Kal Partha
Manufactured in the UK under licence.

GALACTIC GRENADIERS

- ES40 Infantry Advancing with
- ES39 Grenadiers in Full Tunic and Plate Armour
- ES36 Infantry Advancing with
- ES33 Grenadiers in Full Tunic and Plate Armour
- ES27 Mounted Ranger
- ES24 Elf Lord
- ES23 Shield Maiden Attacking with
- ES22 Elf Lord

NEW RELEASES

- ES12 Vallor Captain with
- ES11 Beowulf with Sword and Shield
- ES10 Witch
- ES09 Werebear
- ES08 Adventuress on Horseback
- ES07 Lancer of the March, in Chainmail.
- ES06 Dragon Rider of the Night, advancing with
- ES05 Goblink with Sickle
- ES04 Demon Floor Trap
- ES03 Demon

PERSONALITIES AND THINGS THAT BUMP IN THE NIGHT

- FA13 Fighter in Plate Mail with
- FA12 Wizard with Staff
- FA11 Cleric with Cross and Mace
- FA10 Thief with Dagger
- FA9 Druid with Sickle
- FA8 Bard with Sword and Lute
- FA7 Monk with staff
- FA6 Merchant
- FA5 Thief
- FA4 Necromancer
- FA3 Illusionist
- FA2 Paladin with Sword
- FA1 Illusionist

FANTASY ADVENTURERS

- FA37 Monk with Staff
- FA36 Grenadier
- FA35 Piper with Spear and Shield
- FA34 Bard
- FA33 Archer
- FA32 Dwarf
- FA29 Wraith
- FA28 Dwarf
- FA27 Mounted Ranger
- FA26 Goblink with Sickle
- FA25 Dwarf in Plate Armour
- FA24 Sword and Scimitar
- FA23 Dwarf
- FA22 Dwarf
- FA21 Elf Princess
- FA20 Elf Lord
- FA19 Elf Mage
- FA18 Advancing with Short Sword
- FA17 Angel of Death
- FA16 Mummy Advancing
- FA15 Cleric
- FA14 Count Dracula
- FA13 Assassin with Cloak and Dagger
- FA12 Valiant Captain with Shield and Sword
- FA11 Vampire
- FA10 Dragon
- FA9 Goblink
- FA8 Giant
- FA7 Giant
- FA6 Giant
- FA5 Giant
- FA4 Giant
- FA3 Giant
- FA2 Giant
- FA1 Giant

FANTASY SPECIALS

- FS10 Ghost Rider
- FS09 Witch
- FS08 Dragon Rider of the March, in Chainmail.
- FS07 Lancer of the March, in Chainmail.
- FS06 Knight of the Dragon Lord
- FS05 Sluzbek Heavy Cavalry
- FS04 Wolf Rider of the Night, with
- FS03 Sword and Shield, Mounted on Wolf
- FS02 Wolf Rider of the Night, with
- FS01 Great Wolf of the Night, without

MISCELLANEOUS

- PH1 Light Cavalry Horse
- PH1 Heavy Cavalry Horse
- WP1 Weapons Pack (10 Assorted)
Chivalry and Sorcery comprises the most complete set of rules ever published for Fantasy and Medieval gaming. A role playing game, C & S contains rules covering tournaments, mass battles, sieges, magic, alchemy, monsters, individual combat and much, much more. Role players will find a complete, detailed, medieval lifestyle encompassed in this 129 page book which comes with an index style table of contents. $10 (U.K. £6.50)

Chivalry & Sorcery sourcebook

A supplement to C & S with new rules for forestry, hunting, trade, agriculture, mining & prospecting, creating monsters, sieges, rallying armies, sections on how to use the magic system and create new spells, plus answers to most commonly asked questions. $8 (U.K. £4.95)

Swords & Sorcerers

An expansion to the world of Chivalry and Sorcery with sections on nations on the fringes of Europe. Includes the Mongols, Vikings, Picts and Gaels with appropriate new magick (Druids and Rune Magick). $8 (U.K. £4.95)

Bireme & Galley

Complete naval rules for the ancient, medieval and renaissance periods. Includes a 100pp Booklet, cut-apart ship counters, ship record sheet, 25mm scale deck plans for boarding actions, and a clear plastic turning radius sheet. $12.95 (U.K. £7.95)

DESTRIER

Destrier is a combat card system for Chivalry & Sorcery, designed to allow new players to use the detailed individual combat system of C & S or simply speed up combat for those who have already mastered the system. Destrier provides two sets of cards for tactical combat moves and melee decisions on actions taken during melee. A must for any campaign where players are involved in individual combat. Complete rules for using the cards are contained in a rule book. $5 (U.K. £3.50)

Available in the USA from
Fantasy Games Unlimited, Inc.
P.O. Box 182, Roslyn, N.Y. 11576
Also available in U.K. from Games Workshop,
1 Dalling Road, Hammersmith, London W6

Please mention WHITE DWARF when replying to advertisements
TUNNELS AND TROLLS
8.75
One of the original fantasy role-play gaming series, out over several years. It's particular advantage is the availability of many solo-dungeons designed to accompany it.
Solo Dungeons—each with a particular theme:
Buffalo Castle. 1.75
Deathtrap Equalizer. 1.75
Labyrinth. 1.75
Dragon's Dungeon. 1.75
Wilderlands of High Fantasy.
Newts. 1.75
Overkill. 1.75
Beastie's Underworld. 3.75
City of Terror. 3.75
Centaurs and Centauri—individually priced solo-dungeons, no two are the same: £3.75
Dungeon of the Beast—k a dungeon masters dungeon with map and guide (for T&T). £3.75 Insult Bad Guy—a book of pre-generated characters for fantasy games. £2.75

PHILMAR GAMES
DIPLOMACY. The classic multi-player game of player diplomacy politics and war. Up to seven players make and break alliances in a game of few rules but great skill and subtlety. £9.95
KINGMAKER: Halfway between Diplomacy and conventional board-games, apolitical devotees of both styles as well as the baccalaureate 'family' game player. The period is that of the Wars of the Roses and the object is to control the monarch at the end of the game. Plague, battles, sea expedition and many other elements combine to produce a sparkling game, best suited to three or more players. £7.95
DECLINE AND FALL. An action packed four player game of the barbarian invasion of Rome. Hum, Vandal, Gothic and Roman strive to gain ascendancy through diplomacy, military power and taxation. £11.99
SEASTRIKE. Modern naval combat with thoughtfully designed rules and detailed components. A great variety of play possibilities for two or four players. £7.50

ENGLISH CIVIL WAR. For two players covering the conflict between King and Parliament in the period 1642-1646. Easily understood and fast-moving game with tactical and strategic decisions required. £5.50 SORCERORS CAVES. Fantasy role-playing games are fun but require much preparation.
For those who wish for the realities of magic, monsters and treasure without too much work, this game is easy. Understanded by all the family every game being very different. Rules for two, one or many players.
Available in various sets. £5.00
NEW FROM SPI: Agricola
Art of Siege Warfare. £18.00
Great War in the East. £3.95
COUNTER MAGNETISING STRIP. Available in 1" wide strips—attach one side to stick to your counters. All you need is a knife to separate the magnetised counters and a metal sheet to go behind your map.
Ideal for putting your game on a wall. A five foot strip is enough for a SP!-based game (100 counters). Price per 51 strip £1.60 — per 101 strip £1.10.

Wargames OF LIVERPOOL
50-54 MANCHESTER ST., LIVERPOOL L1 6ER
Tel: 051-236 2605
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9am to 6pm.
FOR WAR, FANTASY AND SCIENCE-FICTION GAMING

Please mention WHITE DWARF when replying to advertisements

TRENCHFIGHTERS
(£5.00)

Game Design

C.P. GAMES

dlll

simulations canadas games all £7.75

Raketa Kreyeser. A tactical level naval game for Dieppe. A company, platoon and section level game with several scenarios of the Allied amphibious assault of 1942 on occupied France.
LE GRAND EMPIRE. Strategic simulation of Napoleon's bid to establish French hegemony over Europe. Two to seven players.
QUEBEC LIBRE. A game dealing with the political and economic problems of contemporary
Canada. For up to six players.
Many innovative rules give the game a fine period 'feel'.
PELOPONNESIAN WAR. The 30 year struggle for dominance in ancient Greek strategic game form. Third
player (Persian). TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME

SIMULATIONS CANADA games all £7.75

Raketa Kreyeser. A tactical level naval game for Dieppe. A company, platoon and section level game with several scenarios of the Allied amphibious assault of 1942 on
occupied France.
LE GRAND EMPIRE. Strategic simulation of Napoleon's bid to establish French hegemony over Europe. Two to seven players.
QUEBEC LIBRE. A game dealing with the political and economic problems of contemporary
Canada. For up to six players.
Many innovative rules give the game a fine period 'feel'.
PELOPONNESIAN WAR. The 30 year struggle for dominance in ancient Greek strategic game form. Third
player (Persian). TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME

SIMULATIONS CANADA games all £7.75

Raketa Kreyeser. A tactical level naval game for Dieppe. A company, platoon and section level game with several scenarios of the Allied amphibious assault of 1942 on
occupied France.
LE GRAND EMPIRE. Strategic simulation of Napoleon's bid to establish French hegemony over Europe. Two to seven players.
QUEBEC LIBRE. A game dealing with the political and economic problems of contemporary
Canada. For up to six players.
Many innovative rules give the game a fine period 'feel'.
PELOPONNESIAN WAR. The 30 year struggle for dominance in ancient Greek strategic game form. Third
player (Persian). TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME

SIMULATIONS CANADA games all £7.75

Raketa Kreyeser. A tactical level naval game for Dieppe. A company, platoon and section level game with several scenarios of the Allied amphibious assault of 1942 on
occupied France.
LE GRAND EMPIRE. Strategic simulation of Napoleon's bid to establish French hegemony over Europe. Two to seven players.
QUEBEC LIBRE. A game dealing with the political and economic problems of contemporary
Canada. For up to six players.
Many innovative rules give the game a fine period 'feel'.
PELOPONNESIAN WAR. The 30 year struggle for dominance in ancient Greek strategic game form. Third
player (Persian). TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME

SIMULATIONS CANADA games all £7.75

Raketa Kreyeser. A tactical level naval game for Dieppe. A company, platoon and section level game with several scenarios of the Allied amphibious assault of 1942 on
occupied France.
The lost world of Atlantis? (part IX)

A23, 'Encounter in the swamp'
Complete Set (1/32nd Scale) ......................... £9.72 incl. postage & V.A.T. (U.K. only)

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE/HANDBOOK
65p (incl. postage) U.S.A. $3.00 (Airmail)
Overseas generally £1.00

Phoenix Model Developments Ltd.
Producers of Miniature Periodic Figures & Static Models etc.
The Square, Earls Barton, Northampton, England
Telephone: Northampton 890 512

Dungeons & STARSHIPS
Fantasy & SF Games Specialists
45 Summer Row, Birmingham B3 1JJ

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS revised basic set inc.
Rule Book, Polyhedral Dice, Geomorphs I and Monsters & Treasure I ......................... £7.50
D&D Revised Rule Book ......................... £2.50
All original supplements (each) ................ £3.40
Full range Judges Guild inc. City State @ .. £5.95
Ready Ref @ ........................................ £1.99
+ all New items
All The World's Monsters I & II @ (each) ... £4.95
MICROGAMES - All @ £1.99 except Wizard &
GEV - both @ £2.75. The Death Test £1.99
Call in and see us, we stock a full range of TSR,
Judges Guild, FGU, Metagaming, GDW, SPI,
Avalon Hill, Flying Buffalo, Philmar, Chaosium,
F&F Games and others.

NEW

THE SOLO DUNGEON.

@Games Publications.
A solitaire, programmed Dungeon, ready for use, only £2.40
TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME (Tel: 021 233 1302)

MINIATURE FIGURINES
METAL FIGURES

FOR THE BEST IN WARGAME AND FANTASY FIGURES

TSR HOBBIES, INC
DUNGEONS & DRAGONS Figures

MANUFACTURED UNDER EXCLUSIVE LICENCE

Science Fiction
Fantasy
BOOKS

Valley of the Four Winds
25mm Fantasy Figures

MAIL ORDER ADDRESS 1-5 GRAHAM ROAD, SOUTHAMPTON Tel: 20855

Please mention WHITE DWARF when replying to advertisements
We thought it appropriate to feature an Eddie Jones painting for the cover of White Dwarf this issue as readers voted his painting on the cover of issue 10 their first choice in our recent survey (full results on page 25). Eddie is well known for his magazine and book covers and we are very pleased to be able to feature some of his excellent artwork in White Dwarf.

As the readership of White Dwarf grows, the resulting increase in print run means we are able to offer the reader more for his money. This issue contains four extra pages and this 32 page format will now be standard. Our existence depends on you, our readers, and we thank you for your support.

