to stop the Band, it successfully exits the area.

Development: The Band of the Crimson Mantle has proven to be cruel, cowardly, and evil, but Yelm still has an opportunity to redeem himself. If the party has lost members or is in need of NPC support, the DM may consider having Yelm desert the Band and join the party. If this is the case, Yelm turns from his flight and attacks the troll from behind (he is not inclined to run from a good fight and has been less than enthusiastic about Pratchett’s leadership of the Band). This premise can be used to introduce Yelm as a new character or NPC; simply hand over his sheet to a player. The extra muscle will be of use on Level 4, and this is an easy way to replace casualties or add hirelings without the party needing to revisit the surface. Consider the party’s past dealings with the Band when determining the outcome of this development. If the party is faring well, Yelm flees with the rest of the Band.
Chapter Seven: Level 4 — Mamuthek’s Menagerie

Level 4: Mamuthek’s Menagerie

Entrances: The river from Area 2–24 flows through a low tunnel to Area 4–1. A river from Level 3 flows over a falls into Area 4–1 as well. A tunnel from Area 3–29 leads to Area 4–3.

Exits: The only exit from this level leads out of the underground caverns and into the gorge below the city. The river that flows through this level joins the flow of the waterfalls that spill from around the island city and falls several hundred feet into a deep pool.

Wandering Monsters: With the exception of a few minor creatures, the denizens of this level stick to their respective areas. Check on 1d20 for wandering monsters only every two hours; loud events do not produce any special interest, but they do warn the occupants of the trespassers’ presence.

1d20   Encounter
1–2   Screaming, demonic bellowing or mad gibbering noises
3–4   Dire Rats (1d4, subtract from Area 4–2)
5–6   Dretches (1d2, subtract from Area 4–8)
7–20  No Encounter

Shielding: No areas are shielded on this level, but Lilith wears an amulet of proof against detection and location that shields her alignment and true nature.

Detections: The entire level radiates evil and chaos. The demonic auras of the various Abyssal creatures and the foul acts that have taken place here saturate the place with a palpable aura of darkness. The cursed treant in Area 4–6 radiates an aura of desperation and anguish.

Continuous Effects: These lowest caverns are mostly dry. Unless the party provides its own light source, the area is in total darkness.

Standard Features: The walls and ceilings are rough with stalactites and mineral formations. The floor is covered with sand from the river and is generally dry. Overhead clearance is 10 feet unless otherwise indicated.

This is the lowest known level of the underground network of caverns and rivers. It is smaller than the others, but populated with more powerful creatures. The terrible products of Lilith’s experimentation with Mamuthek’s Aperture are here: an Abyssal minotaur, a cursed treant, dretches, howlers, and the usual dungeon vermin. Lilith awaits the party with role-playing and combat challenges.

Area 4–1: Twin Falls

Two powerful waterfalls crash from considerable height to churn the pool below into brown foam. Bits of driftwood and debris float at the edges of the pool. A small, sandy beach on one side of the chamber features a water-carved corridor leading into the rock wall. The water flows out through a low, dark tunnel. The sandy beach leads into Lilith’s lair, passing several of her powerful minions on the way. Following the river leads past two additional beaches, one of which has an entrance to the lair. Being swept over either of these waterfalls has the same results as the one in Area 2–24.

Area 4–2: Dire Rats (EL 3)

A chorus of hissing squeaks can be heard from within a small side-cavern. Above those sounds, the crunching of bone and the popping of ligaments is audible. In a grisly display of scavenger appetite, the dire rats here are dismembering the bloated corpse of an adventurer that washed down from somewhere upriver (at the DM’s discretion, this corpse and its items could be replaced with the body and items of a party member lost in one of the rivers on a previous level). The adventurer’s body is torn, waterlogged, and distended with the gaseous byproducts of advanced decay. In its smelly pouche is the treasure of this chamber.

Dire Rats (6): CR 1/3; hp 5 each; see the MM.

Treasure: Potion of cure serious wounds, dust of tracelessness, chain shirt, battleaxe, masterwork short bow, quiver of 10 arrows, pouch with 35 gp.

Area 4–3: Entry Chamber — Tunnel From Level 3

The floor of this chamber is flat and sandy, with a great confusion of tracks pointing in every direction. A tunnel exits into darkness on one side and another gives way to a corridor on the opposite side which branches in two directions. This room is empty of anything of interest except for two clues. Only an expert can analyze the tracks on the floor (Wilderness Lore DC 28). They reveal the presence of howlers, dretches, and humanoids (the remnants of the Band of the Crimson Mantle), but not which direction they went or how long ago. Carved on the wall near the corridor entrance is another “EB” sigil from Elinda Bannon. Finding the mark requires a Search check (DC 15).

Area 4–4: Knock, Knock Ooze There? (EL 4)

This room is vaguely wedge shaped, and puddles of water cover the floor in places. Water also drips from every stalactite, making a chorus of dripping tones. The drips seem to fall especially heavily from a crack in the ceiling toward the rear. The crack in the ceiling is far too small to fit through without magic alterations (Tiny or smaller creatures only). It goes nowhere of importance, unless the DM wishes to insert a connecting passage for future development. It probably engages the interest of the heroes long enough to allow the grey ooze in the corner to attack. Its treasure is scattered on the ground where it lay.

Grey Ooze (1): CR 4; hp 36; see the MM.

Treasure: 20 glass marbles, eyes of the eagle without frames.

Area 4–5: Who Let The Dogs Out? (EL 4)

A heavy stone block rests against what appears to be an opening in the tunnel wall. Marks in the sand would indicate that the block was dragged there and wedged into the crack. A faint scratching can be heard from somewhere behind the stone. With the help of the Abyssal minotaur, Lilith keeps the howlers penned up in this small cave. The heroes may be tempted to move the boulder and explore the cave. Moving the huge stone requires a Strength check (DC 26), and multiple characters can collaborate on this effort. Using levers, digging pits, and so on can help as well; add a +2 bonus for each such innovation. While the party is so engaged, the howlers within hide themselves among their “toys” — a collection of driftwood and grisly body parts. They prepare a charge action for the round the stone falls away and complete the action unless they see their beloved mistress Lilith or the minotaur, who has thumped them badly in the past.

Howlers (2): CR 3; hp 39, 40; see the MM.

Tactics: Unless the howlers see one of the two figures mentioned above, they attack immediately and fight hungrily until killed. They are hidden (opposed Hide and Spot checks) when the stone is removed and burst forth immediately to achieve surprise, if possible.

Area 4–6: Only You Can Prevent Forest Fires (EL 9)

This cavern is lit from within by a flickering yellow light. An odd groaning can be heard, punctuated periodically by a mighty bellow and the sound of heavy logs crashing onto stone. The chamber is home to what may be the most bizarre creature called by Mamuthek’s Aperture. Lilith very much wanted a fire elemental to guard her lair (and keep them badly in the past. The party may try to amend his condition. A remove curse spell lifts the curse that keeps him burning but does not actually extinguish the flames — that must be done by some other means, such as immersion in water or a quench spell. The greater curse that renders him immune to flame burning limbs once they are alight impossible — something that happened immediately following his arrival on the Elemental Plane of Fire. He has been imprisoned there for unknown eons, always burning but never consumed. Shurr’arrin is now thoroughly insane from lifetimes of agonizing pain and now acts without reason. He looks like an enormous tree engulfed in raging flames.

Shurr’arrin, Insane Flaming Treant: CR 9; SZ H Plant; HD 7d8+35; hp 70; Init –1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 20; Atk +12 melee (2d6+9 and 1d6 fire [x2], slam); Face/Reach 10 ft. x 10 ft./15 ft.; SA (animate trees), flaming fists, trample, double damage against objects; SQ plant, cursed, fire immunity, half damage from piercing; AL CN; SV Fort +10, Ref +1, Will +6; Str 29, Dex 8, Con 21, Int 2, Wis 2, Cha 12.

Skills: (Hide –9), Intimidate +8, (Knowledge [nature] +8), Listen +9, (Sense Motive +9), Spot +9, (Wilderness Lore +9).

Feats: Iron Will, Power Attack.

Flaming Fists (Ex): Shurr’arrin’s burning fists do an additional 1d6 points of fire damage on each successful hit, with normal chances of catching things on fire as described in Chapter 3 of the DMG.

Cursed (Su): Shurr’arrin does not use special abilities or skills in parentheses while insane. He is immune to mind-affecting spells.

Fire Immunity (Ex): As part of his curse, Shurr’arrin takes no damage from magical or mundane fire.

Description: Shurr’arrin is an ancient treant that once ruled as the lord of a great forest. He raised an army to defend against a cult of fire worshippers, but he was defeated and his forest burned. As punishment for his insolence, the elemental priest that led the cult cursed him and banished him to the Elemental Plane of Fire, where he remained until Lilith’s summons drew him through the Aperture. His curse is a heinous one: he is immune to fire and the damage caused by it, but not immune to the resultant pain. A second curse makes extinguishing his burning limbs once they are alight impossible — something that happened immediately following his arrival on the Elemental Plane of Fire. He has been imprisoned there for unknown eons, always burning but never consumed. Shurr’arrin is now thoroughly insane from lifetimes of agonizing pain and now acts without reason. He looks like an enormous tree engulfed in raging flames.

Tactics: Shurr’arrin is completely insane and attacks as soon as he is aware of something upon which he can vent his anguish. As he charges, allow the party a Listen check (DC 18) to make out his garbled moaning in a mix of Treant, Ignan, and Common: “Let me die… why won’t I burn… just let me die….”

The party may try to amend his condition. A remove curse spell lifts the curse that keeps him burning but does not actually extinguish the flames — that must be done by some other means, such as immersion in water or a quench spell. The greater curse that renders him immune to flame but not to pain requires more extensive efforts to break, such as a break enchantment spell — the exact nature of this curse is up to the DM.

Extinguishing the flames does nothing to restore Shurr’arrin’s sanity, although once extinguished he may break off the attack and act randomly instead. Restoring his mind requires a restoration or similar spell. If no efforts are taken to help him, he fights ferociously until killed (by means other than fire).

Area 4–7: Stirges (EL 5)

This small cavern is reachable only by following the river (more likely by drifting down it) to the small beach on one shore. The cave is filled with stirges, one of which has a bracelet stuck on its neck — this treasure can be removed only after death.

Stirges (8): CR 1/2; hp 4, 5 (x2), 6; see the MM.
LEVEL 4– MAMUTHEK’S MENAGERIE

Tactics: The stirges attack as soon as they realize they are not alone. They fight until 5 of them are killed or until smoke is introduced. Randomize the ones that flee the area to see if one of them wears the bracelet.

Treasure: Gold bracelet with single emerald charm (1,200 gp).

Development: At the DM’s discretion, this chamber could contain an access tunnel to some point inside the Angus keep.

Area 4–8: Dretch Pit (EL 9)

Fires dot this large, circular cavern, surrounding an uneven platform made of lashed driftwood and planks that occupies the center of the room. The shadowed mouths of several smaller caverns and recesses are visible. A low murmur comes from below the wooden panels. This is the chamber that turned Elinda Bannon around to look for another way in — the home of Lilith’s dretches and their “caretaker,” an Abyssal minotaur. The side caverns house the minotaur’s lair and the remnants of the Band of the Crimson Mantle. The dretches are in the pit, where they are kept out of the way and out of trouble until Lilith looses them in the city. If the minotaur has his way (see below), the strength of the boards figures in the combat here. Treat the entire assembly as having Hardness 2, hp 5, Break DC 10. Walking on any part of the wooden covering requires a Balance check (DC 15+) to keep weight distributed evenly; landing or being otherwise forced onto the trap increases the difficulty (Balance check DC 20+). Increase both of these DCs by +1 for each 50 pounds of total weight, including equipment. Failure results in structural collapse, although a Reflex save (DC 22) may be attempted to get back on solid ground. The pit is 20 feet deep (2d6 points of damage) and full of dretches.

Collapsing Floor Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary; triggered by weight; 20 ft. deep pit; 2d6 points of damage; Reflex save (DC 22) avoids; Search (DC 10); Disable Device (DC 22).

Abyssal Minotaur: CR 5; SZ L Monstrous Humanoid; HD 6d8+12; hp 44; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14; Atk +9/+4 melee (2d8+4, huge greataxe, crit x3) and +4 melee (1d8+2, gore); Face/Reach 5 ft. by 5 ft./10 ft.; SA smite good (+6), charge (4d6+6); SQ darkvision (60 ft.), cold, fire resistance (10), damage reduction (5/+1), SR 12, scent, natural cunning; AL CE; SV Fort +6, Ref +5, Will +5; Str 19, Dex 10, Con 15, Int 7, Wis 10, Cha 8.

Skills: Intimidate +5, Jump +8, Listen +8, Search +6, Spot +8.

Feats: Great Fortitude, Power Attack.

Description: Describe the minotaur in such a way that its fiendish nature is obvious — flaming hooves, glowing eyes, and so on. If the players jump to the conclusion that this is the “demon” their characters have sought, then humor them; such assumptions may come back to haunt them!

Dretches (8): CR 2; hp 8 (x2), 9 (x2), 11 (x2), 13, 14.

Tactics: The minotaur waits to attack until the pit distracts the party’s attention, if possible. When it does attack, it initiates the combat by selecting a character standing close to the edge of the pit as a target for a bull rush attempt. If the bull rush is successful, the hero is forced onto the flimsy wooden covering as described above. Unless the hero is remarkably dexterous or lightly equipped, he most likely falls through to face the dretches. If given a choice, the minotaur bull rushes a heavily armored warrior instead of a rogue or spellcaster. As the combat progresses, it may attempt another bull rush if a character is foolish enough to get between it and the edge of the pit. It uses its 5-foot moves to facilitate this situation.

The dretches in the pit attack zealously as soon as an opponent is present, although they cannot get out of the pit alone. They attempt to use their numbers to flank individuals.
Treasure: Possessions of the Band of the Crimson Mantle; see the NPC Appendix.

Development: At whatever point the side caverns are explored, the party finds any survivors of the Band of the Crimson Mantle held prisoner there. This may include Pratchett, Isidra, and possibly Yelm, or none of them, depending on what was done with the encounter in Area 3–29. They are unconscious (regardless of arrival time) and buried up to their necks in the sand. They have only 20% of their hit points left, and Isidra has no spells. Their weapons are buried at their feet and all their other items are still on their persons. Without healing and rest, they will do the party little good, but dispatching them or leaving them to die on their own should be considered an evil act, as they currently pose no threat. Their interactions with the party over the course of the adventure and the party’s general alignment should factor into an interesting quandary. This turn of events presents a good role-playing challenge, especially if the party is divided on what to do.

If allowed to survive and recover, Pratchett resents any implied obligation to the heroes, but does not attempt to challenge them unless the odds favor him. Isidra has seen death up close and is more intriguéd by it than ever; she has no gratitude or animosity and does not challenge the party. Yelm nobly regards himself indebted to the heroes if they save him, although he is shamed by his defeat and wishes to redeem himself. This moment allows another opportunity for him to join the party as a replacement character or NPC. Generally, the Band presents no threat if they are allowed to leave — consider it a temporary truce in what might become an ongoing rivalry.

Area 4–9: Beach

This small beach is the only way to bypass Area 4–8 and its dangerous tenants. While there is no inherent danger on the beach or in the tunnel leading away from it, overshooting the landing can be quite deadly. This is the last stop on the underground river before it exits the caverns and joins the massive waterfalls thundering down from overhead. Beyond the beach, there is no dry ground, no tunnels — only rock-walled tunnel and rushing water (moving at 40 feet per round). Being washed over the falls in this manner results in 14d6 points of damage, with no save. The usual rules for drowning apply to any survivors.

Area 4–10: Alarms

In this area, Lilith has placed alarm spells to secure her inner sanctum. An audible version is placed at the exit of the tunnel from Areas 4–8 and 4–9, and a mental version is placed at the tunnel opening leading to Area 4–12.