People who we do not thank are the photocopier fanatics. In a hobby industry like adult games, prices can never be as low as "mass market" products because the unit costs are so much higher. So if you see people using photocopied rules or magazines, give them a bad time, especially if you have paid for your games. Besides being illegal, it means higher prices for those of you who do buy the products. Please support those who make it all possible and patronise TSR, GDW, FGU, The Chaosium, etc. Don't rip them off.
A regular feature introducing new and interesting monsters, edited by Don Turnbull.

You will be pleased to know that Ye Ed has asked me to reduce the amount of trite prattle I insert at the beginning and end of the Factory to leave more space for new monsters. Mortified as I am, I have to admit that the purpose of the column is not to bore the pants off you with my comments, so I'll have to yield to force majeur. Mumble mumble . . .

No. appearing: 2
Armour class: 5
Movement: 6"/18"/8"/12"
Hit Dice: 1D8+1
Treasure: type F
Attack: (male only) bite for 1D4 damage
Alignment: Neutral
Intelligence: Animal
Monstermark: 2.2 (level I in 12 levels)

Resembling giant bluebottles (up to 2' long) with four limbs — miniature human arms and legs — the Assassin Bug is rarely seen except during its mating season (one day in every two months) when a male and a female may be encountered flying in search of a host for their offspring. The natural host is human, but Bugs have been known to lay their eggs in other humanoid.

The male will attack first, biting a victim for 1D4 damage; if this attack succeeds, the Bug's saliva will paralyse the affected area of the victim's body unless he makes his saving roll. The male will continue to attack until killed.

As soon as the male's attacks have achieved the desired paralysation, the female will 'attack' the affected area; if successful, she implants her egg into the victim's body, then dies.

The egg will hatch, producing 1-4 larvae, 13-24 hours after it is implanted. During this period, only a very powerful spell such as limited wish (or surgery) will remove or kill the egg. When the larvae hatch, each one will cause 1 point of damage to the host each turn (ten minutes). After two weeks, the larvae will leave the host body and metamorphose into fully grown Assassin Bugs. While they are in the host body, the larvae can be killed by a number of spells: cure serious wounds will kill one larva per experience level of the caster above sixth; cure critical wounds will kill all larvae; heal will kill all larvae and restore all but 5-8 of the victim's hit points.

Assassin Bug eggs are regarded as great delicacies by Trolls, Troglodytes and Bugbears.

Comments: Considering the limited number of larvae produced by each mating pair, and the likely mortality rate of the larvae, it is a trifle surprising the breed has survived. Presumably a freshly-killed body would do as a host? Though things would be pretty nasty after two weeks . . .

The Iron Pig was originally constructed as a trial experiment prior to an attempt at constructing an Iron Golem. Since then, evil magic-users have come to regard these hulky porcine creations as useful and less expensive substitutes for the Golerns.

Like the Iron Golem, the Iron Pig may only be hit by magical weapons with a bonus of +3 or better. Its normal attack is a 1D10 bite but it may simultaneously breathe little puffs of chlorine gas (1D6 damage) for a maximum of 20 rounds per day. It will always breathe if it has been damaged.

Comments: The Golerns are too powerful for inclusion in those parts of dungeons likely to be entered by low-level players, but the Iron Pig is much more deployable. The designer gives it standard magical resistance, unlike the Golerns, but that's reasonable if it is an 'economy version'.

The appearance of the Grell is fearsome — a body like a giant exposed brain 5' in diameter and with a frontal beak, below which trail ten 6' long tentacles. The beast flies by a levitation process, the tentacles controlling horizontal motion.

Grells are very dangerous and cunning, often dropping on victims from above. All ten tentacles can be brought to bear on a single victim;
each inflicts 1D4 damage and carries small spines which paralyse the victim unless he makes his saving roll. As soon as the prey has been paralysed, the Grell anchors two tentacles onto the body, lashing it with the other eight tentacles and also biting with its beak for 1D6 damage (none of these attacks require a ‘to hit’ roll once the victim has been grasped).

Any hit on a tentacle will render it inoperative (though it regenerates in two days) but the damage is not subtracted from the Grell’s hit points. Grell damage can only be caused by hitting the body itself.

Grells are immune to Lightning but otherwise have standard magical resistance.

Comments: This thing is even worse than the Carrion Crawler — with ten tentacles hitting, there’s not much chance of avoiding paralysis... luckily it only attacks on the ‘S dice’ line. I should have thought the sight of this beast would be likely to induce fear in low-level characters as the Mummy.

It’s not often we have such a powerful entrant in the Factory, but this one is mighty interesting... in its way (I would not like to meet it).

Hook Horrors by Ian Livingstone

No. appearing: 2D6
Armour class: 3
Movement: 9"
Hit Dice: 5D8
Treasure: type P
Attack: two talons, 1D8 each
Alignment: Neutral
Intelligence: low
Monstermark: 45 (level IV in 12 levels)

Large, powerful humanoids, Hook Horrors have vulture-like heads and a hard plated exoskeleton which is mottled grey in colour. Though their vision is very poor (they inhabit deep underground caverns) their hearing is extremely acute and there is only a 10% chance of surprising them. Their arms end in sharp, hooked talons which they use in melee.

They cannot speak but communicate by making clacking noises with the exoskeleton — an eerie sound which can alarm the unwary as it echoes round dungeon corridors.

Comments: Straightforward stuff, but an excellent and vivid image even without the artist's work. Perhaps they should have vulnerability to, or resistance against, fire.

This is a computer with a brain. It's a genius. This new computer has twice the memory of its predecessor. The increased speed of this computer allows it to process data at a rate of 45 (level IV in 12 levels) times that of its predecessor. It is a very powerful computer indeed. I am curious to know whether the designer intended the Githyanki's projection to the material plane as using the Silver Thread — if so it explains more clearly why they are so anxious to retain control of the Silver Swords, though it doesn’t explain why they bring Silver Swords with them in the first place. Could the designer elucidate please? As it stands, most fighters would prefer the Dancing Sword to the Silver Sword.

Githyanki by C. Stross

No. appearing: 1D4
Armour class: variable
Movement: variable
Hit Dice: variable (upper limit of 11D8)
Treasure: individuals type R, lair type A
Attack: by weapon type
Alignment: variable but never good and always evil
Intelligence: average - genius
Monstermark: variable

Long ago the Mind Flayers enslaved a race of evil humans — the Githyanki — as slaves and food. Gradually the Githyanki grew in strength and powers, finally throwing off their rulers' yoke and gaining their autonomy. They dwell in the Outer Planes but frequently project themselves to the material plane (an innate ability common to all members of the race) and from time to time will set up temporary refugee deep underground from which they mount raids on humans and Mind Flayers alike. They worship a Lich-Queen said to have powers at 24th level of magic-use.

Githyanki progress in experience as fighters, magic-users or fighters/magic-users. They have never been known to progress above 11th level and rarely above 8th. Githyanki use armour and weapons as men do, though the ornateness of their design is often a distinguishing feature. Fighters and fighter/magic-users of 5th level and above usually carry Dancing Swords of at least +1 bonus. A Githyanki fighter of 7th level and above will usually carry a Silver Sword — a +3 broadsword with a limitedorpal value (sever on a roll of 20) and which, if used astrally, has a 20% chance per melee round of cutting the Silver Thread.

Silver Swords are intelligent (10 or higher, with an ego of 7 or higher) but are non-aligned. Githyanki will go to any lengths to prevent them from falling into human hands.

Outside their lair, they will never be encountered in parties larger than 4; in the lair however will be 21-30 Githyanki of all types.

All Githyanki, of whatever level, have psionic abilities in the range 150-250 with all attack modes and all defence modes except J.

Comments: Another extremely well-developed 'tribal' beast and one which deserves to feature in many high-level modules. For an explanation of the Silver Thread, read the clerical Astral Spell in the PH — the Silver Sword is a very powerful astral weapon indeed. I am curious to know whether the designer intended the Githyanki's projection to the material plane as using the Silver Thread — if so it explains more clearly why they are so anxious to retain control of the Silver Swords, though it doesn’t explain why they bring Silver Swords with them in the first place. Could the designer elucidate please? As it stands, most fighters would prefer the Dancing Sword to the Silver Sword.

Giant Bloodworm by Ian Livingstone

No. appearing: 1D4
Armour class: 7
Movement: 6"
Hit Dice: 6D8
Treasure: type Q
Attack: blood drain 1D8
Alignment: Neutral
Intelligence: non
Monstermark: 27 (level III in 12 levels)

20' long, Giant Bloodworms are usually found in the shallow pools of underground caverns. Their underbelly is dark shiny brown while their upper surface is mottled green — lying half in, half out of a pool a Giant Bloodworm is easily mistaken for a moss-covered rock. They attack when stepped upon.

When a Giant Bloodworm attacks, it will attempt to fasten its large sucker mouth onto a victim, and if it succeeds it will, each subsequent round, drain blood from the victim, inflicting 1D8 points damage.

Giant Bloodworms are particularly vulnerable to fire — they take double damage from normal fire attacks and save at —2 against magical fire.

Comments: The Giant monsters aren't usually low-level, so this one is particularly welcome in the third rank. Presumably it also has swimming ability (at the same 6“ rate?) and could if necessary retreat into the water. I am a bit surprised at the low armour class — a beast which spends its time mucking over rocks should have tougher skin; perhaps this is a dexterity disadvantage?

Desert Raiders by Cracky Hitchcock

No. appearing: 4D10
Armour class: 8
Movement: 12"
Hit Dice: 5D8
Treasure: nil
Attack: 1 'dagger' (1D8) at +2 hit probability — see below
Alignment: Chaotic good Intelligence: very
Monstermark: 24.8 (level III in 12 levels) and higher

These humans inhabit dungeons and deserts and wear special robes known as 'stillsuits' which can re-cycle the body's water to make it drinkable. These stillsuits may be used by other human characters in an emergency though there is a 10% cumulative chance per hour that the suit will fail. These stillsuits are only good for about 150-250 emergency though there is a 10% cumulative chance per hour that the suit will fail. These stillsuits are only good for about 150-250 days.

These stillsuits are only good for about 150-250 emergency though there is a 10% cumulative chance per hour that the suit will fail. These stillsuits are only good for about 150-250 days.

Similar to humans in most respects, the Desert Raiders can be recognised by the fact that their eyes are completely blue. They fight as 5th level fighters and use Crysknives - daggers made from the teeth of Purple Worms; these weapons inflict 1D8 damage and Desert Raiders attack at +2 hit probability with them.

Of every 5 Desert Raiders encountered, one will have clerical abilities ranging from 4th to 6th level; in addition, one in every five Desert Raiders will be trained in the 'weirding way' and may attack as a monk... of 4th - 7th level. A band of more than 20 Desert Raiders will be led by a 'bodyguard' which gets two attacks per round, each at +2 hit probability, with open hand, doing 1D10 damage per attack.

Comments: A well-developed 'tribal' monster on the lines of the existing approach (within the TSR D modules). I hope the designer doesn't mind me changing the name, for copyright reasons. It should be noted that the Desert Raider uses the same 'saving roll' table as a 5th level cleric, and the ones trained in the monk's abilities will use the appropriate monk's table.

Three-Headed Skrak

by Bob Montgomery

No. appearing: 1
Armour class: 5
Movement: 1'
Hit Dice: 4D8
Treasure: J,K,L,M,N,O,X
Attack: See below
Alignment: Neutral
Intelligence: Animal
Monstermark: 143 (level VII in 12 levels)

These predatory beasts are the subject of many ancient myths. They dwell above or below ground in any fissure — even volcanic ones as they are immune to fire — that they can secrete their long serpentine body into (like a hermit crab). Vibrations through the earth warn them of anyone's approach before they will rear out and attack. They are slow moving and seldom encountered away from their hole which they only leave to find a larger one.

They have a single head atop 3 muscular intestinal tracts but appear to have 3 heads and intertwined bodies, as described in legends. This is because they emanate a powerful spectral force. Because of the legends, any communicative beings will automatically believe it to have 3 heads and will sustain damage from each while any attacks on it have only 1/3 chance of being directed against the true monster. Each believed head attacks independently with a 1-6 bite and collectively for a 1-4 constrict plus 1-6 bite and collectively for a 1-4 constriction.

Comments: A novel beast that could be as difficult to DM as it is to fight. It has virtually 12 hit dice!

Before closing the Factory doors on a goodly collection, there is something I am allowing (!) to say. We (that is, Games Workshop, who have asked me to edit the project) intend to produce and publish a volume of monsters, most of which have been submitted for inclusion in the Factory, as the second volume of the Monster Manual; the publication will have official TSR recognition and will be called the Fiend Folio (to maintain some alliteration). Not all the monsters which have appeared in the Factory will be included and of course the Folio will contain many more monsters than have appeared in the Factory so far. Designers will be credited if their creation is to be appear. There will have been modification/expansion of some of the entries, I hope designers don't mind my mess about a little with their creations and will approve the changes as worthwhile. Some names, too, will be changed for various reasons.

I am writing to all designers regarding the Fiend Folio, but do not have the addresses of Mary Patterson, W. Maddox or Simon Tilbrook. Would they please write to me c/o White Dwarf.

This is an exciting project which will bring many more new monsters to your notice than could the Factory; we hope you will give it your full support.

Publication date has not yet been fixed, but we hope to aim for late 1979.
Some torches should, underneath the flame, have a thin wood or metal square about nine inches each side, centered on the handle. (From the side it will look like a cross.) This enables one to put the torch down without touching flame to floor—it rests on the square. If the torch is dropped the square should make it less likely to go out, assuming the handle is properly weighted.

I find a "patented doorstop" most useful. It is a wedge with a rough or rubber-like bottom so it won't slip along the floor. Imagine a rectangular solid about 6 x 3 x 3 or 4 inches. Cut it diagonally lengthwise and you have the basis for two stops. Modifications will be necessary depending on what kind of doors exist in the local dungeon. When placed on the floor in front of an opening door the stop will slow it down, but if kicked sharply from behind it will wedge itself underneath a closed door, making it hard to open immediately from the other side. Obviously it's not as good as a few pounded spikes, but it can be placed and removed very rapidly—just kick it once or twice from the side to dislodge it.

Finally, make some packets to throw to pursuing monsters. A paper packet or pottery sphere filled with colored dust or flour will make intelligent pursuers think twice when thrown against the ceiling—maybe it's Dust of Sneezing and Choking or yellow mold spores. Another packet containing various coins and a large but cheap gem may persuade a pursuer to stop a while. Gold-colored or plated copper pieces are also useful.

This may seem like a lot to carry about, but most of it can be divided among the party or put on a mule. The things every member should have, such as noseplugs, don't amount to a large weight or volume. I've not included complicated items like collapsible boats and multi-shot crossbows (yes, they do exist) because a referee can easily argue that such things are beyond the technology of his world, or that characters would never think of such things. I'm sure other players have their favourite implements; perhaps some will send them to Treasure Chest.

Notes for Referees
Don't let players get away with too much in the way of implements and encumbrance in general. The two most frequent trespasses involve 10 foot poles and lights. A long pole is an awkward device; this will be much more obvious if you use a toothpick or other stick (depending on scale) on your board to represent each pole. After a while players may decide spears are long enough, thank you. Illumination counters are a lot of trouble, but worth it for experienced parties. I use coloured beads for lanterns, torches, and ideally lamps with shutters temporarily down to block the light. When counters are used players can't avoid assigning someone to hold the lights. It's also useful to know where the lights are when someone wants to throw a lantern or otherwise start a big fire. Remember that lights may go out when hastily dropped, and a lantern may even break and start a fire.

If you use the firebomb rules in Basic D&D you'll find that adventures become "hand grenade" raids. Moreover, what's to stop the humanoid monsters from burning everything in sight? This is dull. It is much more interesting, as well as more manageable, to rule that oil is slow to take fire and slow to burn, so that it can be profitably used only to burn cleanup crew or to block passages with prepared fires.

Finally, don't let anyone use poison regularly, except assassins and poisonous monsters. If players argue, point out that if they can have poison, so can the bad guys—and that won't favor the players. Whenever any humanoid uses poison the ferocity rules from Blackmoor should apply. If players have just killed a poisonous monster and dip weapons in the poison, that ought to be acceptable until it decomposes (in a few hours), but remember ferocity.
OPEN BOX

OPEN BOX examines Science Fiction and Fantasy games and rulebooks currently in the shops. The reviews have been written by either independent authorities or members of the White Dwarf Test Panel. The OVERALL figures on a 1–10 scale, rates the game itself taking all factors into consideration.

RAPIER & DAGGER

Fantasy Games Unlimited Inc. – £2.50

This is a rules book for sword-play on a man-to-man scale, and is really two sets of rules in one – the first and simpler set dealing with a pencil-and-paper game, the second and more complicated designed for miniature figures. They are presented in a handsome booklet – clearly laid out and well-printed – with two separate card inserts, one a character profile, the other an extract of the most important charts and tables from the rules. These are suitable for photocopying, and indeed such a procedure is suggested in the rules.

Before the rules proper, the booklet contains some interesting history of sword-fighting and introduces the basic measures, stances, movements and sword actions which are common to both games. Characters are ‘generated’ in the familiar way, using 20-sided dice, their expertise is determined and their profiles accumulated; then we are ready for action.

I found even the ‘simple’ rules quite complicated and until look puny compared with Sean Cleary’s Wall of Darkness, with play would have been of enormous benefit. Particularly in view of this, I would commend to purchasers the gentle approach – learn the pencil-and-paper rules first before going into the greater complexity of the miniatures rules.

The rules are readily adaptable into existing games such as En Garde, Chivalry & Sorcery or even D&D if you want to make melee more realistic between opponents using swords. I suspect, however, they will be used more often on their own – and they provide the basis for some entertaining and thought-provoking duels. Recommended.

Overall: 6

ALL THE WORLDS’ MONSTERS Volume II

The Chaosium – £4.95

Hard on the heels of volume I of this work comes volume II which contains another 250+ monsters for dungeonmasters. The background to ATWM was well detailed in its launch and is effectively the introduction for volume I in White Dwarf 5, so I won’t repeat it here. Suffice it to say that the mixture is as before – new monsters of all shapes, sizes and types, neatly categorised and classified.

In my review of volume I I tried to work out an approximate tabulation in order to demonstrate the range of monsters, finding the bias slightly in favour of the more powerful beasts. Here is a repeat of that exercise for volume II.

Not a great deal of difference between these results and those for volume I – the high-level beast still has the edge, though armour class, taken as a whole, is less in the monsters’ favour in volume II.

Last time I commented on a source of possible confusion in the characteristics – an unexplained ‘plussage’ in the AC for some monsters. Regrettably, the confusion still remains; there is no explanation of that ‘plus’ and I must conclude that it represents a ‘dexterity bonus’. I was pleased to see a great proliferation of Golems this time (though a Garlic Bread Golem takes some beating) and the Elemental class is, logically, thinly represented. There do seem to be some really ‘gross’ monsters here – more so than in volume I: how do you react, for instance, to the Giant Hunting Falcon of Nicolai Shapiro, which has 289HP, AC2, dives at 460 mph and hits with a beak (3D8), 2 talons (4D6 each) as well as the initial dive attack (19–24)? Or Steve Henderson’s Frostwind, which in its largest form had 800HP, AC 2+6 (or -4 by my reckoning) and hits with a blast of cold for 2D4. Even these look puny compared with Sean Cleary’s Wall of Darkness, with 8575 hit points, AC -26 and which causes total organic destruction on contact, as well as being immune to most magic.

But these oddities and curiosities do not diminish the impact of the volume which is a very useful addition to the DM’s library. If the reader selects with care, rather than merely taking everything on the board, he should find a goodly number of new monsters to unleash on his players.

So my conclusion is very much the same as for volume I. I wish the editors had been a little more discriminating, ruthlessly chopping out the uninteresting and the ‘randomly-generated’ monster and perhaps lowering the price of the final version. But they have included more interesting monsters than did volume I and on the whole I can give this collection a marginally better recommendation.

Overall: 5

Don Turnbull
THE ARDUIN GRIMOIRE Volumes I, II and III

Dave Hargrave - £6.50 per volume

To remain on safe ground for at least one paragraph, each volume has over 90 pages printed in rather small type on a page 8½” by 5½” – the size of the Original D&D booklets. To one of my advancing years and rapidly-approaching senility, the print is not easy to read; as well as being rather small, it is also rather faint in my copy, though volume III is much better than the others in this respect. Very little of the booklets’ content are text – most are tables and charts: new character classes, new experience points systems, new spells, new magical items, new movement, combat and magical systems, new monsters. In short, the booklets set out the parameters of the author’s ‘world’ Arduin in what appears to be a most comprehensive fashion. I understand the Grimoire evolved over a period of years during which a number of west-coast fantasy players playtested the ‘world’ and helped to create a workable system for play. Taken in isolation, it represents a very considerable labour of love on the part of the author – he must have spent many, many hours in its compilation.

Now read that paragraph again, but this time assuming you know nothing about D&D or fantasy role-playing games. It doesn’t tell you much, does it? Yet this is precisely the impression that the volumes themselves must generate in any reader who comes across them as the first examples of fantasy role-playing material. Presumably the Grimoire is intended to be some sort of D&D supplement – indeed volume I is actually called a ‘supplement’, though of what it doesn’t say, and the buyer of volume I might be pardoned for thinking there was something he had missed somewhere along the line. But the Grimoire doesn’t tell him – there isn’t a single reference to TSR or to D&D anywhere in the three volumes, so far as I can see.

All very curious. To publish the Grimoire ostensibly as a set of fantasy game rules – to ask members of the public (of whom more are ignorant of D&D and fantasy gaming than knowledgeable) to buy them – carries with it the obligation, as I see it, either to explain to the purchaser how to play the game or to acknowledge the original source of the ideas. Preferably both. But the Grimoire does neither, and this I find most odd. It is as though the author were producing the Grimoire for the private consumption of those who participate in games in his ‘world’, only as an afterthought deciding to make them more widely available and without recognising the need either to present a complete game-system or to indicate to the lay reader where to find the means to complete it.

So if you have no knowledge of D&D or other fantasy role-playing games, these volumes are unlikely to give you more than a smattering.

But enough of this – let’s see what the volumes do contain. There is a lot of it, so I must cover the ground thinly. New character classes – about 20 of them, some of which (the Assassin and the Druid) aren’t new to readers of the TSR Players’ Handbook, with related experience point tables; inevitably, some more apposite than others (I wouldn’t permit the Techno in my dungeon, for instance, but that’s a matter of personal taste). New monsters – nearly 200 of them – with full descriptions. New spells for all sorts of classes, new hit probability tables, new magical items (these tend to be on the powerful side), special ability tables, height/weight tables for characters (interesting – unless I have misread this section you could generate a character 7’ tall weighing 90 pounds), new ‘female attributes’ tables (even more interesting, some of the possibilities here). And more and more and more. Off-hand I can’t think of anything which has been left out, though the extent to which all these things will be used by those not involved in Arduin is imponderable, and there’s little of it I regard as other than gratuitous material, to be read with interest and discarded.

So we have a mass of information, no doubt useful to some and useless to others. A complex, though incomplete, game-system which many DMs would find tedious, I guess, in execution – a contents index is sadly lacking from volume I for instance – but others might find fascinating. The Grimoire is not without its errors (both typing/printing errors and rule errors) nor is it without a certain naivety of approach (experience points are not awarded for the acquisition of treasure for ‘it is the act of robbery, not the amount stolen, that gives the thief his experience’ – does the author really think TSR didn’t realise that?). I could not advise anyone to buy the Grimoire from which to learn the fantasy gaming hobby from scratch, but if you want what is in effect a D&D supplement, don’t mind the price and are prepared to be selective in what you extract from it, there will no doubt be useful snippets you could find.

The booklets seem expensive, and in terms of sheer quality of presentation and usefulness to me I would agree. However, each booklet contains more material (if you want to use it) than any of the TSR D&D supplements; with that comparison, the Grimoire does not necessarily emerge unfavourably on a price-for-price basis, but don’t forget you can get the soft-back Players’ Handbook for only £4.50.

No doubt other DMs have assembled their own private Grimoires, but give Dave Hargrave his due – he is the only one to have gone to such trouble (and cost) to make his ‘world’ generally available. Though whether he will cover his costs must be rather dubious. This is the earnest labour of an amateur who wants to vary D&D towards his own taste and, in doing so, offers thoughts to others, presumably granting them the right to take it or leave it. For my part, it will be the latter.

Overall: 4

Don Turnbull

PELIC QUEST

Conflict Interaction Associates – £1.95

"The PELLICS were the race of battle who were masters of a galaxy possessing a technology undreamed of. At the height of their power... then gone!"

So reads the introduction to Pellic Quest, the new computer moderated multiplayer play-by-mail game. And what a game it is as well! PO can fairly be described as a ‘second generation’ computer game which owes a lot to Flying Buffalo’s Starweb. But whilst Starweb was the inspiration for PO, (as the designers freely admit) Pellic Quest is a different game.

Each player is allowed to assume the role of one of six different types of Being with six different types of victory conditions and six different types of methods of obtaining those conditions. For example, the ZENTE player controls a swarm of insects interested only in killing (eating!) every living creature on all the 200+ star systems. The TRADER, however, doesn’t even like fighting, he gets his kicks by acting as the ultimate in middlemen by bartering, buying and trading the Artifacts and Raw Materials with which the galaxy abounds.