Area 4–11: The Garbage Disposal

This small chamber is splattered with shattered bodies and reeks like a charnel house. Creatures of unrecognizable nature have been torn limb from limb, their entrails strewn about among splinters of bone and bits of fur. Not all of Lilith’s summonings have produced creatures that were willing or able to serve her dark purposes. The minotaur from Area 4–8 provides the service of eliminating them from her affairs. The room has the effects of a stinking cloud spell, causing nausea and limiting any afflicted heroes to a single move-equivalent action each round. A Fortitude save (DC 15) negates the effect.

Area 4–12: Lilith

This is the inner sanctum of Lilith, the succubus demon. The encounter needs to be modified if the party managed to avoid all creature encounters, alarms, and traps on this level, which is unlikely. The unworked stone walls of this chamber are nearly invisible beneath its opulent furnishings. A silken canopy is slung overhead between stalactites, and the mysterious light source above it is tinted pale yellow. Piles of cushions are strewn carelessly about, and a luxurious round bed is centered against the far wall. An iron cage hangs from the ceiling with a wilted female form inside.

The figure locked in the cage (Open Lock DC 25) is really Lilith using her alternate form ability. Unless the party has prior history in Dun Eamon, they have never met the real Elinda Bannon and have no reason to doubt that she should be here. She wears Elinda’s amulet of proof against detection and location, so the heroes will be unable to sense her chaotic evil nature. Some of Elinda’s other items are still in her pack, opposite the cage, and might be useful if a battle ensues. These stolen items are listed as the treasure for this area, but are not included in the treasure balance for this level (Elinda would like to see them again). The fact that the heroes came here hoping to find the missing wizard and the cinematically heroic nature of the rescue may aid in Lilith’s deception as well.

If the heroes did good detective work in the city above, however, they may suspect that some form of shape shifting seductress is at work. They may also have the knowledge needed to trap Lilith in a lie, but to do so will require role-playing cleverness. The following encounter is critical to the outcome of the adventure, so play out the scene carefully.

The party may or may not realize that the real Elinda Bannon is still in danger. Her prison is a deep hidden pit (Area 4–13) beneath the plush bedding in this chamber (Search DC 18).

Playing Lilith: Lilith feigns unconsciousness until disturbed, when she will “awake” and is overjoyed to find that her saviors have arrived. She demands to know if they have destroyed “the demon,” which the party may or may not believe has been accomplished. She also insists that the party escort her from the dungeon quickly so that she may deliver a warning to Lord Angus. Use the following text, or ad-lib your own.

“Thank [the god/goddess of magic in your campaign!]! I had given up hope of ever seeing sunlight again! Who are you? Please, tell me you have defeated that foul, otherworldly creature! Regardless, we must make haste to the surface. I fear a most sinister plot is brewing between the outsiders and those they have possessed in the city. Lord Angus and all of Dun Eamon are in grave peril: I must speak with him immediately!”
Already, Lilith has made one small slip — she has not spent enough time on the surface to know that the sun never really shines in the Grey Citadel. She makes several more as time goes on, but only attentive heroes can catch them. Even the persona she adopts is that of a waifish damsel-in-distress — an image that Elinda has intentionally projected since her capture; yet the players may have learned enough about Elinda to doubt this image. The party might also be able to trap Lilith with a few careful questions regarding people in her life, such as Stump or the Angus brothers. Their ability to do so depends on how they phrase their questions and how much Lilith may have learned in the city. Elinda Bannon has been deliberately vague during her imprisonment, hoping that such an opportunity would arise. This encounter can be as role-playing oriented as the group wishes, within the limits of the DM's creativity and flexibility.

Some parties may be satisfied at this point and head immediately for home, but most will have a few more questions, giving Lilith a few more chances to give herself away. Her responses on the issue of:

Her capture: “The hell-spawn took me near the river gorge [Level 3] as I prepared my spells. I could go no further, and I had exhausted all my resources.”

The troll in Area 3–29 subdued Elinda, but she was backtracking to try to bypass the minotaur in Area 4–8. The party may have found her “EB” sigil in Area 4–3.

Her route: “I descended through the basement of the forge building and crossed the river before approaching the falls.”

When pressed, Lilith recites the route she used most often, but the party may have found Elinda’s sigil in Area 2–14. Again, clever questioning can trap Lilith in her masquerade.

Her level of responsibility: “I am entirely at fault! It was my own tragic fixation with magical devices — I did not have the power to control the creature I summoned.”

If the heroes pursue this conversation, they may realize that Lilith does not know that Elinda was only trying to communicate, not summon.

Her trail of clues: “I am glad such a capable party as yourselves came to my aid and was able to interpret them.”

Lilith does not know what the actual clues were. Depending on how the heroes word their questions, they may be able to catch her in a lie.

The nature of “the demon”: “A savage creature from the lower planes. Terrible and horned, it is, and resistant to normal weapons and some spells.”

Lilith would like the party to believe that they killed the demon, so she describes the Abyssal minotaur from Area 4–8. This tactic may arouse suspicion if the heroes (a) followed up the theft of minotaur body parts from Caledon’s shop or (b) have established a strong case in favor of a demonic seductress.

The Ebon Union: “A gang of smugglers and brigands has a lair down here. I believe they have been corrupted by the demon and bent to his will.”

This is essentially the truth as Elinda would know it.

THE GREY CITADEL

Skills: Bluff +11, Concentration +7, Disguise +11, Escape Artist +7, Hide +7, Knowledge (arcana) +9, Listen +16, Move Silently +7, Ride +7, Search +9, Spot +16.

Feats: Dodge, Mobility.

Weakness (Su): Like many creatures of the lower planes, Lilith has an inherent weakness: she is vulnerable to the sound of her true name. As a shapechanger, she has many identities, but her own name may be used to invoke unfavorable or even deadly forces against her; in fact, it was her name that was used in the amulet that bound her in a demon prince’s prison until Mamathak’s Aperture released her. Invoking her name as a free action in addition to an attack or spellcasting attempt increases the chance of success; apply a +1 bonus to that character’s attack and damage rolls or effective caster level (for determining spell resistance and saving throws). This bonus represents that Lilith is cowed and momentarily more susceptible to damage. The bonus lasts for the duration of the attacker’s turn and therefore is not cumulative. If her name is invoked as part of an Abjuration spell (such as magic circle or dismissal) or an Enchantment spell (such as command or confusion), Lilith’s spell resistance in negated entirely in addition to the bonus. Her name counts as something she hates for the purpose of dismissal and banishment spells.

Description: Lilith is a power-hungry schemer, not terribly surprising for one of the more duplicitous demons of the Abyss. She is unique in the number of enemies she has amassed among the demon princes, however, and in the number of factions that want her dead for reasons best left to future development. As a result, she is determined never to return to the underworld, especially when life on the Material Plane is so enjoyable. To those ends, she is very deliberate about how she uses the artifact, and she is very hesitant to use her summon tanar’ri ability lest the balor demon that arrives be inclined to collect on one of her various bounties. She is cunning, deceitful, and manipulative to the utmost and should be played as a shrewd, calculating villain. When not masquerading as another female humanoid, she prefers a form that features straight black hair and green eyes, with alabaster skin and ideal human proportions.

Tactics: If the heroes confront Lilith with her deception, she attempts to excuse her errors with the intensity of her experiences. If that fails, she tries to charm the most powerful male party member, saying to him, “How can you doubt me? I am in as much danger as any of you!” If she can get one or more party members to support her, she makes an attempt to flee toward the surface and escape. Also, if the party runs across a powerful foe, she takes advantage of the distraction and flees. She tries to lead the chase through areas where she knows her minions to dwell and escape. If combat ensues or if it benefits her escape, Lilith begins with unholy blight, then turns to using Elinda’s wand of magic missiles. She is willing to use ethereal jaunt, but not teleport without error, as she has many enemies and a large bounty on the Astral Plane. She is similarly unwilling to use her summon tanar’ri ability, for the chance of summoning one who recognizes her is too great.

Lilith knows that she is effectively cornered here and imagines that many if not all of her summoned creatures have been defeated. Her intention is to convince the party to escort her to the surface, where she hopes to escape into a crowd. If they do not contest her identity, she insists that they pack up the artifact (in Area 4–14), “lest it fall into evil hands,” and depart immediately. Once released from her cage, she also retrieves a satchel with Elinda’s spellbooks (from Area 4–14) and a backpack with her other items (see below). In the bottom of the satchel are several material components meant for use with the artifact. If Lilith is given the opportunity, she combines the giant constractor snake skin with the last of the Abyssal ore to call (she hopes) an Abyssal giant constractor snake (see Area 4–14).

If the party is thoroughly convinced that Lilith is Elinda, she could follow through on her request to be escorted all the way to Arb Angus, whom she then tries to seduce and charm. If she can accomplish this feat, her conquest of the Grey Citadel will be nearly complete, and the characters will have failed in their quest, at least for now. These events and their repercussions are beyond the scope of this adventure, although the material is present to adapt to such an eventuality. Such elaborate twists are left to the DM’s discretion.

Treasure: Elinda’s crossbow; 10 (subtract 1d6) +2 bolts; 2 screaming bolts; 2 sleep bolts; 2 bolts of light (20-ft. radius); +1 keen short sword; wand of magic missile (14 charges remaining, caster level 7); dagger; backpack with 3 day’s rations, waterskin, and blanket.

Area 4–13: Prison Pit

The real Elinda Bannon still needs to be rescued. She is bound in a deep pit beneath the bedding in Area 4–12 (Search DC 18). The pit has a narrow mouth, but widens as it descends into a conical chamber that is 30 feet high at the entrance and 60 feet in diameter. A magical darkness effect is centered in the chamber, leaving a 10-foot perimeter of normal (but also dark) conditions. Elinda is badly injured and without spells, and she is guarded by another of Lilith’s summoned creatures, an Abyssal Large monstrous scorpion.

Elinda Bannon, female human Wiz6/Lor3 is unconscious, regardless of when the party finds her. She has 6 hp and no spells prepared. Her familiar was killed elsewhere in the dungeon (see Area 3–12). She has her armor, rings, and circlet, but her weapons, wand, amulet, and spellbooks are in Lilith’s possession. See the NPC Appendix for her normal profile.

Abyssal Large Monstrous Scorpion (1): CR 3; SZ L Vermin; HD 4d8+8; hp 26; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14 (-1 size, +5 natural); Atk +5 melee (1d6+3 [x2], claws) and +0 melee (1d6+1 and poison, sting); Face/Reach 5 ft. x 10 ft./5 ft.; SA improved grab, squeeze, poison (injury, Fortitude save [DC 18]); 1d6 temporary Str/1d6 temporary Str), smite good (+4); SQ vermin, darkvision 60 ft., cold/fire resistance (10), damage reduction (5/+, SR 8; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +1, Will +1; Str 17, Dex 10, Con 14, Int 3, Wis 10, Cha 2.

Skills: Climb +11, Hide +3, Spot +7.

Tactics: The scorpion lurks on the far edge of the magical darkness, out of sight of the party. It waits to attack until the pit or the prisoner distracts the heroes in some way. After that, it knows no restraint, and it applies its fiendish smite good ability with its first sting attack against anyone it can successfully grab.

Area 4–14: Summoning Chamber

A thinly wrought sphere of golden metal sits on a four-legged stand in the center of the room. Lines of soot trace the stone walls and floor of this chamber. A table against one wall is cluttered with odd bits of junk, chipped rocks, and vials of liquid. This area is the resting place of Mamuthek's Aperture, the ancient artifact that called Lilith and began the saga that is presumably about to come to an end, one way or another. For a description of the device, see the New Items Appendix.

A secret door on the far wall leads to an escape tunnel for Lilith and a final trap for the party. Among the treasure on the table is a satchel with Elinda's spellbooks and some potential material triggers — the remains of what was stolen from the civilians on the surface. Among the items are a mummified feline paw (of a tiger), a carefully rolled snakeskin (from a giant constrictor), and a bleached skull (of an ape). These are all normal animals; Lilith has already used the more exotic components to call her troll, minotaur, and so on. Also in the satchel are the leftover mineral samples — a few chunks of Abyssal ore, the Astral moonstone, and the vial of Elysian soil. These components, plus any other items the heroes may have with them, can be used to activate the artifact. Lilith is temporarily out of powdered silver, and she knows better than to call fiendish creatures without the magic circle to buy her time to charm them. The heroes might have silver of their own, or they may be willing to call an unbound creature... the possibilities are numerous, depending on how much the heroes know (or thinks they know) about the artifact.

The use of the Aperture in or after whatever conflict develops between Lilith and the party can shift the balance of power considerably. If Lilith is permitted to use the artifact, she calls an Abyssal constrictor with the last chips of ore and the snakeskin. If the heroes choose to use the device, they might end up with an Elysian tiger, or something far more bizarre, or nothing at all: the products of Mamuthek's Aperture are entirely left to the DM's discretion.

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 4; hp 30; Search (DC 25); Break (DC 18); Open Lock (DC 30);

Treasure: Mamuthek's Aperture (see the New Items Appendix), Elinda Bannon's spellbooks (see the NPC Appendix).

Area 4–15: Pit Trap

The door opens to reveal a tunnel that is visible in dim light for a few feet and then disappears into inky blackness. The secret door in Area 4–14 has another secret door just beyond it that hides the true exit tunnel. This tunnel leads to the river channel, but there is no beach or dry ground. Lilith uses this tunnel to exit her lair and then fly up to Area 4–1. The more obvious tunnel continues past the second secret door to a concealed pit trap that is hidden in magical darkness. Characters running after Lilith may be taken in by the false corridor and could fall to their deaths without a bit of restraint.

Secret Door: 2 in. thick; Hardness 4; hp 30; Search (DC 25); Break (DC 18); Open Lock (DC 20);

Concealed Pit Trap: CR 5; no attack roll necessary; 100-ft. pit (10d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 35, due to magical darkness); Disable Device (DC 20).
When the heroes emerge from the tunnels having eliminated the demonic threat and rescued the wizard, throngs of cheering crowds await them. Experience rewards should be finalized and booty sorted out (remember that some items of treasure may cause reactions if used in the city). A job well done — but not necessarily the end of the adventure...

Lord Angus pays out the agreed upon reward of 2,000 gp in full. If the party can prove that the demons were much more powerful than the dretches and howlers that terrorized the surface, he readily doubles the reward; if the party can prove that the underground caverns are free of thieves, demons, undead, and all other threats, he triples the reward. This maximum reward of 6,000 gp has been factored into the treasure balance for the dungeon levels (that kind of payroll is not handed out lightly).

If Elinda was rescued, she may be willing to reward the party with one or two custom minor magic items, but such work is not easily undertaken. First, her lab and library must be restored, and the process of gathering materials and making preparations may lead the heroes on yet another quest. Her gratitude is unconditional, but her services may depend on how thoroughly the heroes looted her tower and their willingness to return her items stolen by Lilith. Ulf Ironfist is similarly willing to craft masterwork weapons or armor for the party or collaborate with Elinda on one magical weapon or suit of armor. They are willing to absorb up to 6,000 gp worth of costs to create an item or items; this amount has been factored into the treasure balance of the dungeon levels. The party must handle any further costs.

If Mamuthok’s Aperture was retrieved, the party now has the responsibility of deciding what to do with it. If Elinda was successfully rescued, she will certainly factor into that discussion, as will Arb Angus, who feels it is his responsibility to keep it from doing harm again. A quest to destroy it could result, or a trip to deliver it to some inaccessible place or noble order for safekeeping.

After the party has dealt with the threat of Lilith and her demons, other threats may possibly be left underground. Gethrax, the Ebon Union, the box o’ darkness traps, and even the naturally occurring predators of the underground should be dealt with to ensure the city’s safety. Even after the dungeon is cleared, thieves certainly remain in the city — and quite likely a few demons as well. Continued service to Lord Angus as he begins to restore order is a definite possibility. If Lilith, Gethrax, Devlin, or the Band of the Crimson Mantle survive, they could easily become recurring antagonists, especially if the party stays in the area.