What makes this SF game different is the multitude of possible events allowed for by the computer program and the differing aims of the 10 to 15 players. By the way, don’t worry if you don’t own a computer, you don’t even have to know what a computer looks like to play PQ. CIA produce all the information you need to run your race on a piece of printout that you get every turn. Pellic Quest is the first game to be produced by CIA and if it’s anything to go by, the hobby of computer gaming is here to stay.

Overall: 7

John Reynolds

OPEN BOX

SPELLMAKER

Gametime Games — £7.95

First impressions of this game are favourable — the standard of presentation is high, with a colourful box and playing board, die-cut playing pieces which are chunky enough to grasp easily, and a simple rule-sheet. The board depicts a mysterious land with a dragon’s lair in the centre and wizards’ domains at each of the four corners, the intervening space containing a number of playing areas (‘magical’ and ‘non-magical’ domains). Each player is a Wizard who has some magical powers and also commands a mixed and ever-changing force of Giants, Knights, Dwarves, Frogs and Toadstools, each represented by a playing piece of the appropriate colour. Curiously, though each player can only have a maximum of three pieces of any particular type in play at the same time, there are about six of each type in the set of pieces. All the pieces can move in the game except Toadstools.

Non-magical combat is simple — a Giant can kill a Knight, a Dwarf or a Frog; a Knight can kill a Dwarf or a Frog; a Dwarf can kill a Frog; a Frog can’t kill anyone. Anyone except a Giant can eat a Toadstool, but Toadstools poison Giants. Combat takes place at the start of a player’s turn between pieces in the same domain.

Each Wizard can hold a number of spell cards which can be used to cast spells (this action is an alternative to movement in the second half of a player-turn). By magical means, a piece may be transferred from one magical domain to another (giving, in effect, double movement), a new piece may be created or an existing piece destroyed, or an existing piece can be changed into another piece of the same colour. ‘Null’ cards are available and these can be used to negate spells cast by another player.

The objective is to rescue the princess from the dragon’s lair and cart her back to one’s own castle, avoiding the other players’ attempts to grab her on the way. The princess can’t move of her own volition but may be carted about by any other piece (except a Toadstool) including magical means (exactly like the briefcase in The Sigma File, to which this game bears some resemblance).

Four of us decided to play Spellmaker one evening, rather later than we realised we hadn’t time for D&D. “Here’s a simple and entertaining game which shouldn’t last long”, said I — and four hours later, the princess was still being passed from hand to hand like so much luggage and no-one had managed to get her near her castle. We only managed to bring proceedings to a halt by inventing an extension of the magical spell rules, with some hilarious consequences.

All of which is rather curious for a game which (surely?) received some testing before marketing. I’m not sure I can pinpoint the reason, but I think it lies in the number and/or distribution of spell cards — scarcely a round went by without at least one of the players casting a ‘void’ spell in order to replace useless cards with what he hoped would be cards more appropriate to his tactics.

I am in a quandary about a recommendation. Played ‘straight’ I cannot honestly recommend the game, but it has many entertaining qualities and those who don’t mind some experimentation may find they emerge with a most novel and interesting little game. However, though the game is apparently designed for children aged 8, as well as for adults, I wouldn’t suggest children play it in its present form — they simply couldn’t sustain interest for long enough.

A pity, Here is an excellent idea, but something went wrong in the works.

Overall: 6

Don Turnbull

Don was not alone in his criticism of the Spellmaker spell cards so we asked the inventor, Eric Solomon, for his comments.

Some Notes by the inventor, Eric Solomon

Any inventor is happy to see his game manufactured and marketed. My pleasure, in the case of SPELLMAKER, has been somewhat attenuated by the realisation that it rarely comes to a finish in a reasonable period of play! How could this happen? Wasn’t the game tested before production? Well, yes it was! SPELLMAKER, or Spellbinder as it was originally named, was played over twenty times by my friends and I during its development. The basic rules and the topology of the board remained unchanged throughout. Most of the amendments were directed at obtaining a balanced deck of spell cards. This task was taken very seriously with a computer being used for some of the more difficult probability calculations. The card deck finally arrived at comprised 62 cards distributed as follows:

- 2 piece cards of each type in each colour.
- 2 multicoloured piece cards of each type.
- 12 null cards.

The main consideration was to make it possible to obtain a given hand of cards with defined characteristics in a reasonable average number of turns. For example, in a four-player game the probability of drawing one piece card of a given type from the full deck is 6.5%. The final prototype gave a two-player game lasting from 20 to 50 minutes, a three-player game from 30 to 90 minutes, and a four-player game from 45 to 180 minutes. Admittedly three hours is rather too long but most games finished in around two hours.

Heritage Models, who manufacture the game, decided that the game could be speeded up in two ways. First, the home castles were promoted to magical domains so that it would be possible to whisk the Princess home with a good transfer spell. Second, the card deck was expanded to 108 cards with a different distribution. The first amendment was reasonable, but in the case of the second it is easy to prove that the new deck of cards leads to a longer, not a shorter, game. In the case of the single piece card example above, the probability comes out at 55%. As far as collecting one desired card is concerned then, a player would require about 15% more turns with the new deck. When the acquisition of a hand of two, or more, cards is involved, the situation gets progressively worse. That is, slower.

My first recommendation to players of SPELLMAKER is to try a few games with the deck of cards as originally planned (see above). These can be extracted from the full deck provided with the game. Of course, for the two and three-player game it is still necessary to take out the piece cards of the unused colours.

My second recommendation is aimed at players who still find the game too slow, and for those who like experimentation. This is to change the rules to permit a player, in his turn, to both move one of his pieces and cast a spell. Thus, for example, ‘Blue’ could walk one of his frogs from a non-magical to a magical domain, they play a Blue frog transfer spell to carry it further. The new rule would also allow the spell to be cast before the ‘walking’ move, and, of course, the move could apply to one piece while the spell applied to another. If the spell is cast first, the player must allow any other player who wishes to play a cancel spell to do so before proceeding with his ‘walking’ move.

As regards cancel spells, these were a very lively part of our trials with the prototype. The new deck provided by Heritage slows down the rate of acquisition of null cards by about 10%, so players are more reluctant to use their nulls for cancel spells. There is also much longer to wait before the deck of used cards is re-shuffled to bring nulls back into circulation. This lends support to my first recommendation to use the original card deck.
... a second volume of the Monster Manual entitled the Fiend Folio is to be published later this year by Games Workshop. See page 10 for details...

... more good news for Traveller players with the release of Animal Encounters by GDW. It is a supplementary book of tables of beasts to populate the worlds of the Traveller universe. Each table is based on planetary characteristics for a given world and presents geography, fauna and natural effects such as earthquakes. Also from GDW comes Double Star, a new boxed SF game. It concerns two warring cultures in a battle for supremacy. Single spaceship and fleet battles are happening whilst cities are obliterated by asteroids...

... two new approved D&D aids have been released by Judges Guild. These are The Dragon Crown and Of Skulls and Scrapfagott Green. They are both 1978 convention tournament dungeons. Judges Guild are also now publishing The Dungeoneer as well as Judges Guild Journal in a quarto-size, glossy cover format...

The Chaosium continue to expand Runewest with two more Source Packs; Scorpion Men & Broos and Militia & Mercenaries. Also new from The Chaosium is a new role-playing magazine entitled Different Worlds...

... Games Workshop have released a new approved D&D playing aid, Dungeon Floor Plans. These are thick card sheets of passageways, rooms, stairs, doors and wooden floors which can be cut out by the DM to form any dungeon layout. They are designed to 25mm scale with a superimposed grid to regulate movement of figures along them. Also released are pads of Hex Sheets and Character Sheets which allow for character details and bonuses according to Basic or Advanced D&D...

... the 37th World Science Fiction Convention is to be held in England this year at the Metropole Hotel, Brighton. It runs from 23rd–27th August. People wishing to register should send £11.00 ($20.00) to Staicon 79, 14 Henrietta Street, London WC2...

Molten Magic takes a look at some of the new science fiction and fantasy figures which are becoming available. The code letters and numbers shown on the photographs are purely for identification purposes and not those used by the manufacturers. The manufacturers' codes are shown in brackets after the title of individual figures.
his considerable knowledge of the planis and trees to aid the farming community. Therefore, when he invited both the farmers and their families to a magic demonstration on the circle hill, none of them felt any apprehension about attending. Ash, who was an initiate of the 4th circle, had found the village disturbingly too good and lawful. Being a true neutral, he decided to correct the balance between law and chaos. When the villagers assembled he invited the young girls to come forward and to take part in the show. About a dozen girls volunteered and walked towards the druid. Suddenly the druid mumbled a few words and the grass around the villagers began to grow swiftly. He then cast a second spell and the growing vegetation engulfed the terrified audience. Interest in the girls was lost as the villagers tried to free themselves. Few noticed the young girls being led into a nearby oak grove unprotestingly by strange yet beautiful creatures. Only one person, the blacksmith, managed to free himself from the plants but when the watching druid saw him escape, an invocation to the clouded sky was enough to summon a bolt of lightning to turn the smith to a charred mass.

The villagers, not daring to attack the druid themselves, sent to their liege-lord for assistance. But the troop of men-at-arms he sent ventured into the woods never to return. Rather than waste further troops, the lord decided to forget the matter. For sometime nothing more was heard of the druid but in recent times travellers have been disappearing from the trade route. Rumours abound of a skeletal figure leading a pack of hounds hunting through the countryside at night. Rather than risk more of his men, the lord has advertised for brave adventurers to solve the mystery and return any valuables to their owners.

Pool of the Standing Stones

by Bill Howard

A mini-dungeon suitable for 6-8 5th and 6th level adventurers

DM's Notes:
1. The pre-rolled hits to kill are given for each monster along with ability saves for D.M.'s to award bonuses accordingly.
2. MM denotes the monster is described in the TSR's Monster Manual.

History
Steepfell is a sleepy little village tucked into a fertile valley well away from civilisation. It has no claim to fame despite being situated close to the major trade route to the seacoast. The village was not always unknown, for on the summit of a wooded knoll to the north of the village lies a group of stones set in a circle - an ancient shrine of the first men. This place was shunned by the locals who sensed power in the ancient dolmens. About a year ago a druid passed by the valley and, no doubt impressed by the good and lawful people gathered there, settled for a time in the area. The druid, who called himself Ash, used his considerable knowledge of the plants and trees to aid the farming community. Therefore, when he invited both the farmers and their families to a magic demonstration on the circle hill, none of them felt any apprehension about attending. Ash, who was an initiate of the 4th circle, had found the village disturbingly too good and lawful. Being a true neutral, he decided to correct the balance between law and chaos. When the villagers assembled he invited the young girls to come forward and to take part in the show. About a dozen girls volunteered and walked towards the druid. Suddenly the druid mumbled a few words and the grass around the villagers began to grow swiftly. He then cast a second spell and the growing vegetation engulfed the terrified audience. Interest in the girls was lost as the villagers tried to free themselves. Few noticed the young girls being led into a nearby oak grove unprotestingly by strange yet beautiful creatures. Only one person, the blacksmith, managed to free himself from the plants but when the watching druid saw him escape, an invocation to the clouded sky was enough to summon a bolt of lightning to turn the smith to a charred mass.

The clearing in the centre of the oakwood is reached by the path to the west which is about 5' wide and overhung by the trees. In the central clearing are a series of great stone blocks set in a ring about a rectangular pool filled with still water. The blocks are rough hewn, 4' wide, 3' deep and are firmly set into the grassy ground with between 10' to 12' exposed. The entire clearing gives off an aura of evil (the DM should attempt to pass this across to the party as a feeling of unease with odd rustlings and animal and bird calls in the vicinity sounding slightly unnatural and evil). Any horses will refuse to come even to the edge of the wood; dungeon-trained mules will enter the woods as far as the clearing if tightly held but will certainly refuse to go any further. The pool in the centre of the standing stones is surrounded by a low stone edging about 6" high. Engraved into the stone lip are vague cabalistic signs which will be unintelligible to the normal party member. A read magic on these will reveal them to be useless graffiti. The pool does not, in fact, contain water but is maintained as a permanent illusion placed on it by a 20th level wizard in the distant past. The illusion is of a very superior quality and only true sight will detect it for what it is. It can be discovered from the secondary effect as anything thrown into it will cause splashes without noise and articles dipped in will not become wet. (The DM should not actually say, 'You don't hear a splash', but rather just omit any reference to noise in the description of events.)

A read magic on these will reveal them to be useless graffiti. The pool does not, in fact, contain water but is maintained as a permanent illusion placed on it by a 20th level wizard in the distant past. The illusion is of a very superior quality and only true sight will detect it for what it is. It can be discovered from the secondary effect as anything thrown into it will cause splashes without noise and articles dipped in will not become wet. (The DM should not actually say, 'You don't hear a splash', but rather just omit any reference to noise in the description of events.)
These rooms are virtually identical. Each contains four bunk beds, four stools and four small cupboards along the N. wall in which each guard keeps his personal belongings (nothing of interest or value). There is one larger bunk in each room against the S. wall together with a larger and more impressive stool and cupboard. This is the bunk of the hobgoblin captain of the guard in 4 and of his lieutenant's in 5. The captain's cupboard will, in addition to his personal possessions, contain a locked steel box (the key is hidden in his left boot) which contains 130 S.P.; the lieutenant's cupboard also contains a smaller locked box (the key hangs on a hook on his belt) which contains 37 S.P. and a small ruby worth 10 g.p.

In the centre of each room is a rough table, four chairs and a larger better quality chair. The rooms each provide the living quarters for four hobgoblins (AC5, 1D8+1HTK6) and their leaders. Each guard fights with a morning star in normal melee. The lieutenant (HTK9) uses a sword and a whip in melee, while the captain (AC3, HTK18) attacks as a 3HD monster with sword and morning star.

Two guards from each guard room will be on guard duty in 2 & 3. If defeat is imminent, the most senior guard from each gallery will retreat to the transporters at 7 or 8 to warn Prisilla in 9 of the impending danger.

If the party reaches either guard room without causing an alert, they will see that a meal has just been eaten in 4, while in 5, the guards are gambling on the outcome of a fight between four caged rats on the table; 37 c.p. are strown round the cage, and three dead rats (the losers of previous fights) have been set aside for the evening meal.

Gaph, the captain, has concealed under the mattress of his bunk a magical sword. He is reluctant to use it since he believes that in serving Dando his alignment will not permit him to handle it without risk. In fact it is chaotic-evil with a +1 bonus and although it has low intelligence and ego, it has the power to cause darkness 10' radius once per pay.

In the corner of each guardroom there is a foul smelling pit — the primitive sanitary arrangements.

4b The "floor" is in reality a 25' deep pit filled with grey ooze (which looks exactly like the stone floor in 4). On the ceiling (which is 10' high) is a painting of a giant spider. A casual glance will lead the viewer to believe this to be real, but a more careful observation will reveal the nature of the painting.

5b The floor is real, as is the giant spider (AC4, 4D8+4, HTK28, Att 2–8 + poison and web) (MM) which will attack at the earliest opportunity, with web then bite.
6. Entrance Hall
A mural depicting a juggling morn down a procession of hobbins fills the N. wall. The freehing hobbins are shown scrambling over each other with great enthusiasm. Close examination will reveal that the hobbins is wearing a real locket (value 10 g.p.). Inside are 5 cure poison tablets. This is the 'First Aid' station of the hobgoblins.

7 & 8. Transports
The apparently blank walls at these points are the interfaces of transportation devices actuated by a person advancing to within 2' of the 'dead end' and affecting the 20' corridor in front of the interface. The party will be transported to the same point and in the same direction relative to the other corresponding interface. Those transported will still be facing in the same direction to the new interface (i.e. a character facing north initially will now be facing south). Simply standing within 2' of the interface will not actuate the trap - it is set off by the approach of a person or monster.

9. Boudoir Area
The room is richly furnished - violet satin wall drapes, thick-pile carpet of the same shade, casual chairs, tables, a wardrobe with mirrored door containing rich robes, and an ornate dressing table on which there are various items of feminine ornamentation - hairbrushes and hair sticks, bottles of nail varnish, phials of perfume, etc.

A large four-poster bed stands with its head to the E. wall concealing a secret passage behind. The heads and feet of the posts are made of huge human bones and from them and the canopy hang yellow curtains which surround the bed. Usually to be found in this bed - sometimes but not always - is the female M.U.

9a. Store
Shelves run round the W. and S. walls on which rest Prisilla's magical literature, normal reading matter (tomes on wax modelling) and her spell books Volumes I - III containing the appropriate level of spells. Volume III has been protected by an explosive curse spell. In addition there are two scrolls. The first contains three copies of a magic-user's version of the clerical spell creation food. However, the food so created would be of the form of rat dish such as rat pie, rat-in-the-hole, etc. These will cause severe digestive upsets.

If warned and no party appears in the next five turns from the transporter, she will assume that they have moved the main eastern passage and will move to 10. (If the guards had this information they will have passed it on to Prisilla, who will react accordingly.) When in 10, she will behave as she would have done in 9.

9b. Store
Shelves as in 9a are filled with old junk; Prisilla is a hoarder! Empty perfume bottles, used quills, etc. are stored here. In addition to the mummies there is a bottle labelled 'Cure-All' which contains a highly poisonous potion. (see below), hunt the party and attack any one who enters.

10. Braken's Bedroom
This room is luxuriously furnished with fur-lined floor, walls and ceiling. The fur is also a hiding place for Braken's pets - six giant ticks (AC 3 - 210) who will attack any one who enters the room accompanied by Braken or Prisilla. In the fur-draped four poster bed against the W. wall with one of the village maidens (unless forewarned by the guards from 4 & 9 the cleric).

Name
LE AC Lh HTK S I W C D Ch
For the wand.
Braken 10 5 16 9 17 12 10 17 16
Prisilla 15 10 15 10 15 9 15 9 15
Spells: cause light wounds; darkness; sanctuary (1st level); Hold person; silence; +10' radius (2nd level), animate dead (3rd level).

"He has had special suit of plate forged which allows the molestation of females without removal.

Under the bed are his weapons and valuables: a staff of striking, a +1 mace and two scrolls. The first will cause the alignment of any who studies it to change to lawful evil. The other contains 4 3rd level clerical spells: cause blindness, curse and 2 speak with dead.

The curtain to the E. has a number of bells attached to it so persons passing the idea of removing the occupants and imprisoning them in the prison cells 11a, 11b and 11c. When in the E. corner a small flight of stairs lead down to the lower level.

11a, 11b and 11c.

Name
LE AC Lh HTK S I W C D Ch
11a Cler 7 5 10 15 9 15 11 6
11b Flower 5 4 12 16 8 9 15 9 17
11c Tiger 6 6 20 10 16 11 17 12

Grell and Flower carry two-handed swords with them in combat but the Master, Tiger, will use only his bare hands. If the monks are clearly winning the fight they will drop their swords and all use open-handed with the idea of wearing the monks' weapons and imprisoning them in the prison cells 11a, 11b and 11c. The monks' cells are separated by a sparrow-finished curtain in each. The master's office - a pendant worth 5000 g.p.

11a, 11b and 11c.

11a and 11b each contain three captured village maidens all looking a little the worse for wear. They are being used by the monk for practising new forms of attack and are covered in cuts and bruises. In 11c, the girl, Ginnet, who looks in much better condition. She has contracted lycanthropy and, when the opportunity arises, will attack the party.

In human form she is AC 12, HTK 3, but when in were-rat form is AC 6, HTK 16 and can only be hit by magical weaponry. Most of the girls wear rings and other jewellery - total value about 150 g.p. - but would a lawful party consider taking them?

12. Laboratory
Two slabs of black marble are positioned in the centre of this white room. The character standing on the floor and feet of each body. Each of the whole room smells of ozone and singed flesh, and in the N.E. corner is a control panel with knobs, dials and sparking electrodes - standard machinery for the laboratory equipment. The room is used by Prisilla for experiments to construct a race of super beings. If the control panel is touched, there is a 1 in 6 chance that it will explode doing 4D6 damage and a 1 in 6 chance that one of the fabricated men will be brought to life and attack the party. The creature created will be AC 7, HTK 25 and will be slow and lumbering only hitting every second melee round, but will hit as a 6th level monster. Its fists will do 3 - 18 damage. Many of the components are non-magical which makes the whole machine a platinum - total value 1500 g.p.

In the W. corner a small flight of stairs lead down to 12a - a pool filled with brine containing spare limbs. It is also the home of a lamprey (AC 10 1D8 2, HT 7, At 1-2 and drain blood) (MM) which will attack anyone who disturbs it. The pool is about an ear still wearing an earring - value 150 g.p. - in the form of a ruby pendant which will be found. If the second of the pair is found in 15, the pair will be worth 1000 g.p.
13. Immersion Pool
The 3' deep pool contains a milky blue liquid and scattered around on the floor are test-tubes and retorts, some contain small quantities of chemicals but most are empty. A man is chained to the NW end of the N. wall, and it is obvious that he has been tortured. He is Jacob, a master alchemist. Prissila has been torturing him to gain the secrets of his research. He has already succeeded in eliciting one of his formulae—the liquid in the pool which will increase the natural armour class of creatures immersed in it by +3. There are, however, three unfortunate side effects: the creature’s life is shortened to a tenth of normal, it is reduced significantly in size, and any exposed joints will lock solid if exposed to the fluid. There is a pile of bandages in the S.W. corner of the room used to bind joints to prevent them seizing.

This will not, however, be apparent unless he is questioned about alchemy, wherein he will attack with berserk fury at 18th level. He is AC10, HKT20 (due to depravations and treatment) and attacks as a 7th level monster. He wears chain mail and high shoes with red boots. Concealed in the right boot-heel is a small bottle, labelled AGAU, containing a blood red liquid. The liquid will convert silver to gold and transform enough to get 500 g.p. per turn. The formula is very complex and it is unlikely that another alchemist, even if of master level, will be able to duplicate it.

14. Drying Room
Thick steamy fog fills the room concealing benches along the N. and W. walls where eight zombies (ACs, +3—they have just been dipped in the liquid in 13—20B, Att 1–8) are seated. The steam will conceal the zombies until approached close enough for melee to be joined. The zombies will fight to the bitter end.

In the centre is a stove which maintains the temperature at about 80° to allow the zombies to dry off quickly.

15. Mortuary
The N. wall is filled by cabinets from floor to ceiling. This is where the corpses scavenged from local churchyards are stored prior to being animated by Braken (see 10). After animation they are taken to 13. Drying Room to be treated for decomposed flesh and stored in 12A.

16. Bandit Lair
Dando maintains a small band of bandits to raid the passing merchant caravans and to obtain bodies for Braken and Prissila’s experiments. To approach the merchants without causing alarm, the entire band dress in female costume, of a rather gaudy nature, and are usually welcomed by the lonely merchants. Before they realise the ploy the hapless traders are cut down. The room is tastefully furnished, with tapestries decorating the walls. Around a large central table sit eight people—apparently courtesans but actually bandits—playing cards.

The bandits are led by:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Al</th>
<th>Ac</th>
<th>Lvl</th>
<th>HTK</th>
<th>S</th>
<th>I</th>
<th>W</th>
<th>C</th>
<th>D</th>
<th>Ch</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Rodney</td>
<td>LE</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>25</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

He is armed with a +1 scimitar (note: +1 to hit and damage). The rest of the party are a live but sleeping ogre with two large protruding gold teeth; they are his pride and joy and he would not allow anyone to disturb them. The mugwort growing in the corner contains enough to allow the zombies to dry off quickly.

17. Bandit Sleeping Quarters
The eight bunk-beds lining the walls contain little of interest except lace. A hole in the floor at the centre of the E. wall satisfies the toilet requirements of the bandits. A large book is bound in red leather containing many blank (used) pages. Only three remain unused. These contain:

- Rune of Corruption: When this rune is traced in the air all creatures within 10’ that see it must save as vs. +11. All who fail will immediately start to rot away. The whole body will be destroyed in the same number of turns as the creature has hit dice. A cure disease will arrest the process but a remove curse and cure disease need to be cast simultaneously to provide a complete recovery.

- Rune of Discord: When creatures see this rune glowing in the air they will imagine that any creatures around them are their worst enemies and will immediately attack them in berserk fury unless they make their saving throw as vs. staffs.

- Rune of Terror: Creatures attempting to pass this rune must save as vs. +11. If anyone in terror of the saving throw is not rotting away when they must save again to see if the experience has driven them insane.

The runes are used by either a magic user or cleric inscribing the shape of the rune in the air. This process will take two melee rounds. The rune will then start to glow—appearing as a fiery letter suspended in mid-air and will remain until dispelled (treat as if cast by 15th level MU) or shattered by a strongly anti-magic beast. The caster is himself susceptible to the influence of the runes but saves at +4 against their effect.

18. Transports
18a & 18b are transports exactly the same as 7 & 8.

19. Finipit Hall
The rock-hewn walls have many noks and crannies that could conceal guards. In the centre is a deep pit from which flames leap casting flickering shadows, which can be easily mistaken for the shadow monster at 14. (ACs, +3 as a 15th level MU). A man is chained to the floor of the pit as prisoners. A 10’ x 6’ x 8’ chamber (Att 1-6 spear +1-6 heat, 2-12 +1-6 heat) (MM) in the boiling lava at the base of the pit. The salamander will climb out to attack any strangers entering as, since the experiments of Braken and Prissila started, it has had few live creatures thrown to it to feast on. It wears an ornate helmet liberally studded with jewels (value 2,500 g.p.). If badly wounded it will attempt to escape to its pit and will not emerge again until its wounds have healed.