After encountering Gethrax and his box o’ darkness devices, the party most likely has the clues needed to pursue the destruction of his necromantic order, following a trail of boxes and seeking out their fortress-temple in the Stoneheart Mountains. Cael Angus and the Temple of Fortitude might sponsor such a venture.

Even after the Ebon Union is ousted from the caverns, they may yet present a threat. If Devlin is allowed to escape, he returns to lead the highwaymen in the forest, if they still exist. If Tabitha or any of the other guild agents escaped, they may continue to haunt the party as well.

The ancient gnome stronghold beneath the city still beckons. An extensive (and expensive) excavation project would require the services of engineers and laborers, but the potential wealth of the gnome ruins is tempting. Alternatively, the gnomes might still occupy their underground city and might request (or require) the party’s assistance in dealing with an external subterranean threat.

Several citizens still suffer from the damage inflicted by Lilith and might need advanced healing that only comes at the end of a specific holy quest. The citizens hope that the party might stay nearby, and they continue to treat it as heroes. Indeed, it should be difficult for a character to pay for a meal with his own coin or empty his glass without it being refilled within moments. The party should have time to rest, recover, and reap the benefits of being the heroes of the Grey Citadel.
NPC Appendix

Many of the important power figures and influential people of Dun Eamon may be found in several different locations or may be encountered frequently enough that their profiles need regular reference. Listed below are the profiles for the primary NPCs of the adventure. Their backgrounds are detailed so they can be paraphrased in part when the heroes inquire about them during their investigation. The primary villains (Gethrax, Devlin, and Lilith) are encountered in more predictable locations; their profiles are found in their encounter areas.

The Angus Clan

The three Angus brothers share the responsibilities of leadership in Dun Eamon and are regarded by most to be just and capable.

Arb Angus, Lord of Eamonvale, male human Ari6/Rgr4/Ftr4: CR 13; SZ M; HD 6d8+6 plus 4d10+4 plus 4d10+4; hp 90; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 20; Atk +17/+12/+7 melee (1d10+4 and 2d6 vs. evil, +2 keen holy bastard sword, crit 17–20), or +15/+10/+5 melee (1d10+4 and 2d6 vs. evil, +2 keen holy bastard sword, crit 17–20) and +13 melee (1d6+2, masterwork short sword, crit 18–20), or +15/+10/+5 [or +13/+13/+8/+3] ranged (1d8+2, masterwork mighty composite longbow [Str 14], crit x3, 100 ft.); SA favored enemy (animals), spells; SQ Track; AL LG; SV Fort +11, Ref +6, Will +11; Str 14, Dex 14, Con 13, Int 12, Wis 15, Cha 17.

Skills: Bluff +8, Climb +5, Diplomacy +11, Gather Information +6, Handle Animal +6, Hide +4, Intimidate +9, Intuit Direction +4, Jump +5, Knowledge (Eamonvale) +5, Knowledge (falconry) +7, Knowledge (nature) +3, Knowledge (politics) +10, Listen +3, Move Silently +3, Ride (horse) +8, Search +3, Sense Motive +7, Spot +4, Swim +4, Rope Use +5, Wilderness Lore +9.

Feats: Iron Will, Leadership (20), Mounted Combat, Point Blank Shot, Precise Shot, Rapid Shot, Skill Focus (Diplomacy), Skill Focus (Knowledge [politics]), Track, Weapon Focus (bastard sword).

Possessions: Sword of Angus (+2 keen holy bastard sword), masterwork short sword, masterwork mighty composite longbow (Str 14), quiver of 20 arrows, bracers of armor +5, ring of protection +3, gold band of lordship, amulet of the Angus crest, emerald signet ring (500 gp).

Description: Arb Angus is a tall, robust man with thick brown hair and a well-trimmed beard. Despite his social rank, he disdains ceremonial dress and usually wears simple clothing of high quality leather and wool. The only indicator of his lordship is the unadorned gold circlet on his brow and the ancestral Angus blade on his hip.

The eldest of the three Angus brothers, Arb rules Eamonvale, a remote river gorge in a temperate rain forest. He inherited title and land from his father, and the region has developed well under his reign. He is young, having just entered his 30th year, and he rules with the confidence and vigor of youth tempered by the strict discipline and wisdom of his father. His policies on trade and tax ensure a place for the local farmers and craftsmen in the economy, and his strict prohibition on foreign guild influence has drawn much controversy. While many abroad would see him overthrown, he is well loved by his citizens.

His youth was spent in close contact with his brothers, engaged with the activities of aristocratic life. He is a skilled hunter and falconer and a competent horseman, but he never adjusted well to courtly life and is always quick to dispense with etiquette if such can be done without offense. He trusts his brothers implicitly, and they are involved in every important decision he makes. It is known that he does not intend to take a wife until later in life, but that has not stopped Elinda Bannon from being drawn to him.

While in the city, he spends as little time in the Keep as possible. He often speaks with craftsmen and merchants around the Market or stops to listen to a traveling minstrel and share a pint in a tavern. He can be encountered nearly anywhere in the citadel.

Bron Angus, Captain of the Mist Watch, male human Ari2/Clr8: CR 9; SZ M; HD 4d8+8 plus 8d10+16; hp 94;
Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 23; Atk +17/+12/+7 melee (1d8+5, +2 keen longsword, crit 15–20), or [ACc drops to 20] +15/
+10/+5 (1d8+5, +2 keen longsword, crit 15–20) and +13/
+10 melee (1d4+4, 1 large shield of bashing); AL LG; SV
Fort +9, Ref +7, Will +11; Str 18, Dex 12, Con 16, Int 13, Wis 13, Cha 15.

Skills: Bluff +7, Climb +5, Diplomacy +9, Gather Information +5, Handle Animal +5, Intimidate +10, Jump +6, Knowledge (military operations) +12, Knowledge
(Eamonvale) +5, Listen +3, Ride (horse) +6, Sense Motive
+6, Spot +3, Swim +6, Wilderness Lore +4.

Feats: Ambidexterity, Improved Critical (longsword), Improved Initiative, Improved Two-Weapon Fighting, Leadership (17), Skill Focus (Knowledge [military operations]), Two-Weapon Fighting, Weapon Focus (longsword).

Possessions: +2 keen longsword, +1 large shield of bashing, +2 chainmail, chain of office, signal horn.

Description: Bron Angus is tall and slim, tightly strung with wiry muscle from training with the Watch. His brown hair is cropped short, and he wears a handlebar moustache to age his appearance. He is almost never seen out of his uniform of mail, blue tabard, and grey cape.

Three years younger than his brother Arb, Bron is the captain of the Mist Watch. As a young man, Bron’s father apprenticed him to his uncle, who was a mercenary captain. He traveled extensively until his father’s death and became wise in the ways of war and the nuances of command.
He operates with his father’s strictness, but he lacks the compassion that ensured his brother’s success. Despite his grim personality and apparent lack of emotion, Bron is passionate about his duty to the city, and this commitment has won him the extreme loyalty of his men.

Bron is being actively sought as a husband by many of the wealthy maidens of the citadel and surrounding region, especially those whose merchant fathers have financial interests at stake. He avoids their advances on the pretense that a commander’s duty is to his men and his city, but in reality, he is badly smitten with Elinda Bannon. Only his knowledge of her affection for his older brother Arb and his deep respect for him keeps Bron from acting.

Bron is fanatical about his work and spends nearly every waking hour at it. He meets regularly with the officers of the Watch in their mess, trains recruits personally in the garrison yard, and can often be seen striding purposefully along the ramparts of the citadel, inspecting his men. He also lingers at the gates, measuring those who come and go under his jurisdiction.

Cael Angus, Master of the Temple of Fortitude, male human Ari2/Cler8: CR 9; SZ M; HD 2d8+4 plus 8d8+16;
hp 80; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14; Atk +11/+6/+1/0 melee
(1d3+5 and 2d6 vs. evil [x4], +2 holy gauntlets) or +9/
+4/+4 melee (1d3+3 subdual [x4], unarmored); SA spells, turn undead; SQ damage reduction (5/+5, from vestments);
AL CG; SV Fort +10, Ref +7, Will +12; Str 18, Dex 12, Con
15; Int 12, Wis 16, Cha 14.

Skills: Concentration +12, Diplomacy +7, Gather Information +7, Heal +11, Knowledge (arcana) +4, Knowledge (Eamonvale) +5, Knowledge (religion) +6, Sense Motive
+6, Spellcraft +7.

Feats: Ambidexterity, Improved Two-Weapon Fighting, Improved Unarmed Strike, Power Attack, Two-Weapon Fighting.

divine, detect poison, guidance, read magic, resistance, virtue; 1st—bless, bless water, deathwatch, detect evil, sanctuary; 2nd—calm emotions, hold person, shield other, zone of truth; 3rd—dispel magic, prayer, remove disease, wind wall; 4th—air walk, neutralize poison.

Domain Spells (Good/Strength): 1st—protection from evil; 2nd—bull’s strength; 3rd—magic circle against evil; 4th—holy smite.

Possessions: Vestments of faith, +2 holy gauntlets, bracers of armor +3, robes, wide leather belt with removable holy symbol.

Description: Cael Angus is a short, barrel-chested youth.
His head is shorn in the tonsure of his order, and he is rarely seen in other than his coarse brown robes. His arms bulge with powerful muscles, and he wears thick leather armbands gilded with the icons of his faith.

Cael is the master of the Temple of Fortitude, the favored place of worship in the Grey Citadel. While many other religions are practiced openly, most of the citizens are devoted to the God of Strength. Cael and his priesthood minister to the needs of the locals and also venture out to the mines, lumber camps, and farms that surround the city. He has discovered a means by which the Temple can sustain itself on minimum tithes: while not at prayer or training, the burly acolytes hire themselves out as laborers and stevedores to visiting merchant caravans.

The youngest brother of the Angus clan entered the priesthood at the temple at an early age and proved to be an excellent study and devoted acolyte. Cael rose quickly in the clergy, and before his 20th year, he took over the duties of and lay to rest the aging head priest. Now 25, Cael is responsible for the spiritual well being of hundreds of citizens. His devotion to his god is the only force that exceeds his devotion to his older brothers, whom he admires greatly.

Cael leaves the citadel only on the direst business. He can usually be found at the Temple of Fortitude, where his time is divided between meditation, mentoring his acolytes, and meeting with his congregation. He also moves freely about the city, overseeing the activities of the laborers, making house calls, and considering the rants of the prophets in the marketplace.

Key Independents

These characters are some of the more powerful or notorious citizens, for one reason or another. Elinda, currently missing, is not encountered until the end of the adventure. Fitch, Brother Melph, Rasputin, and Stump all have their roles to play in the development of the mystery, but once those encounters are completed (or deleted), these NPCs are available to replace a deceased character or act as henchmen; with minor modifications to the adventure, any or all of them could serve as pre-generated characters. The Band of the Crimson Mantle is an adventuring party whose efforts will rival those of the heroes.

Elinda Bannon, female human Wiz6/Lor3: CR 9; SZ M; HD 9d4+9; hp 27; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17; Atk +5 melee (1d6+1, +1 keen short sword, crit 17–20) or +6 ranged (1d8+2, light crossbow and +2 bolts, crit 1920, 80 ft.); SA spells; SQ lore, secrets (mastery, health), summon familiar; AL LG; SV Fort +4, Ref +4, Will +8; Str 10, Dex 12, Con 12, Int 18, Wis 10, Cha 13.

Skills: Appraise +8, Concentration +11, Craft (armorsmith) +10, Craft (finessmith) +10, Craft (weaponsmith) +10, Decipher Script +7, Disable Device +7, Gather Information +6, Knowledge (arcana) +14, Knowledge (engineering) +8, Knowledge (metallurgy) +14, Move Silently +3, Scry +8, Spellcraft +11, Use Magic Device +6.

Feats: Craft Magical Arms and Armor, Craft Wand, Craft Wondrous Item, Maximize Spell, Scribe Scroll, Skill Focus (Knowledge [arcana]), Skill Focus (Knowledge [metallurgy]).

Arcane Spells Prepared (4/5/5/4/3/1): 0—detect magic, light, mage hand, prestidigitation; 1st—identify, mage armor, magic missile (x2), obscuring mist; 2nd—cat’s grace, invisibility, locate object, minor image, rope trick; 3rd—dispel magic, lightning bolt, shrink item, stinking cloud; 4th—maximized magic missile, scrying, stoneskin; 5th—teleport.

Elinda’s Spellbooks: All spells prepared, plus all 1st- and 2nd-level spells from the PHB, explosive runes, nondetection, seeping snake sigil, tongues, illusory script, fly, secret page, remove curse, arcane eye, improved invisibility, polymorph self, see in blindness, wall of force and passwall.

Possessions: 2 leather-bound spellbooks; +1 leather armor; +1 keen short sword; ring of protection +3; ring of sustenance; circle of comprehending languages and reading magic; amulet of proof from location and detection; wand of magic missile; 10 +2 bolts 2 screaming bolts; 2 sleep bolts; 2 bolts of light (20-ft. radius); light crossbow; dagger; backpack with 3 day’s rations, waterskin, and blanket.

Note: Elinda’s magic items are extensive, as is fitting for her background, and scattered throughout this adventure. The heroes are likely to encounter some of these items in the hands of the villain. While Elinda does not mind her items being used to facilitate her rescue, she expects them to be returned and offers to craft something especially for the party. These items are NOT part of the demon’s “treasure.”

Animal Companion: Tell, Owl: CR 1/4; SZ T Animal; HD 1d8; hp 4; Init +3; Spd 10 ft., fly 40 ft. (average); AC 20; Atk +5 melee (1d2–2 [x2], claws); Face/Reach 2 1/2 ft. x 2 1/2 ft. /0 ft.; SQ alertness, improved evasion, share spells, empathic link, touch, speak with master, speak with animals, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +2, Ref +5, Will +2; Str 6, Dex 17, Con 10, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 4.
Tell’s Skills: Listen +14, Move Silently +20, Spot +6.
Tell’s Feats: Weapon Finesse (claws).

Note: Tell does not survive the events of The Grey Citadel.

Description: Elinda Bannon is a tall, slender beauty with thick brown hair, usually braided to keep it from interfering with her tinkering. Her clothing is always simple and of the highest quality. When she travels, she favors sensible outfits of blouses and trousers, while at home and about town she wears the clothes of a craftsman, including a leather apron laden with tools and smudged with soot and grease.

Elinda is an artificer, a wizard who focuses her studies on the construction and use of ancient magical devices and artifacts. She travels widely in search of relics and spends a great deal of time sifting through rotting tomes for obscure clues and references to the resting places of powerful magical items. She has great skill in the creation of magical items as well, although she considers that to be merely a means by which to fund her continual research, the expansion of her library, and her acquisition of rare treasures. She often collaborates with the craftsmen of the city, especially the weaponsmiths, as the city’s forges are the best for miles around and can produce enchantment-quality blades with ease.

Elinda grew up in the Grey Citadel, for her father was the chief steward of the previous lord. She spent her childhood with the three brothers and all are very close, although their adult lives have led them down different paths. She longs to wed herself to Arb, the eldest of the brothers, but she thinks she lacks the femininity to attract him (in reality, he feels his duties to his citizens prevent him from taking a wife). Bron, the middle brother, is badly smitten with Elinda, but keeps his distance out of respect for his older brother. Her relationship with Cael is the strongest, and they play a weekly game of checkers at the temple.

When she is not traveling, Elinda can usually be found in her apartments in a tower on the curtain wall of the citadel, where she has a large library in addition to a modest living space. She visits the brothers regularly and also spends a fair bit of time at the forges, conferring with the masters on metallurgy and technique.