20. Dando’s Audience Chamber
A canopy and ceiling have been formed by massive blocks of dressed obsidian while the floor is covered completely by jet black carpet (or so it appears). In fact 10’ into the room and immediately in front of the W. door is a shallow pit wherein lurks a black puddling. Any who rush into this are utterly engulfed for 1D6 turns (MM). If entering the room from above, the saving throw will fail as the creature and take double damage while struggling to escape from it. The E. end stands lead up to a dias on which Dando and his 12 skeleton guards are playing knucklebones in front of an ornately carved throne. The guards (ACs, +3—they have been bathed in 13—DAB, HKTB) are armed with both swords and javelins which they will hurl at intruders. They know the position of the black puddling and will attempt to draw the party onto this. (AC 10, HTK 30, HTKB 50, 1-10)

21. Anteroom to Treasure Store
A large chest and the rest of the floor are, in fact, a very large mimic (AC 10, DABG 35, Att 3–12 + g.m.) (MM) which will attack anyone approaching the chest. When Dando comes this way to count his gold he throws a couple of the dead rats to the mimic which contracts to eat them, allowing access to the E. stairs.

22. Treasure House
A large chest lies against the E. wall. It is full to overflowing with gems of all colours and sizes. Unfortunately these are all paste (20 g.p. the lot) but they are extremely well made and would fool all but dwarves. Under the chest carved into the rock are the magical words ‘“magnus Dando”, which if pronounced will cause Dando’s treasure to be siphoned in from his infernal home. It is a large chest and contains: 3000 s.p.; 6000 g.p.; 8 gems (100 g.p. each); a silver circlet that can project green lightning bolts; and two potions of healing; 1/2M’s armour; the containing repulsion (6th), part water (6th) and guards and wards (6th); a clerical scroll containing regeneration (7th) and restoration (7th); a poisoned ring (poison as in 9b); the Sword of Solitude (see below); and the Libram of Runic Lore (see below).

Sword of Solitude: This is a lawful-good sword which Dando was apprenticed to put to the cause of evil. It was its stand and champion in their fight against evil. It acts as a normal +1 sword but has additional powers: it acts as a ring of protection +1 for its owner and also radiates a 10’ radius circle which reduces the armour class and saving throws of other creatures by –2. It has no detects or powers, other than those stated.

Libram of Runic Lore: This is a large book bound in red leather containing many blank (used) pages. Only three remain unused. These contain:

- Rune of Runic Lore (see below).

- Rune of Corruption: When this rune is traced in the air all creatures within 10’ are immediately driven out of their mind. A cure disease will arrest the process but a remove curse and cure disease need to be cast simultaneously to provide a complete recovery.

- Rune of Discord: When creatures see this rune glowing in the air they will imagine that any creatures around them are their worst enemies and will immediately attack them in berserk fury unless they make their saving throw as vs. staffs.

- Rune of Terror: Creatures attempting to pass this rune must save as vs. +11. If anyone in terror of the saving throw is not rotting away when they must save again to see if the experience has driven them insane.

The runes are used by either a magic user or cleric inscribing the shape of the rune in the air. This process will take two melee rounds. The rune will then start to glow—appearing as a fiery letter suspended in mid-air and will remain until dispelled (treat as if cast by 15th level MU) or shattered by a strongly anti-magic beast. The caster is himself susceptible to the influence of the runes but saves at +4 against their effect.

Next Issue:

- Advanced D&D — the official combat tables
- Houri — a new female character class
- Expanding Universe — additions to Traveller
- Fiend Factory — more monsters
- Valley of the Four Winds — Chapter Six
- Treasure Chest — spells special
The quest to break the sorcerer Hajjin's curse seems near its end as Hero leads his party to the mountain home of the mysterious Verokin, who is said to hold the answer; but at the very threshold Hero is transfixed by the hateful eyes of Hajjin himself -

"Folly," said Madoc, looking hard at the tall hillman. Ahead, Hero had found a gong beside the heavy iron gates closing off the pass; he had not unfurled the pennon of his broken sword. The note was strangely high and clear for the gong which made it; echoes ran up and down the narrow pass, and it seemed that the statues trembled. With a groan of old iron, the gates parted to disclose a stone courtyard still more thickly thronged with statues than before. Beyond was an arched tunnel-mouth filled with light, a tunnel winding into the mountain's heart. One by one they filed into the tunnel, first Hero and Pursio, as always their companions silent and suspicious, the dwarf Damzik still limping from his wounded thigh; then came all those men, who from time to time gave a small, odd shiver.

The gates closed behind them. On they went, down, down, with noise close upon their rear or any mark to show how it had been hewn. Hero was painfully aware that the power which drove those mighty gates together could at any moment crush them in this confined space; he took heart from the thought that Verokin, if indeed this were Verokin's stronghold, would not unfurl his pennon to their cause. Hajjin was fallen! And nothing of man-shape stood in the silent ranks of statues; plainly Verokin was friendly to men, although (as Pursio was quick to remark) the courtesy of his welcome left something to be desired!

But soon the ill moment passed. The passage opened into a large, square hall without other exits; it was lit with the same sourceless light. The place was utterly bare, with one exception: from the floor at the far end, a huge and gigantic hand seemed to rise higher than a man, which though it grew from stone seemed alive; a blue vein beat at the wrist. Its fingers were curled to hold a large, oval mirror which showed the travellers their own images, but subtly wrongly... It was Madoc who pointed out that in this mirror, images were not turned about with left becoming right, as in common mirrors...

Then came a great roar of wind as their wizard host made his entrance. He was a tall, kindly old man, bearded, with deepset eyes; he wore the conical hat of wizardry; but none of this they noticed at first, for all eyes were on the whirlwind that he rode, a thing of intense white, another pace yet, and now the others realized that Hajjin's old power was not stirring. More swords were drawn, and arrows nocked; the eyes of the sorcerer blazed brighter. Turn back! you foulness, scum of the plains, children of deformity, perversions of true magic - stand you so still when magic should wait at any moment crush them in this confined space...

With the silent words that flew past him to strike Hajjin's breast, only to suffer the same fate, each man glanced about him and came from the pale wizard's lips, but burning words took shape in all their minds.

"But of all these things we need not speak," said Pursio, with quiet composure. "The seeing-glass says that the crucial power is still at Verokin. If indeed this were Verokin's stronghold, he would have shown himself to us. But of all this we need not speak."

"Yet why, noble Hero - I know your name, madman," Pursio shrugd. "I have keenly watched your quest in the seeing-glass - but there are fearful depths in this simple matter of the sorcerer Hajjin. The gold he asked from Farrondil was but a pretext, and - but I must tell you a word or two of history. Refresh yourselves as I speak!"

"A heavy one," said Hero. Others nodded, while Anvar shivered again, eyes staring into some private vision. "How may we oppose the Demon, then?"

"And so this enclave of law would slowly grow, but chaos is cunning. Long ago, directed by the foul witch Malig, it broke the Black Gorge through the northeastern hills, and things come through such as my small band here who have been so easily tampered - but also things like your Hajjin and his Wind Demon. See you the plot? It mattered not what gold you offered; Hajjin, too, of the outside forces, wished only to leave his Demon in Farrondil, a potent focus of chaos, tainting and eroding the power of the Stone. Let it return, and it could come, as it did from across the hills - your children will not be men - and the Valley of the Four Winds will be lost in the old, formless sea."

The light died again as a spasm of pain passed over Verokin's face; in the mirror a wrinkled crane-face. "Malig," the wizard gasped as he fell, and coffee continued to splatter the hall. "The world was chaos, said Verokin from the mirror..."

"For my power too is rooted in chaos, so I must live at the valley's edge lest I shatter..."

"The Lodestones all have the power to disperse such a mighty focus of chaos, but it seems to me that were the Stone's power of law directed on the Demon - by touching one to the other - and if then a chaotic attack were also made on the Demon, then?"

"We have the Swan Bones!" said Pursio, slamming his fist on the table. "And Verokin gave a troubled smile. "The Lodestones itself have not the power to disperse such a mighty focus of chaos, but it seems to me that were the Stone's power of law directed on the Demon - by touching one to the other - and if then a chaotic attack were also made on the Demon, then?"

"We have no tools of chaos," said Pursio, slamming his fist on the table. "The guardian wizard inclined his head, unsmiling. "Thus it would seem. But there is a cloud over the days to follow, and I fear that the most of us -- you must not be overthrown." He pointed to the mirror supported by the hand. No longer did it show the hall; there was the stony Hajjin, eyes still bright. "The seeing-glass says that the crucial power is out there, as you see. The next move is Hajjin's, though a little while ago the glass showed ourselves from a far hill-top."

"And Anvar rose with a hoarse cry. "We have a traitor," he shouted. "You spoke the words yourself, mage: the dog-folk have the taint of chaos and we are betrayed! I saw it in a vision." Before all heads had finished their turning to him, his blade had buried itself in the heart of the Gondelman, Damzik. The hall went completely dark; in the mirror, Malig laughed insanely; and a blast of evil chilled them all. A weak scream came from the dwarf; Verokin's hand moved on the Instant, Anvar was a figure of grey-white stone, his rocky sword joined indissolubly to his hand.

"That and so," said the wizard sadly as light returned. "Even as I spoke, Hajjin lurid this fool with false thoughts, and we are ruined.

"Why," said Hero, still pale, "what talk 'a this? The slaying is an evil thing, but poor Damzik was already wounded and a burden to us. Anvar is a greater loss, but even he — He shook his head.

"Have you not heard tell of necromancy?"

said Verokin bitterly. "Felt you not the power? Aye, the poor dwarf is gone; the chaos-power which dwarf-folk have in their souls is gone also, and where think you it went?" He indicated the seeing-glass, where this fool with false thoughts, and we are vacuumly this? The slaying is an evil thing, but poor Damzik was already wounded and a burden to us. Anvar has another soul; Pursio muttered a good deal under his breath.

"Anvar's death also. I fancy?" said Hero. "Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

"Anvar's death also, I fancy?" said Hero half angrily. "Anvar had stood like a statue once more; Anvar has another soul; Pursio has that final spell!"

="
New Magic Items

The Sword of Thievery

by Lois Boschelli

This sword is aligned as follows:

- Neutral 1–40%
- Chaos 41–100%

It is designed exclusively for thieves. If a non-thief picks up or touches it, the sword immediately attacks at its opponent’s fighting level. It will continue to attack until either the defender is killed, the sword is destroyed, a wish (limited included) is used, or the sword is defeated by a greater blade. If a thief of the proper alignment uses it, it acts as a +2 sword, and +6 if hitting from behind. The sword also adds +2 to the thief’s dexterity, and has no ego. If a thief of a different alignment uses it, the sword retains all of its previous abilities, but its ego rises to 18.

Silver Boomerang of Za’an

by Paul North

The silver boomerang can be thrown with the accuracy and range of a dagger, but with the advantage of returning to the user’s hand. It does no damage to the creature it hits, but acts as a hold person spell with saving throws made at an additional −2.

Strangler’s Noose

by Bob Scurfield

This magical item is only usable by thieves or assassins and consists of a piece of rope that is permanently fixed in the shape of a noose. This rope is highly magical and will, upon command, fly and attack anyone designated by the controller. The noose attacks as a 3HD monster and if it hits it has fastened itself around the victim’s neck. Unless the victim is wearing plate armour he will suffocate in 2–5 melee turns. The noose counts as AC2 and has 2D10HD. The victim has a 2% chance per strength point of slipping the noose over his neck; gauntlets of ogre strength, etc. will increase this chance proportionately.

The rope will perform one ‘mission’ per day, and if destroyed it cannot be repaired.

The Swords of Meryn Caradeth

by Roger Coult

The little that is known of Meryn Caradeth, is contained in a small fragment of poetry engraved on a plinth bearing two sheathed swords and a small wooden box:

- “... and I passed beyond to journey ‘mongst the planes
- Sought death, found life and swords that shall ever bear my name
- The Black, death black, be ever at my side
- For fear of death I ever play death’s game
- Sought law, found pain and swords for heroes glory wrought
- The White, pure white, you have your sting
- Bitter experience has your lesson taught
- This quarrel’s mortal wound shall see me breathe my last breath
- This night, in pain, shall see the end of old Meryn Caradeth
- I dwell on pain, for pain is ... . . . .”

One sword is white and its sheath is decorated in white enamel and golden runes, the meaning of which is unknown. The other is black, the sheath black and silver with similar runes but arranged in different patterns. The box is lined with red velvet and contains a single bloodstained crossbow quarrel wrapped in a blood-stained rag. The blood on both is still as fresh as the day it was spilled.

The White Sword

Upon unsheathing the sword the character’s Strength, Dexterity and Constitution become 18. The sword is equivalent (see note below) to a +2 Magic Sword (Intelligence 0, Ego 0) which also does 2D6 damage.

If the character subsequently loses the sword (it can be stolen, forgotten, given away, impounded, etc.), the three attributes mentioned immediately drop to 03.

The Black Sword

Upon being unsheathed the character loses all his/her hit points bar one. The sword is equivalent to a +3 Magic Sword (see below). It does 2D8 damage. All damage done by the sword is ‘given’ to the owner again bar one hit point. Thus the character rapidly gains hit points. If he/she receives more than 11, i.e. the sword does more than 12 hit points damage, the rush of energy is deemed too great to handle and the character loses consciousness before having time to deliver another blow. Unconsciousness lasting 2D4 melee turns.

If the character parts company from the sword in any way, his/her Hit Points are all again lost bar one.

The Quarrel and the Rag

The quarrel is equivalent to a +2 Magic Arrow (see below) it does 2D8 damage, whatever type of crossbow it is fired with. Upon striking its target or otherwise the quarrel vanishes and reappears in the box. It can then be used again, if the character has remembered to bring the box.

The rag can be used by Clerics in the act of healing. It changes the spell to heal 1D8+12 hit points if layed on the forehead of the ‘patient’. Evil Clerics touching the rag must save against poison.

Notes

While magical in effect, these weapons originate on another plane of the multiverse where the weapons are not magical nor exhibit the same effects. Their behaviour is a consequence of the differing physical behaviour of the two planes. Thus they cannot be ‘drained’ of their magic by, for example, the Disenchanter (White Dwarf 6). Neither do these weapons ‘feel’ magical and detect magic has a negative result.

Earring of Control

by Robert Stanley

This is a plain-looking, gold earring (value 25 g.p.) which resembles a ring rather than an earring. Only close scrutiny will allow its owner to notice the hairline crack and hinge. If the owner mistakingly assumes the earring to be a ring and places it on his finger, nothing at all will happen. If, however, he discovers its true use, it will generate a charm monster spell by command, usable once per day.
Hiding in Shadows (New Ability)

It has been pointed out to me that . . . the greatest barbarian of them all used his ability to hide in shadows to great effect on many occasions." So be it. Barbarians should be able to hide in shadows if they are to emulate the feats of you-know-who. However, the minimum requisites for the barbarian to have the ability are dexterity 11+ coupled with intelligence 9+. They do not gain bonuses on this ability for high dexterity as thieves.

Sensing Danger (Clarification)

The ability to sense danger is merely an instinct. It is not directional, and does not give any clue to what form the danger takes. Thus a barbarian cannot walk up to a door and automatically say "Aha! Twelve feet beyond this door is an evil magic-user!" He would simply feel that something was wrong, but would have no idea of where the source of danger lay or what it was. A barbarian who fails to sense danger in a given situation cannot try again.

First-Attack Ferocity (Change)

All barbarians who succeed in striking with first-attack ferocity automatically do at least double damage if they roll 75 or less on percentage dice. However, the higher level types no longer do automatic triple or quadruple damage. Before the first-attack strike is made, roll percentage dice and consult the following table to see what the effects will be:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Barbarian Level</th>
<th>% Die-Roll</th>
<th>Effects</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>1-4</td>
<td>Attack bonus +2, double damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5-8</td>
<td>Attack bonus +3, triple damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9 and up</td>
<td>Attack bonus +4, quadruple damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>76-00</td>
<td>Attack bonus +1, normal damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>76-00</td>
<td>Attack bonus +3, triple damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>76-00</td>
<td>Attack bonus +2, double damage</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>76-00</td>
<td>Attack bonus +1, normal damage</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Thus a barbarian capable of first-attack ferocity always gains at least +1 on attack dice even if the die-roll is too high for double damage or greater. Remember though, this bonus only applies to the first melee round, and only if the barbarian has the initiative. After this first round he will attack normally; the rule about barbarians of strength 10+ always hitting at +1 is cancelled.

A barbarian is entitled to only one round of first-attack ferocity per battle. If he switches opponents in battle he does not gain any first-attack bonus on his new opponent. Similarly, if the barbarian's first-attack ferocity attempt misses, he does not get another attempt in the next round.

Illiteracy (Classification)

Illiterate barbarians cannot copy down magical writings which they cannot understand. To do this would be to set off any harmful effects which the writings might have upon the reader, e.g. the damage done by a Book readable only by magic-users. This is because there have been cases of parties using non-literate barbarians to copy down the title pages of magical Books so that they could divine their nature without risk of harm. Magical writings can be copied down only by those who fully understand them.

Barbarians As A Race (Change)

Barbarians can be considered to be a sub-race of humans who have developed a special hardness due to their upbringing in an especially harsh environment. However, that does not exclude the possibility of barbarian hybrids. Orcs will breed with anything, and it is quite likely that barbarian women have many times been carried off by raiding orcs. Thus half-orc barbarians exist, having attributes of both the orcish race and the barbarian class. Half-orcs may progress as high as 8th level as barbarians; also, they may elect to be split barbarian/thieves or barbarian/assassins, dividing experience equally between their two classes.

---

Next issue we would like to feature Spells in Treasure Chest of any level for magic-users, clerics, druids or illusionists. Please send your contributions to the Editor to arrive by 1st May 1979.
An intermittent feature intended to highlight the innovations in the new TSR Players' Handbook.

I was one of those lucky enough to get the new Players' Handbook almost as soon as it emerged from the trans-Atlantic plane, and since then I must have read through it dozens of times. But it will be many years before I can claim to know it thoroughly — even to know where to look up that elusive rule reference, despite the excellent layout and editing. In this series I will pick bits out of the PH and compare them with what we had before, hopefully as a useful 'thumbnail' guide to those who haven't been able to study this massive opus yet.

Exceptional Strength
The ability adjustments for fighters are now less in their favour than they were in Greyhawk: hit probability bonuses are reduced (and penalties for low strength are increased), damage adjustments are the same but penalties apply to characters with strength 5 as well as those with 3 or 4, weight allowances have been considerably altered and doors are harder to open. The 'bend bars/lift gates' column is new. Note it is now clear that a cleric, for example, does get the hit probability bonus if he has 18 strength, but he (and his mates in other non-fighter classes) is treated as 18(01) and never otherwise.

Intelligence
A much clearer description of the meaning of 'chance to know each listed spell', etc. A Paladin now needs an intelligence of at least 9 (previously no restriction) and a Ranger needs 13 rather than 12. 'Old' Paladins and Rangers will presumably revert to normal fighter-status unless some DMs decide to continue them under the old conditions and with the old powers.

Wisdom
Now affects saving rolls against non-physical spells such as Charm, Illusion, etc. — very reasonable. A significant improvement here for clerical characters. Additionally wisdom affects the cleric's chance of spell failure and high wisdom gives him a spell bonus.

Dexterity
Armour Class adjustment because of high (or low) dexterity has always been present for monsters, but references to similar bonuses for characters have been vague. A very important section on page 11.

Constitution
Hit Dice bonuses have been much improved — magic-users in particular will welcome this, though note that non-fighter class characters cannot now get more than +2 per hit die (in the past the apparent limit was +3). Many DMs play resurrection as reducing constitution by 1 point if successful, so successive resurrections are less and less likely to succeed. This is not specifically spelled out in the PH, so presumably a player should...

---

If you want all the latest imports (DC, Marvel, and Warren), American and British sci-fi books, posters, D&D, masses of underground comix, games and mags, French magazines and books, badges, posters, etc. ...this is the place to get them.

FOREVER PEOPLE

the largest sci-fi and comics shop outside London

59 Park Street, Bristol 1
tel. 0272 25454

including a separate comics room with thousands of back issues.

for list send SAE UK distributor for Metal Hurlant keep a separate tally of the number of times his character has been resurrected. A Ranger now only needs 14 constitution — this used to be 15.

Charisma

Considerable changes in ‘Loyalty base’ and ‘maximum number of backing men’ plus a formalised ‘reaction adjustment’ (which, until the publication of the Dungeonmaster’s Guide, will not be a great deal of use).

Racial Ability Scores impose new restrictions, and females are included. Check your non-human characters and adjust according to page 151. Dwarves are now apparently not the only race to be allowed to use the +3 Magic War Hammer (though the ‘treasure’ section in the DM’s Guide may reiterate the previous restriction). The saving roll bonus for Dwarves (formerly 4 levels) has been altered according to constitution — generally speaking this is now slightly more favourable to the Dwarves (since they must have a minimum constitution of 12 — another check you had better make on your Dwarves’ characteristics). Dwarves also get additional hit probabilities (or their opponents get hit disadvantages) when engaged against certain types of enemy — see page 16. Finally, Dwarves can advance higher up the experience levels as fighters than before.

Elves will probably not mix with Dwarves now — see the table on page 18 — so DMs will have to make up rules if the two races happen to be present in the same party. Elves are highly resistant to sleep and charm spells and are slightly more effective in melee with swords (and with bows). Note the elves’ multi-class potential.

Gnomes appear to have replaced Hobbits — there isn’t a single mention of the latter race in the entire PH that I can find, and only one in the Monster Manual (which, now I come to look for it again, I can’t find either!). In effect they are dextrous dwarves, though they, unlike Dwarves, can become illusionists.

Under Clerics page 20, note that Shadows and Ghosts are now rated as Undead — there was some confusion before. However since we don’t have new clerical ‘turning-away’ tables that doesn’t help. Note also that clerics will be able to turn away Demons and Devils (when we get the table, I suspect this power will be highly restricted).

Under Thieves note that striking with surprise from behind (page 27) gives a hit probability bonus of +4, plus double, triple or even greater damage. Do these bonuses apply only to the thief? Or can other character classes get the hit probability bonus, for instance, if they find themselves striking from behind in melee? Again, something which only the DM’s Guide will answer, but my guess is that the answer is only the Thief will benefit as a product of his special training.

The Combat Tables (page 36) have been revised to take account of the new Armour Classes (page 36). Bare skin is now AC10 rather than AC5; if a 1st level fighter still needs a 17 to hit AC2, he will presumably now only need a 9 to hit bare skin, rather than 10 as before — quite a difference.

The Monetary System (page 35) has changed, and it still isn’t a decimal system which is a great pity. Platinum is still 5 times more valuable than gold, but gold is now twenty times the value of silver, not ten times, and silver is worth ten times copper rather than five times.

Equipment costs are greatly increased (probably realistically) — no new character can now hope to wear plate mail at 400GP a suit (see page 35) and will probably have to survive in Ring or Scale; even Chain is probably too costly. Most weapons, however, are rather cheaper.

Long lists of Spells include old and new. Also the concept of long time is introduced, and very welcome it is too. See page 40 and elsewhere. DMs will no longer need to debate how long it takes to prepare a spell prior to it being cast (most DMs I know have rulings about the length of time required to prepare a spell but, once prepared, allow it to be cast instantaneously).

Note that clerics, since they must pray extensively for the granting of spells, must decide before an adventure what spells they are ‘preparing’, not pick them at the time they are required, though given the chance of an extended rest period a cleric could presumably change his menu.

Material components are, in the main, unlikely to be found underground so must be prepared beforehand and placed ready for convenient access. DMs will have to take careful note of a player’s instructions when he wants one of his characters to cast a spell — and with so many new spells, it won’t be easy for the DM to get to know even all the low-level spells and what components they require; a pity in a way, since the necessity for the DM to consult the PH at such times can slow down the game.

Note particularly the section on Spell Casting on page 100, in case it is required, that a magician can’t cast a sleep spell when his intended victim is in the process of mauling him.

The One-Minute Melee Round is detailed and justified on page 105, and the original intention of the designer is now much clearer. It seems there are three kinds of attack during melee, not two. First, there is the attack which fails and which doesn’t stand any chance of doing damage (a miss, a glancing blow, etc.) — no die roll is used, but there will be a number of these ‘failures’ each round. Second, there is the blow which connects and actually does damage. The ‘to hit’ die roll (misleadingly named) distinguishes between the two attacks but, once prepared, allow it to be cast instantaneously).

Third, there is the blow which connects and which stands a chance of doing damage but doesn’t; third, there is the blow which connects and actually does damage. The ‘to hit’ die roll (misleadingly named) distinguishes between the last two types; if the requisite total is not rolled, the blow did not miss but neither did it do enough significant damage to reduce the victim’s potential for living; if the requisite total is rolled, the blow landed and the victim’s potential for living was reduced by the number of damage points delivered.

(If note this is my interpretation of what the designer says — I can’t be sure it is right!)