Rasputin, male half-elf Brd6: CR 6; SZ M; HD 6d6–6; hp 27; Init +3; Spd 30 ft.; AC 15; Atk +5 melee (1d4+1, dagger, crit 19–20) or +5 melee (1d6+1, scimitar, crit 18–20) or +7 ranged (1d6+1 [x2 at +5], dagger, crit 19–20, 10 ft.); SA bardic music 6/day (countersong, fascinate, inspire competence, inspire courage, suggestion), spells; SQ half-elf traits, bardic knowledge +8; AL CN; SV Fort +1, Ref +8, Will +5; Str 12, Dex 16, Con 9, Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 17.

Feats: Point Blank Shot, Precise Shot, Rapid Shot.

Arcane Spells Known (Caster Per Day: 3/4/3): 0—dancing lights, detect magic, ghost sound, mage hand, prestidigitation, read magic; 1st—charm person, hypnotism, mage armor, unseen servant; 2nd—cat’s grace, detect thoughts, invisibility.

Possessions: Bracers of armor +2; +1 returning dagger (in boot); 2 masterwork daggers (in bracers); 2 normal daggers; scimitar; balalaika; gaudy clothing and jewelry; props (dice, cards, juggling balls, and so forth); pouch with 54 gp, 22 sp, 18 cp, and hacksilver ingot worth 90 gp.

Vlado (Monkey): CR 1/6; SZ T Animal; HD 1d8; hp 6; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14; Atk +4 melee (1d3–4, bite); Face/Reach 2 1/2 ft. by 2 1/2 ft./0 ft.; AL N; SV Fort 8, Will 11, Ref 12, Dex 8, Con 10, Int 2, Wis 12, Cha 5.

Vlado’s Skills: Balance +10, Climb +13, Hide +13, Listen +4, Perform +1 (hurdy-gurdy), Spot +4.

Vlado’s Feats: Weapon Finesse (bite).

Vlado’s Possessions: Vest, fez, hurdy-gurdy, tin cup.

Description: Rasputin is a half-elf minstrel of dark complexion and slender build. His foreign heritage is evident in his dress and grooming; he favors loose, colorful silk clothing and has thick side-whiskers and long hair.

He is popular around the city, known for performing sleight-of-hand tricks for the local children and pulling bouquets from his sleeve for blushing ladies. His balalaika is always at hand and his repertoire ranges from tear-jerking romantic ballads to bawdy folk songs, some carry special messages, for Rasputin is an information merchant. He conceals his information in his lyrics so that only their intended listener may recognize them, and he divulges the requested information only after payment has been made to his tip jar, which is managed by his monkey Vlado. In addition to gathering and selling information, Rasputin often serves as a coordinator and go-between for illicit business deals and is willing to violate the city’s trade policies, so long as it does not involve murder, dark magic, or slavery.

His youth was spent on the road with a troupe of entertainers, and in addition to his music he possesses considerable skill as a blade thrower — a skill he prefers to keep secret until it is needed. Concealed beneath his cheerful personality is the driving force in his life: an unfulfilled promise he made to an older brother who lay dying after a bandit raid. His brother’s child Elisabeta, a rare beauty with a talent for dance, had been abducted during the fighting, surely destined for the slave markets of the arid south. Rasputin pursued and dispatched the band of highwaymen with a vengeance, but not before his niece was sold to a gang of slavers. Since then, Rasputin has drifted from city to city, investigating every brothel and pleasure den and infiltrating the highest royal houses to examine their harems.

He has stayed in the Grey Citadel for several months now, waiting out the winter, saving traveling funds, and talking with merchants and caravan laborers coming in from the trade roads. He can usually be found by day in the Caravan Camp and performs most evenings at the Market Tavern.

Brother Melph, male humanClr5: CR 5; SZ M; HD 5d10+15; hp 52; Init +1; Spd 20 ft. (15 ft. if armored); AC 12 or 20; Atk +8 melee (1d6+3 subdual, sap) or +10 melee (1d12+6, +1 keen greataxe, crit 19–20/x3); SA dwarven traits; SQ dwarven traits; AL LG; SV Fort +9, Ref +2, Will +1; Str 16, Dex 12, Con 17, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Skills: Climb +4, Jump +4, Profession (barkeep) +3, Knowledge (Dun Eamon) +3, Sense Motive +1.

Feats: Cleave, Great Fortitude, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (greataxe), Weapon Specialization (greataxe).

Possessions: +1 keen greataxe, masterwork dwarven banded mail, ring of protection +1, potion of heroism, leather sap, 85 gp.

Description: Brother Melph is a light-hearted man in his late youth. He is tall and slim, even frail looking — but this is far from the truth. His brown hair is swept back from the temples and his skin is deeply tanned from long journeys under the sun. His manner is reserved and quiet.

For many of the crofters and trappers of Eamonvale, he is the only man of the cloth to visit with any regularity, and he has been present at a great many births, deaths, weddings, harvest festivals, and barn raisings in the valley. Those who know him are always glad to see him, for he invariably brings news from afar and a new story or joke. His traveling companions are often surprised by his wry wit, just as his enemies are surprised by his agility and whirling attacks with his unassuming walking staff.

A compulsive wanderer, he rarely settles in one location for long unless his services are needed. Nobody knows where he comes from originally, and when asked about his homeland, he responds, “Origins and destinations are unimportant… it is the journey that matters.”

Melph can be encountered outside of Dun Eamon (see the Wilderness Encounters Appendix), as well as in the Caravan Camp.

Fitch the Barman, male dwarf Ftr5: CR 5; SZ M; HD 5d10+15; hp 52; Init +1; Spd 20 ft. (15 ft. if armored); AC 12 or 20; Atk +8 melee (1d6+3 subdual, sap) or +10 melee (1d12+6, +1 keen greataxe, crit 19–20/x3); SA dwarven traits; SQ dwarven traits; AL LG; SV Fort +9, Ref +2, Will +1; Str 16, Dex 12, Con 17, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Skills: Climb +4, Jump +4, Profession (barkeep) +3, Knowledge (Dun Eamon) +3, Sense Motive +1.

Feats: Cleave, Great Fortitude, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (greataxe), Weapon Specialization (greataxe).

Possessions: +1 keen greataxe, masterwork dwarven banded mail, ring of protection +1, potion of heroism, leather sap, 85 gp.

Description: Fitch is the barkeep, a grizzled, broad-shouldered dwarf who says nothing but hears everything. He usually wears a coarse woolen shirt and trousers, but his armor is kept oiled and locked away should it be needed.

His services at the bar are varied, but mostly relate to pulling pints and keeping inventory for the extensive cellars. Customers regard him as trustworthy, mostly because he is rarely heard to speak a word to anyone. The safety of the Market Tavern, its staff, and its customers is of utmost importance to him. He is especially fond of Molly and Horace, the two young folks that work at the Tavern, as they are without family and he has none of his own. He maintains a friendship with Stump, a compatriot and former business partner who frequents the bar.

Fitch is a retired adventurer. He traveled the land as a young dwarf, fighting wars, crusading against goblinkind, and delving deep into perilous dungeons. The patrons at the Market Tavern have learned, however, that those are not days he likes to revisit, and he is very hesitant to discuss adventuring with anyone. He does not even discuss them with Stump, who was the leader of their adventuring band. He is content with his current life and prefers to keep his previous one a secret.

Fitch is almost always encountered at the Market Tavern, although he can be found during the slow hours in the Market looking out for exotic spirits with which to stock the shelves.

Stump, male gnome Rog3/Wiz3: CR 6; SZ S; HD 3d6+6 plus 3d4+6; hp 32; Init +2; Spd 20 ft.; AC 17; Atk +3 melee (1d6+1, +1 keen short sword, crit 17–20) and +2 melee (1d4, prosthetic spike, crit x3), or +7 ranged (1d8, masterwork light crossbow, crit 19–20, 80 ft.), or +6 ranged (1d4, dagger, crit 19–20, 10 ft.); SA gnome traits (1/day — dancing lights, ghost sound, prestidigitation), spells, sneak attack (+2d6); SQ gnome traits, amputee, evasion, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC); AL N; SV Fort +5, Ref +8, Will +4; Str 10, Dex 15, Con 14, Int 16, Wis 10, Cha 11.

Skills: Appraise +6, Balance +6, Climb +3, Concentration +8, Decipher Script +6, Disable Device +6, Escape Artist +5, Gather Information +3, Hide +9, Jump +3, Knowledge (arcana) +5, Knowledge (history) +6, Listen +6, Move Silently +7, Open Lock +6, Search +7, Spellcraft +5, Spot +4, Swim +3, Tumble +3, Use Magic Device +3, Use Rope +5.

Amputee (Ex): Stump (which is a nickname) lost his left hand while defusing a trap and is treated as an unarmed attack. It is replaced with an 8-inch long steel spike. This spike deals damage as a punching dagger and is treated as an unarmed attack.

Stump is an aging, unpleasant gnome with short grey hair and thick eyebrows and beard. His left hand has since had it replaced with a steel spike. He bathes infrequently and usually smells like alcohol.

Stump’s gnomish cheer has gone out of him and been replaced with bitterness and resignation; he takes joy only in monitoring the success of his adopted daughter, Elinda Bannon. Most of the citizens regard him as a sad old drunk, not knowing the truth of his past. He also maintains contact with Fitch, the barman at the Market Tavern. Fitch is an old adventuring partner of his and one of the only survivors of the expedition that cost him his hand. He periodically gives advice to Lord Angus, who respects his wisdom and experience in foreign lands.

Stump has explored some of the most notorious dungeons in the land. His academic dedication and mastery of ancient tongues served him well in such endeavors, and he achieved renown to such a degree that he was able to pick and choose from lucrative financial offers from some very powerful figures. His last expedition as a dungeon guide met with great tragedy, and Stump was one of three survivors of a party of twenty. The failure of that outing compromised his reputation, but the booty allowed him to retire comfortably in the valley.

Stump can be encountered at the Market Tavern or at the Hole, but spends most of his time drinking and sulking in his run-down hovel.

The Band of the Crimson Mantle

This group of adventurers has been in Dun Eamon only a few days longer than the party. They are greedy and unscrupulous, but not all of them are necessarily evil. The heroes may clash with them above and beneath the ground as they investigate the mystery surrounding the underground caverns. Because Dun Eamon is a city of adventure on a busy trade route, some of the locals may know of the Band; the background information is provided as rumor material as well as a role-playing aid. The Band has adopted a red cloak as its symbol, although the members wear theirs in different fashions. Since joining forces, the Band has established a system of common phrases for communication, represented by the Innueno skill.

NPC APPENDIX

Pratchett: Concentration +10, Innuendo +4, Knowledge (arcana) +6, Knowledge (religion) +6, Listen +5, Sense Motive +4, Spellcraft +7, Spot +5.

Feats: Extra Turning, Spell Focus (Necromancy), Weapon Focus (heavy mace).

Posessions: +1 scale mail (see special note below), small steel shield with unholy symbol of the God of Death, heavy mace, dagger, ring of protection +1, potion of cure light wounds (x3), 2 divine scrolls (gentle repose and speak with dead; caster level 5), mumified hand of a small child, 2 days' trail rations, waterskin, 2 torches, pouch with 32 gp and 18 sp, silver necklace with 3 tiny black pearls worth 500 gp total.

Note: Isidra’s armor was a gift from her mentor. Unlike most magical armor, this suit of scale mail will only adapt to a new owner’s race/build/gender if both the armor and the new wearer are immersed in unholy water. It is currently in the form of a revealing bustier and corset, a scale skirt, bracers, and leggings.

Description: Isidra is a pale, slender woman who might have been beautiful if it was not for her dark, sunken eyes and sardonic smile. She wears black robes over her armor, and her crimson mantle is the only color on her person.

Isidra, female human Clr5 (God of Death): CR 5; SZ M; HD 5d8+5; hp 20; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18 (see below); Atk +4 melee (1d8+1, heavy mace) or +4 melee (1d4+1, dagger, crit 19–20) or +4 ranged (1d4+1, dagger, crit 19–20, 10 ft.); SA spells, rebuke undead, death touch (5d6); SQ enhanced evil spells; AL NE; SV Fort +3, Ref +2, Will +7; Str 12, Dex 11, Con 8, Int 14, Wis 16, Cha 13.

Description: Pratchett is a handsome half-elf with wavy black hair and bright eyes. He wears his sword and crimson cape in the most dashing manner he can imagine, but his bravado is sometimes transparent, allowing his greed and lust for power to show through.

Pratchett was an orphan raised by a band of thieves in a distant city. He spent his youth lifting merchant purses and holding up caravans, but he was always dissatisfied with his share of the booty. After he was caught skimming a few coins from a stolen pouch, he fled before an assassin’s blade could end his career. He decided that adventuring rather than thievery was the way to make money, and he formed his own company. His years at the bottom of the pecking order led him to crave authority; he does not tolerate any threat to his leadership. It is rumored that the Band’s last fighter lost sight of who was really in charge and fell victim to a poisoned crossbow bolt. Money matters most to Pratchett; he cares nothing for his companions or his clients. Other adventuring parties drive down profits and take away jobs; therefore, they are competition and must be harassed and handicapped by any means possible.

Pratchett knows that Dresden is completely unstable and would gladly replace him, but he needs an arcane spellcaster and does not mind paying him in shiny knick-knacks. He sees Isidra as a harmless eccentric who is good in a fight and can heal the party, and her obsession with death distracts her from the treasure and its distribution. He knows Yelm is a great fighter, and the only pay he requires is enough cash for drinks and another fight.

Isidra, female human Clr5 (God of Death): CR 5; SZ M; HD 5d8–5; hp 20; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18 (see below); Atk +4 melee (1d8+1, heavy mace) or +4 melee (1d4+1, dagger, crit 19–20) or +4 ranged (1d4+1, dagger, crit 19–20, 10 ft.); SA spells, rebuke undead, death touch (5d6); SQ enhanced evil spells; AL NE; SV Fort +3, Ref +2, Will +7; Str 12, Dex 11, Con 8, Int 14, Wis 16, Cha 13.

Skills: Concentration +10, Innuendo +4, Knowledge (arcana) +6, Knowledge (religion) +6, Listen +5, Sense Motive +4, Spellcraft +7, Spot +5.

Feats: Extra Turning, Spell Focus (Necromancy), Weapon Focus (heavy mace).

Domain Spells (Death/Evil): 1st—cause fear; 2nd—death knell; 3rd—animate dead.

Possessions: +1 scale mail (see special note below), small steel shield with unholy symbol of the God of Death, heavy mace, dagger, ring of protection +1, potion of cure light wounds (x3), 2 divine scrolls (gentle repose and speak with dead; caster level 5), mumified hand of a small child, 2 days' trail rations, waterskin, 2 torches, pouch with 32 gp and 18 sp, silver necklace with 3 tiny black pearls worth 500 gp total.

Note: Isidra’s armor was a gift from her mentor. Unlike most magical armor, this suit of scale mail will only adapt to a new owner’s race/build/gender if both the armor and the new wearer are immersed in unholy water. It is currently in the form of a revealing bustier and corset, a scale skirt, bracers, and leggings.

Description: Isidra is a pale, slender woman who might have been beautiful if it was not for her dark, sunken eyes and sardonic smile. She wears black robes over her armor, and her crimson mantle is the only color on her person.

Isidra’s upbringing was happy at first, but later led her down the dark path she now treads. Her parents, caretakers at a small cemetery, were slain when they stumbled onto a Priest of Death robbing bodies for his rituals. The evil cleric took over the position of caretaker and became Isidra’s only family. He raised her and schooled her in the dark arts of necromancy, and she grew morbid and detached through lack of contact with living beings. When the villagers mobbed up and razed the cleric’s dwelling, she escaped, returning later to the smoldering ruins. She heard her mentor’s cries for her, but could only sit and watch with fascination as death took him. She fled one crime scene after another until she found the Band; they needed a healer, and they usually managed to leave a pleasant trail of corpses wherever they went.

Isidra is starting to realize that Pratchett is just using her, but she does not care enough about money to be concerned. She ignores Yelm; his carefree approach to life is why she prefers the company of the dead. She leaves Dresden in his own little world, but is concerned that her chosen path may drive her to the same fate. Dresden spent many childhood hours alone talking to the dead. He learned that language. He is mischievous and sadistic and uses his spells to heckle and annoy people.

Only Pratchett seems able to communicate effectively with him, which Dresden tolerates because it keeps him from having to deal with other people. He finds Yelm and Isidra to be very dull because they do not seem to be a part of the world in which he currently lives.

Note: Dresden does not survive the events of The Grey Citadel.

Yelm, male human Bbn5: CR 5; SZ M; HD 5d10+10; hp 46; Init +2; Spd 40 ft.; AC 17; Atk +9 melee (2d6+4, +1 mighty cleaving greatsword, crit 19–20) or +8 melee (1d3+3 subdual, unarmed strike) or +7 ranged (1d6+3, throwing axe, 10 ft.); SA rage (2/day); SQ fast movement, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can’t be flanked); AL CN; SV Fort +5, Ref +3, Will +1; Str 17, Dex 15, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills: Climb +6, Handle Animal +1, Innuendo +1, Intimidate +3, Intuit Direction +3, Jump +6, Listen +3, Move Silently +3, Ride (horse) +3, Spot +1, Wilderness Lore +7.

Feats: Cleave, Power Attack, Track.

Possessions: +1 mighty cleaving greatsword, 4 throwing axes, chainmail, stained kilt, 2 flasks of oil, wineskin, flask of whisky, 5 days’ trail rations, 6 torches, 50 ft. hemp rope, silver neck torc worth 20 gp, silver trimmed drinking horn worth 12 gp, hacksilver armband worth 8 gp, pouch with 25 gp and 16 sp.

Description: Yelm is a tall, powerful man with a booming voice and a fierce look in his green eyes. His long red hair is braided into his thick beard, and intricate blue tattoos cover half of his face and most of his body. His red swath of cloth is worn in a primitive but functional fashion, loosely pleated around him and held with a thick leather belt.

Yelm has been many things in his life — wandering barbarian, slave, pit fighter, caravan guard, beggar, soldier, wilderness guide, prisoner, outlaw, gambler, and more. Yet he has come to realize there are only two activities he truly enjoys: drinking and fighting. Those two activities can keep him in plenty of trouble, and he needs the Band to stay out of it. He is not evil, but he is immoral and unruly. He has no tolerance for weakness or cowardice and always prefers a stand-up fight to sneaking about in the dark.

Yelm will likely follow Pratchett as long as he finds things to fight and gives him money to drink, although he does not approve of some of the leader’s methods. He looks on Isidra as a challenge and is always trying to get her to find a bit more enjoyment out of life. He leaves Dresden in his own world, but is tempted to put the little madman out of everyone’s misery.
The Mist Watch

The maintenance of law and order in and around the Grey Citadel is the responsibility of the Mist Watch. The force is made up of career soldiers, citizen militia, and wilderness outriders. There is no law of mandatory service for the citizens, but any man living within the city walls is subject to conscription in times of war.

Bron Angus is the Captain of the Watch and has been highly successful despite his young age. His experiences as a young man in a mercenary company taught him to be intolerant of sloth, insolence, and drunkenness, and his strict orders have resulted in an elite fighting force. The members of the Mist Watch are trained to a basic level with all weapons and tactics, but many of them have additional areas of expertise. All the Watchmen are rotated through various duty stations to avoid boredom and complacency.

Mist Watch Soldier, male human War1: CR 1/2; SZ M; HD 1d8+4; hp 9; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 14 or 16 (with shield); Atk +3 melee (1d8+1, longsword, crit 19–20) or +2 melee (1d8+1, longspear, crit x3) or +1 ranged (1d8, longbow, crit x3, 100 ft.); SQ formation training; AL LG; SV Fort +6, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 15, Dex +4, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Skills: Climb +2, Handle Animal +2, Jump +2, Ride (horse) +3, Swim +2.

Feats: Toughness, Weapon Focus (longsword).

Formation Training (Ex): The Mist Watch soldiers are exhaustively drilled in combat maneuvering. Their standard formation is to assume two ranks: the front rank readsieh shields and swords, while the back rank readies longspears. Together, they offer a double threat to the spaces in front of them. When charged, they strike together with their readied actions and then fight normally in two ranks as described in the PHB.

Possessions: Scale mail, large steel shield, longsword, longspear or longbow and quiver of 20 arrows.

Mist Watch Sergeant, male human War2: CR 1; SZ M; HD 2d8+5; hp 15; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 14 or 16 (with shield); Atk +4 melee (1d8+1, longsword, crit 19–20) or +3 melee (1d8+1, longspear, crit x3) or +2 ranged (1d8, longbow, crit x3, 100 ft.); SQ formation training; AL LG; SV Fort +3, Ref +0, Will +0; Str 12, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Formation Training (Ex): As for the Mist Watch soldier, above.

Possessions: Scale mail, large steel shield, longsword, longspear or longbow and quiver of 20 arrows, potion of cure minor wounds, signal horn, rank chain.

Mist Watch Constable, male human Ftr3: CR 3; SZ M; HD 3d10+6; hp 24; Init +5; Spd 20 ft.; AC 16 or 18 (with shield); Atk +7 melee (1d8+3, +1 longsword, crit 19–20) or +4 ranged (1d8, longbow, crit x3, 100 ft.); SQ formation training; AL LG; SV Fort +6, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 15, Dex 12, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 10.

Formation Training (Ex): As for the Mist Watch soldier, above.

Possessions: Chain mail, large steel shield, +1 longsword, longbow and quiver of 20 arrows, signal horn, rank chain.

Some specialists do exist within the ranks of the Watch: cavalry units known as Outriders, Lookouts manning the city walls, Woodsmen patrolling the wilderness areas of the valley, and the Mist Mages supporting the Watch with arcane magic.

Outriders patrol the wilderness surrounding the citadel, on the lookout for brigands and threatening monsters. They are always accompanied by a Warden when outside the city. See the Wilderness Encounters Appendix for their profiles.

Mist Mage, male human Wiz4 (Evo): CR 4; SZ M; HD 4d4+4; hp 17; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13; Atk +2 melee (1d4, dagger, crit 19–20) or +1 ranged (1d8, light crossbow, crit 19–20, 80 ft.); SA spells; SQ summon familiar; AL LN; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +4; Str 10, Dex 16, Con 13, Int 17, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Skills: Alchemy +6, Concentration +8, Knowledge (arcana) +7, Listen +2, Move Silently +5, Spellcraft +8, Spot +3.

Feats: Combat Casting, Improved Initiative, Scribe Scroll, Spell Mastery (cause fear, flaming sphere, protection from arrows, ray of enfeeblement).

Arcane Spells Prepared (4+1/4+1/3+1): 0—daze, detect magic, flare, ray of frost, resistance; 1st —cause fear, color spray, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, shocking grasp; 2nd—daylight, flaming sphere, protection from arrows, whispering wind.

Spellbook: includes prepared spells, plus all 0–level cantrips, alarm, endure elements, and feather fall.

Possessions: Dagger, light crossbow, 30 bolts, robes, spellbook, potion of cure light wounds.

Common patrols are as follows:

Mist Watch City Patrol: 9 soldiers (War1: CR 1/2, hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2: CR 1, hp 15), 25% chance of 1 constable (Ftr3: CR 3, hp 24), 10% chance of 1 Mist Mage (CR 4, hp 17).

Mist Watch Night Patrol: 9 soldiers (War1: CR 1/2, hp 9), 1 sergeant (War2: CR 1, hp 15), 50% chance of 1 constable (Ftr3: CR 3, hp 24), 25% chance of 1 Mist Mage (CR 4, hp 17); add torches.
The Ebon Union

The Ebon Union is a displaced guild of criminals and cutthroats. They were ousted one year previous to this adventure from their lair in the city of Reme (or any convenient urban location in your campaign world) by a coalition of adventurers and city guardsmen. Devlin, the highest ranking survivor, took the remnants of the gang and fled into the wilderness, where they survived as highwaymen for several months (the party may have even encountered their bandit gangs in the past). The approach of autumn and a taste for the luxuries of city life finally drove them to seek out a new home. The aspiring assassin Tabitha was one of several outriders sent to seek out a potential home for the guild. When she investigated the rumors of a gnome fortress below Dun Eamon, she knew the Ebon Union had found a place to make its new home. Some of the Union did not fancy a life underground — they remained in the wilderness under command of the ranger Hobark and are described in the Wilderness Encounters Appendix.

The Ebon Union has developed a unique character through its trials of the past year, and some of its members that made the transition are very specialized. A few of them (called Nets) became adept with the net during their escapades as bandits, hiding in trees and using weighted nets to drag horsemen to the ground. These experts have found their nets to be useful in the city as well, especially for taking uncooperative merchants or rogues into custody for a “discussion” with Devlin. Their crossbowmen (known as Bolts) developed remarkable accuracy while providing cover fire for raids on merchant caravan camps, and these thieves now provide cover from the rooftops while the burglars are at work. The booty of their caravan raids needed to be marketed, so a number of fences (Shifters) exist within the organization. Thanks to the heavily restricted trade sanctions in Dun Eamon, these scoundrels have also found continued demand for their skills. Thieves with more traditional skills (Burglars and Cutpurses) supply the guild with its most consistent income.

The Union’s lair is in the fortified gatehouse of a long-abandoned gnome stronghold on the Level 3 of the underground cavern complex. The thieves dwell in darkness much of the time, and they have adapted to their surroundings. Treat all members of the Ebon Union as having low-light vision; this ability is lost if they spend a day or more above ground in the daylight. The thieves have specific orders regarding the secrecy of their location and number of locations in the city that they can use as staging points for their entries and exits from the sewers.

The Ebon Union is very conscious of any investigation the party conducts, and their eyes and ears all over the city keep them informed of the heroes’ progress. As the adventure progresses, Timed Encounter 3.1 (see Chapter Two) and a possible assassination attempt at the Bathhouse (Area P; see Chapter Three) represent the Union’s efforts to protect its identity and activities. Allow the Ebon Union to react to the heroes’ actions, especially if they encounter thieves and allow them to escape — the Ebon Union is quick to exploit any information the survivors can provide about party composition and abilities. Similarly, if any thieves survive encounters with the party in the dungeon, the thieves in the lair in Area 3–25 (see Chapter Six) are prepared for the group’s arrival.

Note: The party might possibly try to infiltrate one or more of its members into the Ebon Union. This strategy is not unreasonable — after all, the Ebon Union would rather have the local rogues contributing to its coffers than working against it. The process is not easy, however. First, they must make contact with a representative, which can be done by detaining a randomly encountered member or approaching one of the guild agents (such as Rorin, Kinnan the Dark, or Edgar). They require a heist of the character’s choosing that must yield a profit of at least 200 gp, with all of the profits going to the guild. The applicant is then rewarded with a cloth token and a vague set of directions to the lair (enter the market drain and follow the flow of the water, cross and re-cross the river, and so on). If the applicant survives the trip, he must surrender his personal treasure to the guild hoard for “safe-keeping.”

Devlin is very untrusting of new recruits — the character can expect several dangerous assignments before he is fully accepted. This is a complicated plot development that is not fully accommodated by the adventure text, so you may choose not to allow it to occur. Infiltration is unlikely after the group begins an investigation into the robberies or tangles with any of the thieves.

The profiles of Devlin and his lieutenants are detailed in the locations or events in which they are encountered:

Edgar (informant, Com1), at the Public Stables (Area B).
Molly (informant, Com1), at the Market Tavern (Area D).
Rorin (shifter, Rog2), at the Hole (Area O).
Tabitha (assassin, Rog5/Asn3), at the Bathhouse (Area P).
Kubris and Thuruf (agents, both Ftr2/Rog2), in Timed Encounter 3.1 (see Chapter Two).

Guilk (agent, Wis5), in Timed Encounter 3.3 (see Chapter Two).

Devlin (Guildmaster, Ftr2/Rog8), in dungeon Area 3–25.

The bulk of the Ebon Union membership is as follows:

Mamuthek’s Aperture

A power-hungry summoner named Mamuthek created this ancient device (see Adventure Background in the Introduction). It is formed of thin gold bands that pivot on tiny rivets and can be collapsed into a small wooden box or expanded to create a globe of interwoven strips. When unfolded, it sits on a four-legged stand and looks deceivingly flimsy. A small golden plate hangs from the top of the globe from four legged stand and looks deceivingly flimsy. A small wooden box or expanded to create a globe of four fine chains. When activated (by giving it a gentle spin), the globe accelerates to blinding speed, opening an aperture to another plane of existence and calling a creature (or creatures) as per the planar binding spell. The device can call up to 16 HD worth of creatures or a single creature of no more than 16 HD.

The plate is used for determining both the source plane and target creature to be called. A mineral placed on the tray determines the plane on which the gate opens; this includes minerals from alternate Material Planes and Inner or Outer planes. A piece of organic matter placed on the tray determines the nature of the creature called; there is no limit on how long the organic material has been lifeless or how large it must be. If both organic and mineral materials are provided, the artifact will attempt to locate a creature of that type on that plane. For example, a chunk of ore from the Abyss and the tip of a minotaur’s horn will produce an Abyssal minotaur, if one exists. If no material is provided when the device is activated, it attempts to locate the last being it contacted and retrieve it again, regardless of how much time has passed since the previous activation.

Mamuthek’s Aperture does not force any action or obligation on the creature beyond a compulsion to step through. Called creatures with 6 or fewer HD cannot resist; creature with more than 6 HD can resist the compulsion with a Will save (DC 18). Around the equator of the golden globe is a shallow tray that can be used to establish a ward against the creature. If filled with powdered silver (25 gp worth per use), a circle of protection is created to ward against the alignment of the called creature. If this is used, treat it as a magic circle as described in the lesser planar binding spell. If the creature successfully passes a SR roll, makes a successful Charisma check, or uses dimensional travel, or if the operator does not supply powdered silver before activating the device, the called creature is not contained and is free to act as it wishes.

If the creature is contained, the service agreement may be negotiated as normal. If it has the opportunity or if no task is assigned, the creature may return by activating the artifact while inside the globe, but this is only possible before the device is used to call another creature. Also, creatures called using Mamuthek’s Aperture are never forced to return, even after completing their service; there is no maximum duration, and a creature can stay and act independently if it so desires.

Several liabilities exist in this faulted artifact. The lack of obligation on the part of the creature puts the user at risk. Also, the inability to send a called creature back has resulted in the introduction of some very powerful beings to the Material Plane over the years.

Note: Called creatures do not disappear when slain; their bodies figure into the events of The Grey Citadel.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, magic circle, planar binding; Market Price: 163,350 gp; Weight: 20 lbs.; Carrying Size: 6 in. x 8 in. x 12 in. box.

Belt of Reduction

Elinda Bannon crafted this magical belt to facilitate her comings and goings through her ring gates to her secret laboratory. The belt is elegantly crafted of brown leather and gold chain and reduces the wearer as per the reduce spell description by 10% to 50% of their original height. The degree of reduction is established based on the link of chain that is fastened, and the effects are reversed when the belt is removed.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, reduce; Market Price: 10,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

Charm of Silence

This small charm is worn on a non-magical chain around the neck. It consists of an onyx stone within a tiny silver globe that can be opened to expose the charm. When the onyx is exposed, it projects an area effect identical to the charm. When the onyx is exposed, it projects an area effect identical to the silence spell, except that the radius is limited to 10 feet. The area of silence prevails until the globe is closed and the onyx is concealed or the charm is removed (Note: the death of the wearer does not end the effect). The charm of silence can be activated only once per day; once it is deactivated, it cannot be used again for 24 hours, regardless of how much time has passed since the original activation.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, silence; Market Price: 2,400 gp.