SURVEY RESULTS

Last issue we asked readers for their opinions regarding (a) D&D character classes, and (b) White Dwarf covers. Here are the results.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>D&amp;D Character Classes</th>
<th>White Dwarf Covers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Magic User (23.3%)</td>
<td>1. Issue 10 (Eddie Jones)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Fighter (17.7%)</td>
<td>2. Issue 9 (Christopher Perigo)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Cleric (11.1%)</td>
<td>3. Issue 7 (John Blanche)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Thief (10.2%)</td>
<td>4. Issue 11 (John Blanche)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Ranger (9.8%)</td>
<td>5. Issue 1 (Chris Beaumont)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. Paladin (9.1%)</td>
<td>6. Issue 8 (Derek Hayes)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7. Monk (6.6%)</td>
<td>7. Issue 2 (Christopher Baker)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8. Bard (5.5%)</td>
<td>8. Issue 6 (Chris Beaumont)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9. Illusionist (3.9%)</td>
<td>9. Issue 4 (John Blanche)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10. Druid (3.8%)</td>
<td>10. Issue 3 (Alan Hunter)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Summary: No real surprises. A few more votes for the Man-Beast would have been seen in its 10th position — watch out Druid next time!

The race for first position for White Dwarf covers was virtually a two horse race in the latter stages with issue 10 just pipping issue 9 at the post — well done Eddie!
HELP!

Clubs, contacts and events can be advertised once at no charge up to a maximum of 40 words. Further insertions at the rate of 5p per word.

D&D APA
I intend to produce a D&D oriented APA-azine similar to A&E if enough support is forthcoming. Any interested contributors should write to Brian Doolton, 94 Waddington Ave, Old Coulson, Coulson, Surrey.

D&D Wirral
Three newcomers to D&D seek players or existing campaigns in the Wirral/Cheshire area. Please phone B. Stafford at 051-327 6620 after 6.00 p.m. or at weekends.

D&D Carterton
All welcome at Carterton Wargames Club, Carterton Community Centre for D&D, fantasy and war games. Details from S. Bainbridge (Tel: 0993 841710).

D&D Farnborough, Hants
New blood needed for D&D dungeon and wilderness adventures. Details from Albert Cook (Tel: 0252 51285 evening).

D&D Society
Basically a central address list of DMs, players and clubs. Please send £1.00 per year for our contact mag, an or SSSE for a local list, to Clive Wardley, 58 Tudor Parade, Hounslow, Middlesex.

Wanted
Any Strategic Reviews and The Dragon Nos. 1-7 and 11, 12, 14 and 16. Will swap or buy. Please phone Thomas Skipp at 91 47643 evenings.

D&D Sprotswon, Norwich
Players needed for postal D&D campaign. SSSE for details to Paul Compton, 22 Neville Road, Sprotswon, Norwich, Norfolk.

Wanted
Strategic Review Nos. 2, 4 and 6; The Dragon Nos. 1-3; any Dungeoneers, any A&E's; Underworld Oracle Nos. 4 and 6. Please write to Louis Boschelli, 1665 Kimark Ave, South Holland, Illinois 60473, USA stating condition and price required.

Wanted
Wyrm's Footnotes No. 2 to borrow or buy. Also, if anybody is running a postal NG game, please write to Chris Scoffin, 56a Coniston Road, Muswell Hill, London N10.

Figure Painting
Miniatures painted to an incredible standard. Any quantities or dioramas. Send 40p for a sample figure and information to Richard Scoffin, Kelvin Court, Barassie, Troon, Ayrshire.

D&D Alnwick
Players needed for D&D in the Alnwick area. I would also like to join a postal campaign and require a set of rules. Contact D. McLaughlin, 41 Fedder Place, Lonhoughton, Alnwick, Northumberland.

D&D Cheltanham
Anybody interested in forming a D&D group in the Cheltanham area please contact Simon Washbourne, 74 Welch Road, Arle, Cheltanham (Tel: 0242 31998 evenings).

D&D London
Players needed to join D&D campaign at the Enfield Wargames Group which meets every Monday 7.00-10.00 p.m. Phone Max Bantleman at 01-807 5202.

D&D Tunbridge Wells
All SF/F gamers welcome at Dark Tower, 44 Victoria Road, Tunbridge Wells. We meet every 2nd Sunday in the month from 2.30 p.m. onwards. Phone David Palmer at 073 279 562 for details.

CLASSIFIEDS

Salute 79
South London Warlords present their tenth open day at Kensington Town Hall, Holton Street, London W8 on Sunday, 22nd April 1979. Doors open at 10.00 am.

Job Opportunity
Games Workshop require two enthusiastic people aged 16-30 for their warehouse in N.W. London. The positions are: Trade Order Supervisor Mail Order Assistant Knowledge of SF/F games preferable but not essential. Please send applications to The Manager, Games Workshop, 1 Dalling Road, London W6.

Playtesters Needed
Experience gamers needed to test advanced prototypes of fantasy and science fiction boardgames. Please write to "Prototypes", c/o Games Workshop, 1 Dalling Road, London W6.
LEVIATHAN MODELS

FOR THE VERY BEST IN FANTASY AND SCIENCE FICTION WARGAMING!

HIGHLY ORIGINAL ACTION FIGURES SUITABLE FOR TABLE TOP WARGAMING, ROLE-PLAYING GAMES, OR SIMPLY FOR DISPLAY.

NOW POSTAGE AND PACKAGING FREE! (U.K. only)

EV2 Strike Vehicle, ESF2 and USF2 Battledroids

DSF1, DSF3, DSF2 The United Nation Deep Space Fleet

SEE3, SEE1, SEE3 Elkiem Empire Space Fleet

FOR MAIL ORDER ONLY:

LEVIATHAN MODELS (Dept W)
4 Peachfield Road, Malvern, Worcestershire, WR14 4AR
(Overseas P&P: Airmail 50%, Surface 30%)
U.K. Post Free

TRADE ENQUIRIES WELCOME – CURRENT STOCKISTS INCLUDE:
MINIFIGS SKYTEX, 13 Gillingham St., London SW1; TANGLEY MODEL WORKSHOP, 89/89c Woodbridge Rd., Guildford, Surrey; MODELS AND PASTIMIES, 133 Chantrylands Ave., Hull; THE WORCESTER MODELS SHOP, Friar St., Worcester.

Please mention WHITE DWARF when replying to advertisements
FOOT 15p, CAVALRY 30p

ANGEL OF DEATH

MANUFACTURED UNDER LICENSE IN THE U.K. BY

14 COMMERCE SQUARE,
HIGH PAVEMENT,
NOTTINGHAM.

Postage:
Add 10% minimum 20p.
Post Free orders over £5.00.

12th CENTURY MERCENARIES
MILITARY 15mm CAVALRY 30p

FOOT 15p, CAVALRY 30p

PIECES SUPPLIED IN WAX COMPUTER PRINTED PLASTIC傤N LISTS:

Greenwood & Ball Ltd.
We've moved! Our old premises were bursting at the seams. We are now at UNIT 27
BON LEE TRADING ESTATE,
THORNABY-ON-TEES,
CLEVELAND
Telephone: 68059

Sanderson
80mm FANTASY
£3.65

SAN80F3 Warrior with Axe and Shield
Two action and detail packed warriors from Cliff. The two bases will interlock to form a vignette. More to come!

New catalogue in preparation, ready soon — watch our ads.
Retail orders up to £5 add 10% p&p, over £5 post free

Please mention WHITE DWARF when replying to advertisements
PELLIC QUEST®
Subjugation of a Galaxy!

THE PELLICS®. The race of beings who were masters of a galaxy, possessing a technology undreamt of. At the verge of extra-galactic conquest; at the height of their power ... then, gone! All of them; without a trace. Their machines remain though, as does the jewel of their Empire, the Pellic Home System. Millenia pass, and beings on the outlying Systems of the dormant Empire have begun reaching into space, trying to rediscover, for their own purposes, the secrets of the "Ancients".

We invite you to play an integral part in determining the destiny of this galaxy, maneuvering various types of Starfleets, and invading Systems with Troops in your own quest to succeed the Pellics as Master of the galaxy.

Dependent upon your character type (you've 6 to choose from!), you'll gain victory points by capturing Star Systems (or by vaporizing them!), ruling populations, controlling industry or agriculture, collecting Artifacts, and for locating the ruins of the Pellic Home System. With 229 Star Systems to explore (you start out knowing about only one!), and 10–14 other players to outwit (bludgeon?), you'll find PELLIC QUEST® to be a real challenge!

PELLIC QUEST® is a fast-moving, COMPUTER moderated, play by mail game. About every 15 days, we'll run the instructions you've sent us, along with those of the other players in your game, through our computer. We will return a printout to you which will tell you what happened to your aspiring empire that turn.

Our fees are $6 initial setup (per game), and $1.50 per turn. For more information, send $2.50 for a copy of the Rule Book; or if you want us to start you in a game right away, send $15 ($6 setup and $9 for the first 6 turns). We'll include a copy of the Rulebook FREE with your first game request.

We look forward to having you join us in PELLIC QUEST®, the game of galactic conquest!

CONFLICT INTERACTION ASSOCIATES
P.O. BOX 504
PRAIRIE VIEW, ILLINOIS 60069

For details of how to play PELLIC QUEST® in the UK, send an SAE to:
Chris Harvey, 11 Woodside Way, Aldridge, Walsall, West Midlands.
In Traveller, you are a person adventuring into the great unknown. A few simple die-rolls generate your personal character, complete with prior experience and several skills, a current cash balance, and perhaps a personal weapon. Quickly, you and your comrades plan out your journey, and you are off to the stars, winning fame, fortune and honour.

Traveller is a role-playing game of science fiction adventure in the far future. Set in an era where starships are common, but the communication time-lag makes for many frontiers and unexplored areas, the game becomes a campaign setting for all conceivable adventures.

MAYDAY is a supplement to Traveller covering starship to starship combat as a hexgrid. While Traveller provides the basic rules, mayday provides those rules to a hex map, and then provides 12 die-cut counters for a variety of ships and their armament. The various starship maps, which are detailed in the previous rulebook, allows accelerations to astronomical speeds, while the combat system provides for a complete resolution of attacks and evasive manoeuvres. All in a flip top plastic bag.

1001 CHARACTERS is a complete 48 page booklet of pre-generated characters intended for use by the referee during the course of Traveller adventures. Separate sections cover each of the 6 character service arms, with additional sections covering simple thugs, cops and soldiers.

Each character is listed with characteristics, age, cash, and skills and is ready to use immediately.

mercenary is the newest rules book in the popular Traveller universe. Mercenary concerns itself in detail with the recruiting, training, equipping and use of individuals, combat units and weapons systems within the Traveller framework. This 56 page book was written by Frank Chadwick and is complete with illustrations and charts.

Also in Stock

D&D Miscellany

Greyhawk Map (D&D Supplement I) (TSR)... £3.40

Blackmoor (D&D Supplement I) (TSR)... £3.40

Edith Wharton (D&D Supplement III) (TSR)... £3.40

Goths, Druids & Harpies Suppliment IV (TSR)... £3.40

Swords & Scrolls (TSR)... £4.40

Dungeons & Dragons (TSR)... £7.50

Outdoor Geographies (TSR)... £4.50

Monstrous Creatures (TSR)... £4.50

Monsters in Treasure Sets (TSR)... £4.50

Dungeons of the World 1: Russia (TSR)... £4.50

MAYDAY is an add-on to Traveller covering starship to starship combat as a hexgrid. While Traveller provides the basic rules, mayday provides those rules to a hex map, and then provides 12 die-cut counters for a variety of ships and their armament. The various starship maps, which are detailed in the previous rulebook, allows accelerations to astronomical speeds, while the combat system provides for a complete resolution of attacks and evasive manoeuvres. All in a flip top plastic bag.

1001 CHARACTERS is a complete 48 page booklet of pre-generated characters intended for use by the referee during the course of Traveller adventures. Separate sections cover each of the 6 character service arms, with additional sections covering simple thugs, cops and soldiers.

Each character is listed with characteristics, age, cash, and skills and is ready to use immediately.

mercenary is the newest rules book in the popular Traveller universe. Mercenary concerns itself in detail with the recruiting, training, equipping and use of individuals, combat units and weapons systems within the Traveller framework. This 56 page book was written by Frank Chadwick and is complete with illustrations and charts.
WE’VE BEEN EXPECTING YOU

Illusion generation? Another unknown mutation? It is your “welcome” to GAMMA WORLD, science fantasy role playing in the grand tradition of DUNGEONS & DRAGONS®. GAMMA WORLD places you on a post-atomic earth. Can you survive in a world of radiation deserts? Berserk robots and weird mutants? As a human or human mutant or even intelligent animal you have a strange inheritance and terrifying adventures ahead . . . GAMMA WORLD is a complete game for three or more adult players. The colorful game box contains rules, a playing map of the devastated continent, and a set of five polyhedra dice.

TSR IS PROUD TO PRESENT THE ULTIMATE GAME OF SCIENCE FANTASY ROLE PLAYING AT BETTER HOBBY, GAME, BOOK, AND DEPARTMENT STORES EVERYWHERE. GET YOUR COPY OF GAMMA WORLD TODAY!

TSR HOBBIES, INC. -- THE GAME WIZARDS
P.O. BOX 756, LAKE GENEVA, WISCONSIN 53147, U.S.A.