Box o’ Darkness

The box o’ darkness trap is used by Gethrax to protect his lair in dungeon Level 1. (Note: The box o’ darkness traps featured in this adventure are much more powerful [15th level]; the one described here is the 5th level “standard” version.) While it is a magical item (created by Gethrax’s unholy order), it is also considered a trap and its effects are fully described in Area 1–9 (see Chapter Four). The heroes should continue to encounter these items if they pursue the cult that manufactures them.

The traps are armed when wound up and from then on are triggered by the approach of any good-aligned humanoid within 20 feet. When triggered, they begin to play a pleasant tune as would a child’s music box, and the sound of laughing children can be heard. After 5 rounds, the music slows and thick black fog seeps out of the box, expanding to cover a 20-foot radius. This area receives the effects of a desecrate spell, followed by animate dead, both cast at 5th level; 5 HD of undead are raised from that area (if available) and receive +1 hit point and a +1 bonus to attack, damage, and saving throw rolls.

Checks to turn undead in this area suffer a –3 penalty for the duration of the desecrate spell (10 hours). On the bottom of the box is an engraved sigil that may be able to lead the party to the powerful creator of the devices in a later quest.

Box o’ Darkness Trap: CR 4; triggered by good-aligned creature within 20-ft. radius; casts desecrate and animate dead (5th level, 20 ft. radius); one use only; Search (DC 28, to find and identify nature); Disable Device (DC 28, or removal); rogue is subject to alignment triggering conditions.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, animate dead, desecrate; Market Price: 11,250 gp.
Wilderness Encounters
Appendix

This Appendix details the wilderness areas around the city of Dun Eamon. It is presented separately because it is not crucial to the main adventure. DMs are encouraged to set the Grey Citadel in their own world and to use wilderness encounters appropriate to their own campaign. The following information is provided either as a more fleshed out campaign setting or as source material for you to cut and paste and use as you will in your own setting to expand upon the main adventure contained in this book.

The Grey Citadel is located in a remote area, many miles from anywhere of note. This most likely means—that the heroes will spend a few days (and nights) en route to the city on whatever business has drawn them there. These encounters should help impart the flavor of the various creatures, conditions, and organizations that make the frontier such a dangerous place to adventure.

A few of these encounters have ties to the plot as detailed in the city, but none of them are critical to the success of the adventure, so feel free to run as few or as many of these as desired or to save them for future adventures in Eamonvale. They have been geared toward the party levels indicated for the adventure, with a few exceptions, but their treasure generally reflects the poor economy of the frontier wilderness. Some of them (notably the lizardfolk and highwaymen lairs) may need additional development and/or mapping.

The wilderness surrounding Dun Eamon is mostly forested mountain slopes, although some areas feature steep rocky cliffs, trackless moors, or boggy hollows. For extended wilderness adventuring in Eamonvale, supplement the following information with encounters from Table 4–38 in the DMG. Use the Forest and Mountains portions, as well as the Civilized Areas section while on the trade road. Three encounter tables are provided below: one for trade road traffic, one for wilderness encounters, and for use at night in either location.

In addition to the road and wilderness encounters, two other regions of note are found in Eamonvale. One is the Trackless Mire, a vast blanket bog that is utterly inhospitable. It is covered with hidden sinkholes, quickmud, limestone fissures, caverns, and easily confused landmarks, making it a lethal place for adventuring. The wizard Elinda Bannon keeps a secret workshop here (see Area L–9 in Chapter Two). There are no encounters of importance in this desolate area.

The other type of encounter region is the village, of which there are several scattered every 10 or 12 miles along the road. These small communities are almost exclusively made up of farmers, trappers, and shepherds. A village of 100 citizens or more has a magistrate and a small militia; the most influential citizens usually administrate the smaller ones. Encounters in these small communities might also include caravans, mounted patrols, and woodsmen.

The Surrounding Wilderness

The River Eamon flows down out of the Stoneheart Mountains, first through snow-fed mountain streams, then crashing down through rocky gorges and finally calming and widening as it flows across the lowland plains toward the sea. The region surrounding the river valley (known as Eamonvale) is governed from the city of Dun Eamon, as described below. The authority of the Lord of Eamonvale extends from the river’s headwaters in the rugged mountains to the edge of the grasslands that stretch endlessly away from the foothills of the Stonehearts. Encounters in the region immediately surrounding the city are described in this chapter.

The trade road runs from the more civilized lowlands over the forbidding peaks of the Stoneheart Mountains into exotic distant lands. Merchant traffic is consistent on the road for as long as the mountain passes are open, but it peaks during the summer and fall seasons, when rivers are down and the first snow has not yet fallen. Even after the merchant trade across the mountains has fallen off for the season, local hunters, trappers, farmers, craftsmen, and adventurers still travel to the Grey Citadel with regularity, so the trade road is never without encounters.

Some of the regions that frame the trade road are desolate and uninhabited, but most of the Eamonvale region is alive with animal life and dotted with small settlements. Wandering off the road is not advised by anyone who knows the area — bandits, highwaymen, and humanoid tribes are always nearby. Outrider patrols from Dun Eamon travel the tradeways and police the villages and hamlets, but even they do not wander far from the road.

Wilderness Weather

Weather in Eamonvale is commonly chilly, damp, and grey. Assume that at any given time there is some combination of light fog and mist in the air, which has the same effect as the weather described in the city. Treat any encounter as taking place in one-quarter concealment (10% miss chance); any existing concealment factor is increased to the next category (i.e., moderate darkness becomes one-half concealment, and so forth). Heavier fog and rain are included on the encounter tables and described below.

Heavy Fog: Treat this encounter as described in the “Weather Hazards” section of the DMG. Visibility is obscured beyond 5 feet; creatures within 5 feet have one-half concealment (20% miss chance). Heavy fog lasts for 1d4 hours.

and ranged attack rolls. These rainstorms last for 2d4 hours.

Downpour: A strong but short-lived cloudburst combines the effects of rain and fog as described above. These storms only last for 1d4 hours.

Exposure is a danger in the wilderness as well. Apply subdual damage as described in the “Cold Dangers” section of the DMG to any character that becomes soaked as a result of rain or is dressed for very warm weather (toga, linen robes, loincloth, and such). Fortitude saves (DC 15 +1 per previous check) should be made every 4 hours to avoid 1d6 points of subdual damage. Wilderness Lore skill checks (DC 15) or proper clothing (winter clothing, rain cloaks, and the like) can help reduce the danger (+2 bonus to Fortitude save), as can stopping to camp and build a fire.

Encounters on the Trade Road

The trade road is a wide boulevard of crushed gravel spotted with periodic potholes and washouts. It is 20 feet wide in most places, with a 5-foot wide grassy verge on either side. Beyond the verge, the landscape varies from rocky gorge to thick forest to steep precipice, and often the terrain beyond the road is invisible in the drifting mist. For encounters on the road, roll 1d20 every hour.

Logan the Furrier

Logan is a typical trapper who lays his trap lines along the wooded mountain creeks around the city. When encountered, he appears with an enormous bundle of furs slung across his back, a canvas bag at his side, and a spear in his hand. He uses the trade road for travel to and from the city’s market, where he sells his tanned skins in Raiment Row. He has a small shack up in the hills where he does his own tanning and curing. He visits the Grey Citadel once or twice each week and can give the party a word of mouth process his rumors usually come by.

If Logan is encountered at night, the party comes upon his small roadside camp. Day or night, he is always ready to share a few words of gossip, directions, or idle conversation. He is especially eager to trade a pipe of his cheap, coarse tobacco for a pinch of some exotic imported variety, and he touts the quality of the local product in hopes of an exchange.

Logan the Furrier (male human Com2; hp 3; Craft [curing] +4, Knowledge [Eamonvale] +2, Profession [merchant] +2; spear, 10 gp worth of well-cured furs, pouch with 8 gp) is a hunter and trapper of Eamonvale.

Fallen Messenger (EL 4)

At the beginning of the encounter, a large furry creature can be seen on the slope below the trade road tearing at something clothed in fabric. The creature in this encounter is a brown bear, a powerful omnivore common in these mountains. This one is scavenging from the corpse of a murdered messenger, although the party initially has no way of knowing this. The bear fights if threatened, but other options include distracting the bear with another food source or luring it away.

The body, which is already cold, is that of a messenger from a large temple of a good-aligned deity in a lowland city. The message was intended for Cael Angus, Master of the Temple of Fortitude in Dun Eamon. Gethrax and a few bandits from the highwayman gang murdered the messenger to keep his message from reaching the city. An examination of the body (Wisdom DC 12 or Heal DC 10) reveals that not all of the acolyte’s injuries are from the bear’s meal — he has several sword wounds as well. The message is contained in the side bar.

Father Grom Billig

An odd icon follows the message (the heroes may encounter this sigil in dungeon Areas 1–9 and 2–17). It is the mark of a powerful cadre of necromancers whose temple is hidden deep in the mountains, although only a bard of great experience or a learned sage would recognize it.

Brown Bear (1): CR 4; hp 51; see the MM.

Treasure: On the messenger’s body are a potion of cure light wounds and a ruby ring (250 gp).
Brother Melph

The party encounters this young man on the trade road, mostly likely as he strides purposefully toward Dun Eamon with a light pack and sturdy staff. Brother Melph is an itinerant wanderer and a priest of the God of Roads. He is returning to the city from his usual journey through the valley, stopping in at taverns and roadside inns to offer healing, counseling, and news. For many of the more remote villages, he is the only man of the cloth that visits with any regularity. The party may meet him eventually (or again) in the Caravan Camp at Dun Eamon. He is available as a replacement or surrogate party member. He can usually be heard whistling before he can be seen. He was in Dun Eamon fairly recently and so might be able to share a slightly out-of-date rumor from the City Rumors Table (see Chapter Two). Brother Melph can be encountered anytime of day, but only along the road. If encountered at night, he is not camped, but he may come striding along in the darkness on the road he knows so well.

Brother Melph, male human Clr5 (CR 5; hp 30) is a traveling priest of the God of Roads. See the NPC Appendix for Melph’s full profile.

Merchant Caravan (EL varies)

Up ahead, a number of wagons have convened at a broad turnout in the road. Horsemen are present, clad in fine clothing in the colors of the wagons. These horsemen are young aristocrats and courtiers, the arrogant sons of noble merchant houses learning the ways of caravans. The caravan master is an elderly man who spent his life in service to the house; he is skilled and competent, but allows himself to be bullied by the young nobles. In addition to the cargo of textiles and spices, they carry a few passengers—wealthy women and their servant girls on their way to join their husbands at a distant trading emporium. The encounter with the merchant caravan can be handled in several different ways (or in each of these ways at different times, or with different caravans).

- The young aristocrats insist that the party wait in the road until their caravan has gotten underway and moved on. Any objection is seen as a challenge to their authority and any insult is read as an affront to the dignity of the merchant house and a personal assault. They may issue a challenge to a fencing match, a test of skill, or some other duel, while the caravan master and guards roll their eyes and look the other way.

- The party comes upon the caravan just after highwaymen have attacked it. Several people are injured; two wranglers are dead. The master and the passengers are eager to pay for additional escorts, but without their purses they can only pay in promises. The young noblemen are adamant about needing no assistance and may even go so far as to accuse the party of being in league with the bandits.

- The party comes upon the caravan while highwaymen are attacking it. If the party makes the young nobles look bad, the accusations of being allied with the bandits may still come out, as does the request for an escort.

- The heroes find the caravan as they make camp for the night and are invited to join it for a meal and a drink. In the morning, the arrogant nobles accuse the characters of stealing goods from the wagons, which one of them has actually left for his allies in the highwayman gang. The heroes must defuse the situation and possibly reveal the traitor.

Young Nobles (4) (male human Ari3; CR 2; hp 7 each; AC 15; +4 melee [1d6, rapier, crit 18–20]; Bluff +4, Diplomacy +6, Gather Information +3, Intimidate +3, Ride [horse] +4, Sense Motive +4; Dodge, Weapon Finess [rapier], Weapon Focus [rapier]; rapier, chain shirt, foppish hat, signet ring [20gp], pouch with 25 gp and 20 sp, light warhorse) are cocky young men with imperious attitudes.

Caravan Laborers (6) (male human Com1; hp 3 each; Handle Animal +6; Endurance, Skill Focus [Handle Animal]; dagger, cloak, pouch with 2d6 sp) are hired wranglers and do not fight unless they are threatened directly.

Caravan Guards (6) (male human War1; CR 1/2; hp 5 each; AC 13; +1 melee or ranged; Handle Animal +2, Intimidate +2; Alertness, Endurance; light crossbow, longsword, dagger, studded leather armor, cloak, pouch with 3d6 sp) are hired thugs and fight to protect their caravan or their masters.

Caravan Master (male human Exp5; hp 15; Appraise +7, Bluff +3, Diplomacy +5, Forgery +2, Gather Information +5, Handle Animal +5, Knowledge [economics] +5, Profession [merchant] +8, Ride [horse] +6, Sense Motive +4; Skill Focus [Appraise], Skill Focus [Diplomacy], Skill Focus [Profession (merchant)]; dagger, written trade agreements representing terms with several merchant houses, strongbox with 200 gp) is an aging man with little tolerance for trouble, from his young lords or from travelers.

Noblewomen (3) (female human Ari1; hp 2 each; Diplomacy +4, Innuendo +4, Perform +4 [dance, sing, musical instrument, poetry], Sense Motive +4; jewelry worth 80 gp, wardrobe worth 80 gp) are sheltered and pampered, and may find adventurers to be uncouth and boorish or may be intrigued and attracted to the wild life.

Treasure: In addition to the NPCs’ items, the caravan holds a cargo of textiles, spires, and other trade goods worth hundreds of gold pieces on the open market, but is fairly worthless to adventurers without good mercantile contacts, trade agreements, and bartering ability.

Kamvase, Wandering Minstrel (EL 3)

From a distance, the party hears the idle strumming of a lute and a lilting, melodic voice. Upon seeing the party, a chubby halfling seated on a boulder shifts his ballad to one that features the heroes as the subject:

“…when mighty adventurers come around, the beastsies tremble ‘pon the ground, and soft swoons many a winsome lass, and men are quick to raise their glass… Well met, travelers!”

This is Kamvase, a halfling bard with a larcenous streak. Many welcome his company on the road, only to find their purses lightened and the minstrel nowhere in sight when they turn around. He is eager to share the road with a powerful party, mostly for his protection, but also to relieve them of a few choice items.

Kamvase readily shares his plentiful music and his limited wine and cheese if it looks like the heroes will accept his company. If they do, he waits until they are camped to make his move. When watches are distributed, he accepts one on his own, if the party is agreeable. If a character shares a watch with him, he uses his lute and soft singing to lull the hero to sleep (using a sleep spell). If confronted with accusations, he simply feigns innocence, calling his spell a lullaby. If given a moment with the entire party asleep, he quickly pinches a few small items and makes off into the woods (he avoids large or obvious things such as swords, preferring something that will not be missed immediately). The party’s reactions may be diverse, depending on what was stolen from whom. The item may be lost forever, the DM may choose to allow a manhunt, or Kamvase could surface again in Dun Eamon. When in the city, Kamvase usually makes contact with Kinnan the Dark at the Caravan Camp to liquidate his ill-gotten gains (see Area C, in Chapter Three).

Kamvase, male halfling Brd3: CR 3; SZ M; HD 3d6+3; hp 14; Init +2; Spd 20 ft.; AC 16; Atk +3 melee (1d6, short sword, crit 19–20) or +6 ranged (1d4, sling) or +4 ranged (1d4 [x2], sling); SA halfling traits, spells, bardic music (3/day); SQ halfling traits, bardic knowledge; AL CN; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +4; Str 10, Dex 14, Con 13, Int 12, Wis 11, Cha 15.

Skills: Appraise +4, Bluff +7, Diplomacy +6, Hide +6, Listen +1, Move Silently +7, Perform (lute, song, storytelling) +5, Pick Pocket +4, Search +4, Sense Motive +4, Spot +1.
Feats: Point Blank Shot, Rapid Shot.

Arcane Spells Known (Cast Per Day: 3/2): 0—daze, detect magic, ghost sound, mage hand, prestidigitation, read magic; 1st—expedient retreat, mage armor, sleep.

Possessions: Masterwork lute, short sword, sling with 30 bullets, leather armor, ring of protection +1, gold ring (45 gp), pouch with 35 gp and 22 sp.

Lizardfolk Hunters (EL6)

Through the mists that drift across the road ahead of the heroes, a ghostly shape appears momentarily and then disappears just as quickly. A low, hissing cry rises and falls somewhere amidst the fog-shrouded trees. If characters succeed at a Spot check (DC 20), they notice that the creature walked upright like a human, but was much taller and balanced itself with a thick, serpentine tail.

The figure crossing the road was a lone lizardfolk hunter, but his hunting party is just ahead of him in the forest. If the heroes engage the hunters, use the profiles in the Lizardfolk Valley description and be sure to include the limited visibility rules from the Conditions in the City section of Chapter One. The hunting party does not respond immediately to an attack on the straggler, preferring to sacrifice him to enhance their own attack on the characters. If they are successfully shadowed or tracked, they lead the characters back to their lair, described in the Lizardfolk Valley section, below. If the party is accompanied by the lizardfolk youth described in Area U (see Chapter Two), the hunters are more receptive to negotiations and may escort the party to their village, but they do not lower their guard. The lizardfolk are most active upriver of the city, where their lair is located; downstream of the city, this encounter should be replaced with Hobark’s Highwaysmen.

Lizardfolk Hunters (6): CR 1; hp 13 each; see the Lizardfolk Valley encounter, below, for complete stats.

Highwayman Gang (EL10)

A band of highwaymen have prepared an ambush on a lonely stretch of the trade road. Their leader Hobark is with them. Some are mounted, others armed with nets or crossbows. They attack any party that does not obviously outnumber or overpower them. This encounter might be used effectively with the merchant caravan encounter, providing the additional consideration of non-combatants to defend and work around. It may turn into a dangerous running battle in the form of a high-speed chase on foot or horseback through damp, foggy woodland. The highwaysmen are most active south of the city, where their lair is located; north of the city, this encounter should be replaced with the Lizardfolk Hunters. The stats below describe the standard compliment of bandits for an ambush.

Highwaymen Gang: Use the stats found in the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix and in the Highwaysmen’s Camp encounter, detailed below.

Hobark, Bbn3/Rgr3: CR 6; hp 42; see the Highwaysmen’s Camp encounter for complete stats.

Bolts, Rog2 (4): CR 2; hp 8 each; see the Ebon Union section in the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Nets, Rog2 (3): CR 1; hp 11 each; see the Ebon Union section in the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Riders, War2, (6): CR 1; hp 11 each; see the Highwaysmen’s Camp encounter for complete stats.

Tactics: The Bolts take up positions on either side of the road (Spot DC 19) to bait the party into approaching the ambush site. The Nets hide (opposed Hide vs. Spot checks) in trees above and just in front of the crossbow positions, holding their actions until chargers pass below them, when they attack with their nets. The Riders wait on either side of the road behind the crossbowmen to sweep into the road in a countercharge or to surround fallen heroes.

Hobark accompanies the horsemen, but he is quick to leave his horse and attack on foot unless an entire party is mounted. He carries six axes on his person at all times. In the first round of combat, he throws two and draws two more. Depending on range, he may throw those the first round of combat. He uses the Ebon Union encounter (Spot DC 19) to bait the party into approaching the ambush site. The Nets hide (opposed Hide vs. Spot checks) in trees above and just in front of the crossbow positions, holding their actions until chargers pass below them, when they attack with their nets. The Riders wait on either side of the road behind the crossbowmen to sweep into the road in a countercharge or to surround fallen heroes.

Hobark accompanies the horsemen, but he is quick to leave his horse and attack on foot unless an entire party is mounted. He carries six axes on his person at all times. In the first round of combat, he throws two and draws two more. Depending on range, he may throw those the following round. The last pair of axes he uses in melee. He initiates his rage ability on the first round of combat.

Treasure: The bandits have several pouches of coin from this day’s raids, worth 120 gp and 200 sp.

Outrider Patrol

The mounted outrider patrols originate in Dun Eamon and are charged with protecting the trade road and the travelers on it as they approach the city. They have a range of roughly 50 miles in any direction — rarely more than a day’s ride from the city. There are exceptions to this limit, such as when the outriders are on specific business: i.e., responding to a crisis or escorting a diplomat, priest, or magistrate. When out of the city, they prefer to billet themselves in a village tavern, a home, or a barn, but they are equipped to camp outdoors if no other option is available. A writ from Lord Angus gives them authority over most citizens of the valley, although they cannot overrule an appointed agent of Lord Angus (such as a magistrate) unless circumstances are extreme.

Outrider patrols travel in groups of eight, one of whom is a Warden. They wear the livery of the Angus clan (blue and grey tabards over mail) and carry blue banners at their lance tips. They are obliged to stop every group of travelers when they enter the valley and inquire about their destination, business intentions, and length of stay. They also assess a party's composition and include it in their report when they return to the city. Their high rate of travel ensures that most visitors to the region are expected by the time they arrive in Dun Eamon. In extreme circumstances, the Warden may dispatch two riders to return at full speed to request further support or deliver important information.

The outriders are not at leisure to discuss current events in the city, although they have been instructed to be on the lookout for capable adventurers that might be of use to the community. An unusually good Gather Information check (DC 20), perhaps with a bonus for someone of military bearing, might prompt the Warden to infer that events are afoot in the city that might result in lucrative adventures for the party.

Outrider, male human War1: CR 1/2; SZ M; HD 1d8+1; hp 6; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 14 or 16 (with shield); Atk +3 melee (1d8+1, heavy lance, crit x3, double damage on charge) or +2 melee (1d8+1, longsword, crit 19–20) or +1 ranged (1d6, shortbow, crit x3, 60 ft.); ALLLG; SV Fort +3, Ref +0, Will +0; Str 12, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Feats: Alertness, Improved Initiative, Mounted Combat, Weapon Focus (heavy lance).

Possessions: Scale mail, large steel shield, heavy lance, longsword, shortbow and quiver of 20 arrows, light warhorse, tack and harness, rations, waterskin, and bedroll.

Warden, male human Ftr3: CR 3; SZ M; HD 3d10+6; hp 24; Init +5; Spd 20 ft.; AC 16 or 18 (with shield); Atk +7 melee (1d8+3, +1 longsword, crit 19–20) or +4 ranged (1d6, shortbow, crit x3, 60 ft.); ALLLG; SV Fort +6, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 15, Dex 12, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 10.

Feats: Climb +2, Handle Animal +3, Jump +2, Ride (horse) +5, Swim +1.

Possessions: Chain mail, large steel shield, +1 longsword, shortbow and quiver of 20 arrows, signal horn, rank chain, writ of authority from Lord Angus, potion of cure light wounds, light warhorse, tack and harness, rations, waterskin, and bedroll.

Light Warhorse: CR 1; SZ L Animal; HD 3d8+9; hp 22; Init +1; Spd 60 ft.; AC 14; Atk +4 melee (1d4+3 [x2], hooves) and –1 melee (1d3+1, bite); Face/Reach 5 ft. x 10 ft./5 ft.; SQ scent; AL NG; SV Fort +6, Ref +4, Wil+2; Str 16, Dex 13, Con 17, Int 2, Wis 13, Cha 6.

Skills: Listen +7, Spot +7.

Valley Woodsmen: There is a 15% chance that a valley woodsmen on horseback accompanies any outrider patrol.

Encounters Off the Trade Road

If the heroes choose to leave the relative safety of the road, they may already be tracking one of the preceding factions. If they are wandering aimlessly or looking for a place to camp, use the following table to determine their encounter, rolling 1d20.

Bernya the Nymph (EL 9)

The party most likely encounters Bernya standing on a tree limb over the road, challenging their passage with an arrow set to her bowstring. Bernya is one of several fey creatures that dwell in the misty forests of Eamonvale, but she is unique among her kind. She is troubled by her past and by the unrest in the valley, and her class levels and her attitude are unlike that of any other nymph. She usually contents herself with monitoring the passage of adventuring bands and merchant caravans, but periodically her rage boils over and she confronts a party openly, demanding to know its business in the valley. This reaction is more likely if the party shows evidence of evil tendencies or travels with servants or thralls, and she attacks without notice if any party obviously keeps slaves. She reacts the same when encountered at night.

Several human generations ago, a band of slavers came to the valley. They raided the outlying villages and readily dispatched or evaded the militias that opposed them. Internal affairs kept the Angus clan from mounting an efficient defense, and many of the citizens retreated to within the city walls. Bernya and a few farmers and woodsmen fought against the slavers, but their efforts were ineffective, and the band prepared to leave the valley with its human cargo. During a final, desperate attack on the slaver’s camp, Bernya was badly injured and taken as a prize slave herself, bound and masked to contain her beauty. A few months later, the Angus clan went to war to reclaim their guerilla band, vowing that she would not rest until all the slaves had been freed and the slavers dispatched. They eventually completed the task and eliminated the slavers, but by the time Bernya returned from the pursuit across distant lands, she was unable to return to the life she had known. She has sworn to keep that kind of evil from arising in her domain again.

Description: Bernya is a stunningly beautiful creature, but the scars of her battles against the slavers mar both her appearance and her persona. Her hair is dirty and tangled, her face is smeared with dirt, and a long scar crosses from below her right eye to the corner of her jaw. She wears bloodstained armor and carries an ash bow, a scimitar, and a kukri knife — souvenirs of the defeated southern slave raiders.

Possessions: Studded leather armor, masterwork longbow, quiver of 20 arrows, masterwork scimitar, kukri knife.

Animal Companion: Two wolves of Lassilim’s pack almost always accompany Bernya while she patrols the wilderness.

Note: Bernya’s unearthly beauty nymph special attack is unusable in her current condition due to her downtrodden attitude and disfiguring scars. Those who would normally be subject to her deadly appearance are distracted by her troubled nature. She is still extremely striking, and her blinding beauty functions as normal, but with a reduced save DC. Bernya’s bonus against her favored enemy is a result of her deep-seated rage, cold determination, and intuition, rather than being indicative of any special familiarity or training.

Wolves (2): CR 1; hp 13; see the MM.

Wolf Pack

Many packs of wolves roam the forests around Dun Eamon, but two are uniquely large and powerful. A dire wolves named Gorian leads one pack; a celestial wolf named Lassilim leads the other. Lassilim's pack has allied itself with Bernya and assists her in seeking balance in the woodlands. Gorian and his wolf pack want to force the human hunters and farmers out of the area so that the beasts might once again dominate the mountain slopes, with Gorian himself as lord of the realm.

The heroes have an equal chance of encountering either wolf pack, as well as a chance of encountering a non-aligned pack of normal wolves. Lassilim's pack does not attack the party unless provoked or asked to do so by Bernya. Gorian's pack attacks immediately, trying to kill or drive off any trespassers in "their" realm. The other wolf packs size up the party before attacking, and usually try to separate a weaker member from the group and chase him or her into the mist.

Lizardfolk Valley (EL 10)

Exploring beyond the trade road, rescuing the lost lizardfolk child from the city, or tracking the lizardfolk hunting party may lead the heroes here — to the lair of the lizardfolk tribe. This area is a deep gorge with a geothermal hot spring at the rear. The warm water flows under a bridge at the road, where the party might feel a warm breeze blowing out of the valley. The reptilian humanoids occupy a small village at the back of the valley, but have extensively trapped the entire area.

They arrived only a few years before the events of this adventure. The Angus clan has always kept a zero tolerance policy on slavery and allows no person in bondage across the ford. A slave caravan managed to pass off its human cargo as servants, but they had also been carrying a number of lizardfolk, captives from the distant south. The reptilian humanoids were not doing well in the cold mountain environment, nor had they adjusted well to captivity, so they were clubbed and left to die outside the city. They made their way into the forest, where they managed to scavenge and hunt enough to survive.

When they discovered the hot springs in the small valley, their chances for survival and their quality of living increased. The temperature was reminiscent of their tropical home, and the mineral rich plant life supported numerous small creatures for them to hunt and trap. The small tribe has flourished here, built a village, and begun to explore the mountain slopes and venture in disguise into the city nearby. Still, they dream of returning to their tropical home in the south, but they cannot begin to plan such a journey and are content to stay where they are for now. They have no connection to the events of the adventure.

The lizardfolk have found plenty of time to establish their presence in the area, and the village is well defended by cunning traps and ambushes, most of which use fungal poisons. There is a 20% chance that a trap is watched by a group of lizardfolk hunters.

Punji Stake Trap: CR 2; +10 ranged; 1d6 darts inflicting 1d2 points of damage each; darts coated with fungal sleep poison — injury, Fortitude DC 15, 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).

Spore Pit Trap: CR 2; no attack roll necessary; 40-ft. deep pit; 4d6 points of damage; bottom covered with tiny mushrooms with fungal sleep spores — ingestion, Fortitude DC 15, 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness, Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).

Poisoned Dart Trap: CR 2; +5 ranged; 1d6 darts coating with fungal sleep poison — injury, Fortitude DC 15, 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness; Search (DC 22); Disable Device (DC 22).

Chief Ank'M'Tak, Drd5: CR 6; SZ M (Aquatic, Reptilian); HD 7d8+7; hp 42; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17; Atk +4 ranged (1d6+2 and poison, javelin, 30 ft.) or +4 melee (1d6, stone heavy pick, crit x4) or +6 melee (1d4+2 [x2], claws); SA spells, poison (javelins carry fungal sleep poison — injury, Fortitude DC 15, 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness); SQ nature sense, animal companion, woodland stride, trackless step, resist nature's lure, wild shape (1/day); AL N; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +8; Str 15, Dex 10, Con 13, Int 9, Wis 14, Cha 13.

Skills: Balance +4, Concentration +5, Heal +5, Jump +7, Knowledge (nature) +4, Swim +9.

Feats: Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Multiattack.

Divine Spells Prepared (5/4/3/1): 0 — cure minor wounds (x2), guidance, light, purify food and drink, resistance; 1st — cure light wounds (x2), detect animals or plants, goodberry; 2nd — barkskin, charm person or animal, produce flame, summon nature's ally II; 3rd — cure moderate wounds.

Possessions: Large shield, 3 javelins, stone heavy pick, totem staff with several dangling humanoid skulls, loincloth decorated with bits of jewelry stolen from the Highwaymen (900 gp).

Description: Chief Ank'M'Tak wears a loincloth of snake-skin pierced with pins, brooches, and other jewelry. His totem staff is rumored to give him the power of his defeated enemies. He is powerfully built and carries himself with pride. His only concerns are for the survival and growth of his tribe.

Shaman Shar'M'No, Clr4: CR 5; SZ M (Aquatic, Reptilian); HD 6d8+6; hp 33; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17;
Atk +4 ranged (1d6+1 and poison, javelin, 30 ft.) or +3 melee (1d6–1, stone heavy pick, crit x4) or +5 melee (1d4+1 [x2], claws); SA spells, rebuke undead, poison (javelins carry fungal sleep poison — injury, Fortitude DC 15, 1 temporary Con/unconsciousness); AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref +4, Will +5; Str 10, Con 10, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Feats: Brew Potion, Great Fortitude, Multiattack.

Divine Spells Prepared (5/4/2): 0—cure minor wounds (x3), detect poison, light; 1st—bane, cure light wounds (x2), obscuring mist; 2nd—bull’s strength, cure moderate wounds.

Possessions: Large shield, 3 javelins, stone heavy pick, medicine bag (holy symbol), staff with gems pressed into the cracks (10 rolls on the 4d4 gp gem table category, plus a pale lavender ioun stone that currently holds 2 spell levels and can only absorb 3 more spell levels before burning out).

Description: Shar’M’No wears a ragged robe stolen from a traveler. He is the only one in the tribe to wear humanoid clothing and stands out as such. He is smaller than Ank’M’Tak and often looks around with paranoia, hissing under his breath. He covets the chief’s position and wishes to overthrow him.

Lizardfolk Hunters (20): CR 1; hp 11 each; javelins poisoned with fungal sleep poison (see above); see the MM.

Possessions: Large shield, 3 javelins, stone heavy pick.

Description: These lizardfolk are prepared for battle; they carry only their weapons and wear only loincloths ornamented with shells and bones.

Lizardfolk Non-Combatants (10): The village is home to a number of elderly or infant lizardfolk who do not take part in any conflict. The elders have the respect of the tribe, and the young cannot survive without the hunters to provide them with food.

Tactics: The shaman Shar’M’No has advised Chief Ank’M’Tak that the extraction of information from (and eventual roasting of) captives is critical to survival, so they do not attack sentient beings on sight. When the lizardfolk do encounter humanoids, they attempt to take them prisoners and deliver them to their village for a meeting with their leaders.

There is a 20% chance that a party of lizardfolk hunters is watching any of the traps in the valley, as the traps do not kill or permanently detain most creatures. These hunters assess the danger of the trapped creature and either move to surround it or send for reinforcements from the village. The lizardfolk attempt to time their attack so that it takes advantage of whichever trap the party has triggered. Most of their traps involve fungal sleep poison, so they focus on heroes who remain awake. They attack those characters with their javelins at range and then close to melee. When in close combat, they fight defensively against anyone who appears to be succumbing to the poison’s effects, as they are under orders to bring survivors in if possible.

When the lizardfolk fight as a tribe, the hunters throw their javelins as they close in and then rush into melee with their heavy picks. The Chief and the shaman stand back and support the tribe with their spells, using their poisoned javelins if a threat comes near. If Chief Ank'M'Tak is wounded, weakened, or otherwise vulnerable, Shar'M'No tries to kill him with cause light wounds or another method, ensuring his place as leader. If the heroes notice this act, they may intervene and win the Chief’s favor.

If the party gains access to the village, as prisoners or otherwise, the chief and shaman take an audience with them. Should the party stumble onto the camp, the hunters immediately move to surround it, but do not attack without orders from Ank'M'Tak. The Chief questions the heroes as to their motives and attempts to ascertain the threat level. If the heroes can use their Diplomacy skills effectively (DC 20), they might learn of the tribe’s desire to return to their native jungles. The shaman covets the leadership of the tribe and tries desperately (and often successfully) to influence the Chief’s decisions. A gift to the tribe improves relations considerably, while insults and threats are not taken well. Depending on the heroes’ actions, the Chief may offer to trade with them, challenge them to a trial, or simply order the tribe to kill them. A test of strength and hunting prowess might be called on to settle any issue that might arise — the party must enter the valley and defeat an equal number of lizardfolk hunters, including the chief... without the use of their equipment!

If the party arrives at the village as a result of making contact with the lost lizardfolk youngster from Area U in Dun Eamon (see Chapter Two), reactions may be very different. The tribe is grateful to have the child returned, but they immediately subject the youngster to harsh reprimands and interrogation to ensure that he acted without fear and battled well while in the city. If the party supports this image, the young creature receives only the rebuke. If the party reports that it was hiding in fear, a harsh punishment is in order. Alternatively, the heroes could be asked or required by the tribe to determine the fate of the youngster when they visit the city.

Regardless of how the youngster fares, the Chief and shaman both thank the heroes and offer them sanctuary. If the lizardfolk village remains in the valley, the heroes have a place where they can rest and store supplies. At the DM’s discretion, the leaders may approach the party with their desire to leave the valley and return to their ancestral homeland, which could become an involved process. The shaman continues to covet the Chief’s position and conspire against him, and the heroes might become pawns in his clever schemes as their relations with the tribe progress.

Highwaymen’s Camp (EL 14)

The highwaymen are camped on a high bluff above the road. The camp consists of a few dozen tents, dugouts, and temporary shacks, plus two wagons stolen from merchant caravans. Several fire pits are scattered about, as well as cords of wood, game-smoking lean-tos, latrines, and food caches.

Their camp’s natural defensive position is ideal; many traps, deadfalls and pits have been prepared on the approaches to it, and it is always under careful guard. Characters may stumble upon this area if they leave the road, but it is more likely that they will track the ambushers back here or force its location from a captive under duress. Planning an invasion of the camp is a difficult affair, and the party is almost certainly outnumbered. Infiltrating the camp by stealth or deception is just as difficult, but all are potentially viable tactics. Defeating the bandits also brings the party into good favor with the government of Dun Eamon.

This particular band of highwaymen is a splinter group of the Ebon Union. Some of them came with the thieves’ guild after they were ousted from their previous home city, but most of them joined the group later, during the months that the entire band relied on robbery on the trade road. Most of the men who joined during this time were outdoorsmen and had no desire to dwell in a city, much less below one. Devlin wisely allowed them to stay in the wilderness under the command of his old lieutenant, Hobark. By doing so, he has maintained his influence on the trade caravans while having a ready market for the goods he steals. He provides supplies to the bandits in exchange for marketing their stolen caravan goods — goods that he can sell for a higher price that Hobark could find for them and still turn a profit for the Union. In some cases, he might conspire with Hobark and his men to steal the same item a second time as it leaves the region in the hands of its new owner.

Hobark was one of the first to join the Ebon Union during their wilderness era. He had previously made good money and a bad name for himself as a bounty hunter and freelance killer. Highway robbery suits him well and favors his skills, for he is cruel and sadistic and yet fancies himself noble, and no man in the gang can match him in combat or on horseback.

Hidden Pit Trap: CR 1; 20-ft. deep pit (2d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).

Log Deadfall Trap: CR 5; +15 melee (5d6); Reflex save (DC 25) avoids or (DC 20) for half damage; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20). Note: The pile of tumbling logs can strike several characters in its path.

Rolling Boulder Trap: CR 5; +12 melee (6d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).
Spear Trap: CR 2; +10 ranged (1d8, crit x3); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20).

Hobark, Blm3/Rgr3: CR 6; SZ M; HD 3d12+3 plus 3d10+3; hp 42; Init +2; Spd 40 ft.; AC 17; Atk +9/+4 melee (1d6 +2, throwing axe), or +7/+2 and +7 melee (1d6+2 [x2], throwing axes), or +9/+4 ranged (1d6+2, throwing axe, 10 ft.); SA rage (1/day); SQ fast movement, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC); favored enemy (humans), Track; AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref+2, Will +0; Str 15, Dex 14, Con 13, Int 12, Wis 10, Cha 12.

Skills: Climb +7, Handle Animal +5, Hide +6, Jump +7, Listen +6, Move Silently +7, Ride (horse) +10, Spot +7, Wilderness Lore +6.

Feats: Ambidexterity, Point Blank Shot, Quick Draw, Rapid Shot, Track, Two-Weapon Fighting, Weapon Focus (throwing axe).

Possessions: 6 throwing axes, leather baldrick, +1 chain shirt, 6 gp attached to his armpit hair with wax, light warhorse (see Outrider Patrol).

Description: Hobark is a bounty hunter and mercenary for hire. He was one of Devlin’s lieutenants before the Ebon Union divided, and he fell naturally into leadership. His position is based on the most elementary “law of the jungle”: he was the strongest, fastest, and most skilled of the highwaymen that remained behind. Devlin’s tactics using the crossbows and nets have continued to serve the gang well, and none of Hobark’s men find fault with his leadership. Hobark is a tall, black-haired man with a look of intensity on his face and a brace of axes crossed over his chain shirt.

The highwaymen are a diverse bunch of ruffians, but most of them have the same background as the Ebon Union thieves, including the same specialties. Use the stats found in the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix. In addition, there are two other NPC types in the wilderness gang: Riders and Hunters.

Thugs, War1 (18): CR 1/2; hp 10 each; armed with battle-axe (1d8, crit x3) or longsword (1d8, crit 19–20); see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Knives, Rog1 (14): CR 1; hp 5 each; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Bolts, Rog2 (10): CR 2; hp 10 each; equipped with woodland camouflage cloak that adds +2 circumstance bonus to Hide checks with 5 minutes’ preparation; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Nets, Rog2 (6): CR 2; hp 10 each; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Shifters, Rog2 (2): CR 2; hp 10 each; see the Ebon Union section of the NPC Appendix for complete stats.

Riders, War2 (16): CR 1; SZ M; HD 2d8+2; hp 11; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14; Atk +4 melee (1d8+1, light flail) or +2 ranged (1d6, shortbow, crit x3, 60 ft.); AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +0, Will +0; Str 12, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 8.

Skills: Climb +2, Handle Animal +3, Jump +2, Ride (horse) +7, Swim +1. Feats: Skill Focus (Ride [horse]), Weapon Focus (heavy lance).

Possessions: Studded leather armor, small wooden shield, light flail, shortbow and quiver of 20 arrows, light warhorse (see Outrider Patrol), tack and harness, rations, waterskin, and bedroll.

Hunters, Rgr2 (8): CR 2; SZ M; HD 2d10+2; hp 15; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 15; Atk +4 melee (1d8+2, longsword, crit 18–20), or +2 melee (1d8+2, longsword, crit 18–20) and +2 melee (1d6+2, short sword, crit 19–20), or +3 ranged (1d8+2, masterwork mighty composite longbow [Str 14], crit x3, 110 ft.); AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +2, Will +1; Str 14, Dex 15, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 12, Cha 8.

Skills: Hide +7, Move Silently +7, Spot +5, Wilderness Lore +5.

Feats: Point Blank Shot, Precise Shot.

Possessions: studded leather armor, longsword, short sword, longbow and quiver of 20 arrows, rations, waterskin and bedroll.

Tactics: The Highwaymen fight very aggressively in defense of their camp. Hunters or Bolts guard the perimeter, looking out over the approach to the camp and the network of traps. Make a Listen or Spot check (DC 15) each time a trap is triggered or some other noisy event occurs; success means the camp is alerted to the party’s presence. If the perimeter is lost, the Highwaymen gather around their leader (if he still lives) and fight ferociously, but they fall back into the forest and flee if they sustain 50% casualties.

Treasure: The Highwaymen have their personal items, the provisions of their camp, and a stash of gold and silver coins worth 1,200 gp. At any given time, they have plunder equivalent to 2d6 rolls on Table 7–6: Art Objects in the DMG.

Wild Boars

Wild boars are one of the most dangerous creatures on the forest slopes. While not as organized as the wolves or as powerful as a bear, their sheer ferocity makes them the bane of locals and travelers alike. A campfire or the sounds of a group often draw boars, for they require nothing more than the promise of food to ransack a camp. Normal boars usually attack singly or in pairs, while dire boars are almost always alone. At the DM’s discretion, a wereboar could be introduced for further plot development.

Shaw, Valley Woodsmen

The valley woodsmen are wilderness experts in the employ of Lord Angus, although many hunt and trap on the side. They patrol the areas of mountainous forest that are beyond the reach of the outriders — and these areas are vast. The valley woodsmen cover many miles each day, traveling cross-country with only a mentally ingrained map of their beloved wilderness to guide them. They report weekly (give or take a few days) to Bron Angus or to one of his officers at the Mist Watch Garrison (see Area 1 in Chapter Two) before refreshing their supplies and heading back out into the wilds.
Most woodsmen are rangers, but some have levels of barbarian as well. Nearly all are human males, although elves, half-elves, and gnomes have entered into such contracts with Angus, and at least one woman is listed among their ranks. If this encounter is rolled, the party most likely does not notice anything until the woodsmen announce themselves; the woodsmen may track the party for miles and may only emerge if they are attacked. Woodsmen assume an aloof, detached demeanor toward adventurers, although they warm to a druid or accomplished ranger in the party. Unless the party is engaged in some forbidden act or misdemeanor, the woodsmen usually inquire about the party’s experiences in the wilds, sightings of game, or news from beyond the valley. They recommend that travelers make their way back to the road as soon as possible and are willing to provide an escort if needed. If encountered at night, the woodsman listens at the edge of camp to assess the party’s alignment before entering or moving on.

Shaw, Valley Woodsman, human male Rgr4: CR 4; SZ M; HD 4d10+4; hp 30; Init +3; Spd 30 ft.; AC 16; Atk +7 melee (1d8+3, masterwork longsword, crit 19–20), or +5 melee (1d8+2, longsword, crit 19–20) and +4 melee (1d6+2, short sword, crit 19–20), or +9 ranged (1d8+2, masterwork mighty composite longbow [Str 14], crit x3, 110 ft.); SA favored enemy (animals), spells; SQ Track; AL CG; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +2; Str 14, Dex 16, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 12, Cha 8.

Feats: Point Blank Shot, Rapid Shot, Weapon Focus (composite longbow).

Possessions: Masterwork studded leather armor, masterwork longsword, short sword, masterwork mighty composite longbow (Str 14), quiver of 20 arrows, 2 potions of cure light wounds, signal horn, bedroll, waterskin, 3 days’ rations.

Night Encounters

Most of the night encounters are simply encounters with the common traffic of the trade road that take place after dark; the others are with nocturnal hunters and foragers. The NPCs have guidelines for night encounters in their descriptive text, above.

Wolf Pack

If a wolf pack attacks the party at night, a few members break away to create a distracting howl from a distance. The howling still seems far-off when the pack strikes. Their tactics are the same as for a daylight encounter.

Wild Boar

When the boars attack at night, no notice is given: they rush into the camp and tear into sleeping characters, though food scraps may distract them.

Brown Bear

This large creature is often drawn to a camp by the smell of food being prepared. Sometimes, it waits at the edge of camp until the party retires before foraging, but whenever it decides to take its meal, it expects the food to be surrendered without contest. It attacks only if the party resists or threatens it.

Displacer Beast

This fearsome predator drifts down from the higher slopes to hunt along the road at night. It prefers an individual or a small group of travelers to a large caravan, but it does not get terribly picky, especially if the seasonal traffic has died off. Between the mist, the dark, and the creature’s displacement ability, it can be very difficult to defeat.

Displacer Beast: CR 4; hp 51; see the MM.

Ideas For Further Development

These encounters are simply meant to provide some colorful role-playing and a bit of conflict en route to the Grey Citadel. With some attention, however, they could easily be enhanced into several sessions’ worth of gaming. Consider the following hooks:

- Bernya contacts the party with concerns that Hobark and his men have turned to kidnapping. She does not have the resources to go against them herself, but the party may be able to bring in some woodsmen and perhaps an outrider unit to assist. Plotting and coordinating the attack on the camp requires good intelligence, timing, and execution.

- Lord Angus wants the lizardfolk threat neutralized. On reaching their valley, the party realizes that the lizardfolk just want to return to their jungle home. The heroes must avoid the conspiracies of the greedy shaman and escort the lizardfolk out of the region, hopefully finding some way to claim their reward as well.

- Lassilim and his pack find the party one night to report that Gorian’s pack and some unknown humanoid agents have captured Bernya and a few woodsmen. Finding Gorian’s hidden burrow is just the beginning, because Hobark and his men have negotiated with the would-be wolf king for the enslavement of the nymph and the murder of the woodsmen.

Adventure in the Grey Citadel of Dun Eamon

In the city of Dun Eamon, demons roam the streets, criminals rule the night and an important local power figure has gone missing. Can your heroes unravel the clues that lead through every social element of the city — from the heights of the Grey Citadel to far below its streets and even into the hearts of its inhabitants? Or are some mysteries better left unsolved?

Uncover An Artifact of Great Evil

The Grey Citadel is a mini-campaign of urban detective work and dungeon exploration designed for four or more characters of 5th level. Set in a rain-soaked, rough-and-tumble frontier city, The Grey Citadel offers numerous colorful NPCs, a richly unique location, new monsters and magic items — plus enough plot twists to provide hours of role-playing and door-kicking adventure, where your wits must be as sharp as your swords!

A fantasy adventure for 4 to 6 players of the 5th and above.
